"No," replied Mr. Sweezey, shortly.

Mr. Slaight: "Did you hear or know of any such procedure?"

"No."

Mr. Slaight: "Then, on Nov. 30, 1929, at the time of the signing and delivery of the contract, did you see Mr. Alfred Maguire?"—Mr. Sweezey "I don't recall seeing him specially. I suppose I did if I was present at the commission meeting. As far as I know he was present."

Mr. Slaight: "Did you see Mr. Cooke, whom I shall call the government Hydro Commissioner?"—"I don't recall seeing him. I remember Mr. Magrath and various others being there."

Mr. Slaight: "Can you recall any occasions when you talked with Mr. Maguire?"

"No, except casual conversations or communication on paper."

"In connection with the discussions over the contract in Toronto, you were here frequently?"—"Yes."

"And had various formal and informal conversations?"—"Yes."

"Well, then," continued Mr. Slaight "when talking to Mr. Maguire personally or informally, did you meet Mr. Maguire?"—"I don't recall in any sense. I always talked with the chairman or Mr. Gaby," witness replied.

Mr. Slaight then shifted to another phase of the investigation, demanding to know if Mr. Sweezey knew a man named George Kurdyck. Mr. Sweezey acknowledged that he had some dealings with him.

Mr. Slaight: "Perhaps you recall meeting him in Ottawa about a month ago, business interests. When was that?" "That was about a year ago."

Mr. Slaight: "When did you first have relations with him?"

"Oh, I have known him for some years, and have financed him on several occasions," Sweezey replied.

Deliberate Falsehood

Mr. Slaight: "Now, on one occasion in Ottawa, in 1929, did you say to Kurdyck that Ferguson had just struck me up for $325,000?"

"Did he say to you, 'My God, you must be crazy throwing money away like that. You must be a millionaire?'"

"That is pure imagination."

"Did you then explain to Kurdyck that you were not throwing the money away, because you were getting a contract out of it bringing you several millions a year?"

"I tell you, he has produced an entirely imaginary conversation, and I know why," Mr. Sweezey retorted.

"He is suing you, isn't he?"

"Yes, he is suing me now, and that's imaginary, too. The statements you attribute to him and myself are falsehood, malicious and intentional falsehood."

"Did you tell Mr. Rob know George Hyde?"

"Yes, he is an associate of Kurdyck's."

"Do you recall when he was married?"

"Yes, but not the exact date. I remember meeting him, and him telling me he had been married that day."

"Where did you meet him?"

"At the King Edward Hotel."

"Had he come to see a sum of money from you in connection with a mining deal? About $10,000?"

"No, I never paid him that much money at any other time. I help ed him financially in a smaller way on several occasions, but he is absolutely absurd to suggest I handed him such sums to him."

"Was he not seeking a sum from you, and did you not tell him you would not let him have the money because you had to pay Ferguson $325,000?"—Mr. Slaight persisted.

"That is another piece of malicious falsehood and stupid imagination," witness declared. "It would become from a man like Hyde. It is quite untrue."

"Well, do you know Thomas R. Dodd, Kurdyck's partner?"

"Not that I can recall."

"Do you know Robert Dodd?"

"Yes," witness replied, and added: "Oh, you don't mean Dixon. You mean T. R. Dickinson. Yes, I financed him and Dodd in the matter of a newspaper out west."

WANTS POUND AT LOW LEVEL

Chamberlain Desires to See Rise of Wholesale Prices in Britain

London, May 10 (UP)—Chancellor of Exchequer Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons last night that he does not desire the pound sterling at a lower figure than its present level ($3.68½) on the foreign exchanges.

Chamberlain's statement was made in response to questions demands that he disclose the Government's objective monetary policy.

"The Government desires to see the rise of wholesale prices in Britain, and, also, the rise in the cost of living at the rise in retail prices," the chancellor said. "I am convinced the pound sterling, which has fluctuated during recent years on the gold stands'd. Par is $4.86.

"It is because it is clear that, if industries by a rise in wholesale prices could once more make profits, there would be a tendency back to the conditions desired by all."

Chamberlain said he could not be more precise at present because there was always the possibility of unforeseen factors arising to increased doubt as to whether a lower bank rate would achieve a lowering of the pound sterling over drafts.

It was recalled that the Government recently indicated it would be some months before any effort would be made to stabilize the pound sterling.

MILITIA AIR GROUP TO BE ESTABLISHED

18 FLIERS

Plan For New Defense Branch in Formative Stage

Toronto, May 10— Toronto is shortly to have the distinction of possessing the first militia air force unit in Canada, Hon. D. M. Sutherland, Minister of National Defence, told members of the Canadian Army Service Corps at the annual banquet in the Royal York Hotel last night.

The minister was commenting on the fine militia force in Toronto when he made the remark that a splendid force would be made even finer by the addition of a squadron in the Queen City of a militia air force unit. The announcement was greeted with loud applause from the military audience.

"It will be the first branch of its kind in Canada," said Col. Sutherland. "A number of enthusiastic flying officers have been anxious for some time past to see a militia air force for Toronto and it will soon be an accomplished fact. It will round out the Toronto garrison which is one of the best in Canada.

From a prominent official of the Toronto Flying Club, executive members of which have been in touch with the situation in regard to the proposed formation of an air force militia, it was learned that one squadron of 18 fliers will be established here and in other large cities in Canada. In small centres, flights, groups one-third the size of a battalion will be established.

Members of the flying club who are eligible for the unit will be given special training at Trenton or else the officers of the R.C.A.F. will train them here, it was learned. Nothing more than organization of the scheme is expected this year.

The establishment of the militia units is understood to have been hastened by Premier Bennett's visit to England, where he was familiarized with the details of the system. This is believed to have been taken into consideration when the personnel of the R.C.A.F.—was substantially reduced.

Hon. Mr. Sutherland said the unit was purely in the formative stage and details were not completed. He revealed that he had spent the day in Toronto conferring with those interested in the proposed air force militia here. He did not expect an announcement would be made in the matter. No comment regarding the force and could not say how soon, the details would be available.

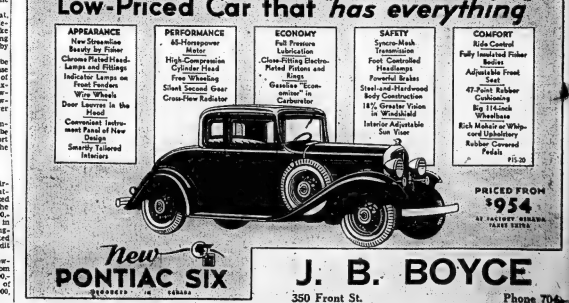
Toronto Aviator Plans Solo Trip

New York, May 10—The Daily News says Douglas L. Erroll Boyd, Canadian transatlantic flier, will attempt a solo flight to Rome about May 20, with a refueling stop at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

Captain Boyd has selected for the flight the seven-year-old monoplane Columbia in which he set flight in October, 1930, to the Scilly Islands, with Lieut. Harry O. Connor as navigator.



The Canadian flier plans to represent Canada at the Royal Italian Aero Club's celebration on transatlantic aviators, May 23 to 30, says the Daily News.

He will land at Harbor Grace to refuel and check his course. With weather conditions favorable he will cut an airlane across the Atlantic to the coast of Spain.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

He had a party every year, on his birthday. Sally came, of course. On his eleventh birthday he tremendously thrilling thing happened that night; perhaps that held have to fight Sally. They played that game where you bow to the girl you've asked to be your partner and kiss the one you love best. Lennox, red flags flying in his cheeks, ran body and soul into the black velvet the sash and face collar of Mrs. Ernestus' unlucrious hero bent his dark head and his knee to Mary Morgan and, advancing timidly, kissed her dryly, briefly, a little smackingly, upon her smooth, unblushing cheek. Louisa. Sheldon, who had been hovering just beyond the circle of children with a look of waiting in her eyes, opened her arms for Lennox and turned away. That was the last time that they gathered in Mrs. Ernestus' parlor for a party.

When Lennox had outgrown the small private school, he entered a larger one, also in Hartford, and went to live with a boarding school. Sally was at Miss Fred, Van Alystine and the latest births were sent. She said that she preferred to have him with her, at the age to which a growing boy most needs the home influence. Of course, people said openly, it was not to be expected that she would part from the boy so soon after his father's death.

Sheldon had settled that Lennox was to go through Harvard. Louisa had said nothing at the time. It was shortly after the child's birth that she had always had other plans. She would have them carried out in any case, but George might have proven difficult. George's death was untimely, of course, particularly, as regarded the upbringing of the boy, especially financially. Being a good woman, she never admitted this, even to herself.

Colleen! Four years away from her? And not alone the physical absence, but the severing of the spiritual ties, the fraying of the threads, to wound her, the mental paths he would travel, upon which her love's feet might not tread.

To Henrietta Van Dusen, Louisa spoke casually, when the subject arose between them.

"There is no occasion for it. It is not as if Lennox wished to follow a profession. He will conduct his father's business. When he is of age he will enter the office and train under Mr. Simmons. In the import business no college education is necessary. He will have proper schooling and travel. Especially travel."

After Sheldon's death his widow spent her summers in Europe with the boy. Lennox grew to know London and Paris, the Italian cities, the French coast, as a child may not know Washington Square and Central Park. People remarked them often on the steamers, in the foreign towns, the tall, straight-backed woman, the small, immaculately dressed boy trotting along beside her, listening quietly while she directed his attention to objects of beauty or history, or read him paragraphs from a guide book.

Those growing years of Lennox Sheldon's. How full of little memorable pictures—memorable pictures as clean cut and conventional as stereopticon views, as colored postcards—moonlight on the Bay of Naples, starlight on the Parthenon, London Tower and Windsor Castle, a church in Florence, St. Peters and the pigeons, sunshine in the gardens at Versailles.

And always his mother, close beside him, casting her infinite shadow; always the remembered sound of her voice, reading from the guide book, from some selected novel; always the sense of calm, brooding wings folded about him.

As Lennox grew older his mother rarely touched him, wit h her hands. Only morning and night. Then, always the same. Her hand on his arm, drawing him nearer; her searching look into his eyes, her other hand passed swiftly over his head from brow to crown, the firm quick pressure of her thin lips on his cheek. "Good morning, Lennox". "Good night, my boy".

Yet sometimes he would wake and know that she was in his room.

If he spoke to her, sleepily, out of his dreamless unconsciousness, the answer was always the same. "Hush, go to sleep. Good night."

Then he would see her move to the door. Sometimes she carried a flickering candle. Sometimes the little flame of the night light would dimly search her out. Then the door would close, softly.

But he knew other nights when Sally held him closely that he could not lift his heavy lids nor frame his tongue to a question. Yet he knew that she was there. She bent over him, moved by her own hungry on his face. Or perhaps she would sit on the low slipper-chair beside the bed, her hands in her lap—a long time, a long time. He knew it. Yet he could not wake. Through the cpaplty caverns, she moved, quietly, without haste, she moved surely, looking for him.

Upon such nights, his sleep was troubled, dreams came, dreams of great birds, their wings silent and smoothered.

In the morning he thought he had dreamed her too. Sunlight came, there would be honey for breakfast, he would meet his mother's cool eyes, feel her hand touch him lightly, hear her voice pronounce the quiet greeting which her bend her head, saying grace. Then, after prayer, came school.

The best of wind down the city streets, the fear lest he be late.

His life seemed so without start-ing events that introduced into the amazing importance. There was the day he flew his new kite, the one shaped to a crimson dragon, and the day he was struck with a baseball bat by Jim Hoyt. Sally Morgan came home bleeding terribly yet so proud that he had not cried. He was twelve then, too old for tears. And there was the day in Central Park when he skated in the Casino. He loved skating; he had silver wings upon his heels, wings like those of the marble Mercury on the first stair landing at home, and these wings he flew. He flew with a delicious sense of peril, for there was the rang sweetly under his feet. There was danger, there was delight. And he was himself, every muscle obeyed him—he was supple, he skated like a man. Then air was crystal to breathe, the sky a sheet of unbroken blue, the statuesque posturing against it, stiffly black as forgotten.

He left watching the other people. The bearded, muffled men, the bundled little children which pretty women sat, furred and bonneted, their cheeks pink, their eyes laughing. And there were little boys and girls to fall him admiringly. He skated better than any of them. He taught Sally to go her skates on for her, he guided her first frightened steps, he put his arm about her when her safe above the ignominy of a fall.

SCHOOL DAYS ARRIVE

Lennox dreamt. Girls should have pretty little faces, soft gray eyes under a cloud of golden hair; girls should have warm, small fingers and dimples to the left of pink, upcurling mouths..... Sally Lennox.

You can drive yourself with words. The boy, curled up in a low leather chair in the shadow of a corner of the library, had discovered this dangerous magic. His keen eyes under lined the letters as his eyes followed them. His undetermined mouth formed them silently. "My heart aches and a drowsy numbness pain

My sense, as though of hemlock I had drunk."

"Lennox Sheldon, is your hair brushed? Stand up, do. You will ruin your eyes. Hurry, the carriage is waiting."

Church time. He rose, tall, angular, his shoulders stooped under the weight of fourteen bewildering years. One hand endeavored to order his rebellious crest. His blue eyes fled appealingly about the room. cool room; his sharply cut nostrils drew in, gratefully, the old, familiar scents of books, of leather.

Louisa Sheldon turned him about with a practised hand. She dusted him off with an air of studied casualness, cast a look of scornful disapproval at the fat volume of Keats picked it up and shut it decurately into its appointed gap in the shelf. She said, with sudden cool room: his sharply cut nostrils drew in, gratefully, the old, familiar scents of books, of leather.

Louisa Sheldon turned him about with a practised hand. She dusted him off with an air of studied casualness, cast a look of scornful disapproval at the fat volume of Keats picked it up and shut it decurately into its appointed gap in the shelf. She said, with sudden severity, "You could employ your Sunday mornings better, Lennox."

He murmured, "Yes, ma'am," mechanically. He felt a little dazed, dragged abruptly from the singing twilight of his poet, out into the hot sunlight of a Sunday in May.

The carriage was at the door the boys tossing their heads. Thomas the footman. Henshaw, the coachman, were erect upon the box. As man, were erect upon the box. As the door opened and their mistress appeared Thomas was galvanized into action. Mr. Sheldon came down the steps slowly, her prayer-book in one lightly gloved hand. Lennox trailed wearily behind her. "Metropolitan Museum," she ordered, unnecessarily.

They drove off, toward Seventh Avenue.

Louisa sat upright. Once she said, sharply, "Don't slouch so, Lennox." And Lennox pulled himself into a more conventional posture. He was sleepy, dreary from too much late breakfast, dreary from his hour over the Keats.

They had arrived. Lennox marked his mother inclining her head to this or that person. He snatched off his hat, in a panic lest he appear belated in courtesy. A vision in robin's egg blue hailed him as they entered the doors. Sally Morgan whispered. "You're coming to supper."

Her curls danced from under the ridiculous, tilted hat. Her eyes were veiled by demurest lashes. Something troubled his breast, and suddenly the sunlight was amazing. He blinked at the abrupt transition as he followed his mother into the dark caves of the church. An organ swelled from pleading into command. There was organ light.

His head bowed, he sat beside his mother while she prayed. The church was full of restless sounds the scraping of men's shoes, the rustle of women's dresses. The tall man in the pulpit was speaking. What was he saying, so confidently?

His mother thought dimly....God? In this church? In all the churches? His thoughts swung away to Sally Morgan. They would have Sunday supper with the Morgans tonight. His mother had said nothing to him, she never did, in church, but when the time came, "Come, Lennox" or "Go, my son." He wondered, with a little spurt of amusement, what she would say, how look. If he ventured to make, to carry out a plan on his own account. What was she praying about His stole a look at her. Her strong profile was carved from tinted stone. Her thin lips moved.

Sally. God in His House. Lennox's thoughts swung between the two.

The church was crowded. It was very warm. Lennox could smell the odor of clean humanity, of soap and violet sachet, rice powder and cake Cologne, of Russian leather, of skin—Sally's thought him of the stuffy smell, yet it was cool to the touch. As they stood up to sing his alien length almost matched his mother's. Each one held a side of the hymn book.

Louisa was aware of the boy's nearness. She could feel his breath upon her cheek and a shudder shook her, her hands trembled on the page. This sentient being, this being of infinite possibilities who sang a hymn in God's praise in an uncertain voice, was hers. She had created him.....

Later, the congregation billowed uneasily in the sleeves, gentlemen uncomfortable in frock coats, ladies poured into prtinoss sowns, children sitting quietly, calling to one another. The carriages were lined up, shiningly imposing. Louisa's progress to her own was halted often. People spoke kindly to Lennox. He answered, a little at random with his air, attractive smile. He was looking for Sally, but she had gone.

Reaching home, he disappeared into the library. His mother would go to her room now and rest before dinner. He was familiar with her routine. She would sit by her window now, in the Boston rocker which he knew she had brought with her from her father's house. She would put her booted feet on a hassock and read in her Bible, or perhaps a chapter of Browning. And she would peruse a little.

At the library door, she said, pro-foundingly, "You have at least day in which to read poetry, Lennox."

But he did not read. He stood for a long time at the windows which gave on the street. Presently people go by. The stiff lace of the curtain fretted his face, a look of hair fell forward into his eyes. Over the house silence brooded, almost tangible. Cousin Hendrina had been in her room, nursing a headache, since breakfast. His mother sat in her rocker, reading. He was alone, shut in, shut out. He stood at the window, watching life pass by.

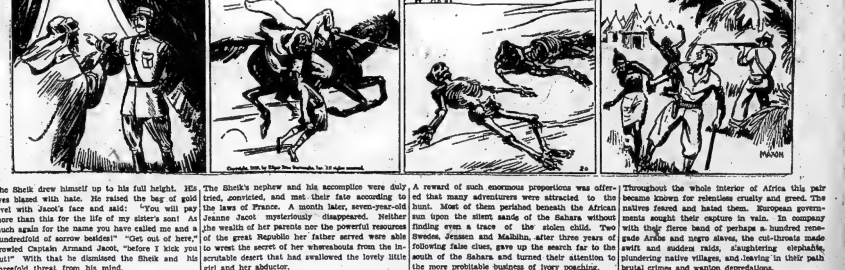
TILLIE THE TOILER

BRINGING UP FATHER

—By George McManus.



MR. & MRS.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 20.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The Sheik drew himself up to his full height. His eyes blazed with hate. He raised the bag of gold level with Jacot's face and said: "You will pay more than this for the life of my sister's son! As much again for the name you have called me and a hundredfold of sorrow healdes!" "Get out of here," growled Captain Armand Jacot, "before I kick you out!" With that he dismissed the Sheik and his threefold threat from his mind.

The Sheik's nephew and his accomplice were duly tried, convicted, and met their fate according to the laws of France. A month later, seven-year-old Jeanne Jacot mysteriously disappeared. Neither the wealth of her parents nor the powerful resources of the great Republic her father served were able to wrest the secret of her whereabouts from the inscrutable desert that had swallowed the lovely little girl and her abductor.

A reward of such enormous proportions was offered that many adventurers were attracted to the hunt. Most of them perished beneath the African sun upon the silent sands of the Sahara without finding even a trace of the stolen child. Two Swedes, Jensson and Malkins, after three years of following false clues, gave up the search far to the south of the Sahara and turned their attention to the more profitable business of ivory poaching.

Throughout the whole interior of Africa this pair became known for relentless cruelty and greed. The natives feared and hated them. European governments sought their capture in vain. In company with their fierce band of perhaps a hundred renegade Arabs and negro slaves, the cut-throats made swift and sudden raids, slaughtering elephants, plundering native villages, and leaving in their path brutal crimes and wanton depredations.

ROBERT MONTGOMERT
IN HIGH COMEDY DRAMA

Dressmaker Gifts Twilight

Robert Montgomery has turned porch-climber.

True, he once played a convict in "The Big House," but, even at that, his fans hardly expected this. However, he does it, and elicits many laughs thereby, in "—But the Flesh is Weak", his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture at the Belle Tonight and Wednesday, matinee daily.

He doesn't want to burglarize anything but love, however, so he climbs hanging ivy to a lady's window s in Mr. Shakespeare's house. The only trouble is—the ivy won't hold and Bob is left up in the air.

The complications grow fast and furious when a Russian prince comes on the scene as a claimant for the wrong girl's hand. But the wrong girl has the right cash book and our hero had a line of it.

Jack Conway, who directed "Arsene Lupin" and "Polly", directed the new picture, with a prominent cast. Nils Asther, famous Swedish screen hero, returns with his newly mastered English vocabulary. Nora Gregor, former Max Reinhardt stage heroine in Vienna, and Hester Thaxter, distinguished London stage star, play the principal feminine roles. Edward Everett Horton contributes comedy and C. Aubrey Smith and Frederick Kerr play principal character roles.

Vivid glimpses of London's gambling casinos, of the play haunts of society in the British capital, and dramatic and comical adventures at the races, in Berkley Square and other famous haunts abound in the comedy of love and other complications.

Laurel-Hardy Comedy

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are appearing in "The Chimp," a very funny and original comedy of circus life, the popular comedy duo's news reel will be exhibited on the same program.

Cliff McCormick and Harold Barrett will introduce a clever harmony offering at both the matinee and evening performances on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dressmaker Tonight

Each lady attending the Belle tonight will be presented with a useful and desired Rose Dressmaker gift with the compliments of the Belle management.

At The Capitol

"LENA RIVERS" BY
MARY J. HOLMES

Mary J. Holmes' immortal novel, "Lena Rivers," one of the best known and widely read romances ever written by an American, has been transferred to the screen with Charlotte Henry in the name role. It is scheduled for presentation at the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

The touching and tender narrative of a young girl, born under the stigma of illegitimacy, has appealed to the heart of several generations of American readers, and is still being sold in quantities that make "best sellers" fade in comparison. Conservative estimates indicate that over thirty millions have read Mrs. Holmes' classic since it was published, and its universal appeal of the story is certain to keep it alive long after the so-called popular writers of today have been forgotten.

The vitality of the story, and the place that it occupies as a staple of this country's fiction, can best be appreciated by the fact that the demand for it from the leading mail order houses considerably surpasses that of any work of fiction. "Lena Rivers" popularity exceeds that of any others of Mrs. Holmes' novels —such as "Edith Lyle's Secret," "Darkness and Daylight" and "Tempest and Sunshine"—each of which has numbered millions of readers.

Charlotte Henry, fourteen year-old actress of the stage and screen, creates the name role of "Lena Rivers", and is said to present a portrayal that is a thorough mixture of natural, realistic characterization. Miss Henry is the young girl who leaped to prominence as a thirteen year-old actress in the stage version of "Courage," repeating her success in the film version opposite Leon Janney.

Beryl Mercer "Grammy"

Readers of the immortal story will recall that Grammy is the only friend to whom Lena can turn in her sorrow and grief, although the part is not one of the longest in the play, the sincerity and sympathy with which Mis Mercer invests it, makes it stand out as a brilliant characterization—one that will linger in the memory of many audiences.

"Negro Spirituals

To lovers of music there is nothing that excels the melodious negro "Spirituals" that is provided for and are presented in the proper setting. In "Lena Rivers," musicians have composed two spirituals for Clarence Muse, popular radio and motion picture artist, which Muse considers are the nearest to perfection in modern negro melodies that he has yet sung.

Muse's beautiful baritone voice is particularly adaptable in the negro idiom and he is one of the very few colored singers who have attained recognition both on the screen and the radio. So popular has he become on the Pacific coast it is often necessary for him to go directly from work at the studios to radio stations broadcasting without removing his make-up.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES

Florence Nightingale
HER BIRTHDAY

"In every part of the Empire," says Canadian Red Cross, "cities of supreme value. said Mr. Norman Sommerville, Chairman of the Council and Executive of the Canadian Red Cross Society, "May 12th will be commemorated as British Empire Red Cross Day. It is the birthday of Florence Nightingale who, besides her other invaluable services to her country, inspired the founding of the Red Cross. The seed planted by Florence Nightingale in the mind of Henri Dunant of Geneva, the actual founder of the Red Cross, has grown into a mighty tree with many branches. In addition to the cares given by the Red Cross to the sick and wounded of armies and prisoners of war, the Red Cross, not only in Canada and throughout the Empire, but every-where in the world, has originated and fostered many peace time activities which have proved of great value to humanity.

"Under the Red Cross flag which flew last year over 49 Outpost Hospitals and Nursing Stations in pioneer districts of Canada, 34,000 patients were cared for. Among these were 1,317 babies who first saw the light of day under its kindly ministrations."

Mr. Sommerville spoke of the 397,276 Canadian school children who were active Junior members of the Red Cross in Canada last year. He said that this phase of Red Cross work had proved successful almost beyond the dreams of those who first initiated it 11 years ago. About the middle of last century Florence Nightingale had seen the enormous possibilities of inspiring children to live healthful and unselfish lives. Only two generations passed before her vision was realized. Today the world-wide "Junior Red Cross" is profoundly influencing the habits and thoughts of millions of children of every race, creed and colour.

"Because of all the relief work the Red Cross has had to do our Branches are very busy. Almost like the war days over again," said Mr. Sommerville. "Besides caring for the sick and the helpless many thousands of ex-service men have been helped. Directly or indirectly we have had to do with twenty-four per cent. of the unemployed. We have ourselves lodged and fed over 8,000 homeless ex-service men in various parts of Canada. The National Emergency Fund has enabled us to furnish clothing and other relief to over seventy thousand persons.

"Florence Nightingale served the sick as an army nurse and as an individual. She had no organized body of support. Today the Red Cross is fulfilling her ideals. Not one person but thousands and thousands of men and women in Canada are carrying out, through the Red Cross, the plans she formulated and are making realities out of her visions."

Charge of Conspiracy Against Charles Feigenbaum Delayed

Montreal, Que., May 11 (Can. Press)—Eight men were arrested here today in connection with smuggling silk goods, said to be valued at $1,000,000, into Canada during the last six years. The men will appear before Judge Tetreault in Arraignment Court late today on a charge of conspiracy to bring smuggled goods into Canada to the value of more than $200 during a period extending from July 1926 to the present time.

While the value of the silk alleged to have been smuggled by the men is only placed at over $200 it is understood that federal agents believe the value is between $650,000 and $1,000,000.

Men Arrested.

Another man, who is at present in hospital will be arrested when he recovers, a warrant having been issued.

The arrest of the eight men by federal agents was the result of a recently appointed inspector of the investigation branch of the customs department, caused a postponement of the enquete today when counsel for conspiracy to smuggle against Feigenbaum which had previously been laid.

SEVEN YEARS ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE

Smith Once Styled By Self Bootlegger King

Windsor, Ont., May 11—Seven years in Penitentiary on conviction was the sentence passed today on Cecil Smith by Mr. Justice Rainey, in Ontario Supreme Court, Louis Brooks, his companion, was given a five year term.

SEA BASS TOWS BOAT AND MEN 3 MILES TO SEA

San Pedro, Cal., May 11.—A 256-pound sea bass saved a five foot motorboat containing two men from sailing to sea in intersecting circling course and might have kept paying had it not been for a lighthouse keeper and his tender.

Andrew and Antonio Tutsveo, fishermen, hooked the big fish. Ferning Konklin, lighthouse keeper, watching with binoculars, cast off the boat as the fishermen hung stubbornly to the line.

Konklin speeded his tender in pursuit, but the bass towed the motorboat over the fishing craft. He helped the brothers pull in the bass.

DIVERSE VIEWS ON RADIO PLANS

U. S. Broadcasting Officials Divided in Their Opinions

Washington, May 11 (AP)—Officials of the United States National Association of Broadcasters, expressed himself today as generally in agreement with the Canadian proposal to curtail radio advertising. He was commenting on the recent report tabled in the House of Commons recommending nationalization of radio broadcasting.

"We will watch Canada's plan with great interest," Mr. McGeer said. "I am glad to see that the United States and the Dominion are co-operating so closely. I think the five per cent. idea in regard to advertising on the air is entirely adequate and American program sponsors will be glad to emulate the Canadians in this respect."

Doubts Value

"I doubt whether nation-owned broadcasting system is adopted in Canada, we do not anticipate any ill influence as far as broadcasting in the United States is concerned," he declared. "We doubt that such a plan would be practical in this country and wonder if any government can successfully operate a radio chain by collecting license fees and renting its facilities to advertisers. To allow only five per cent. of 15 minutes to advertising, would kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

"Politicians and the War" (Second Volume) Tells How Irish Settlement Saved Lloyd George From Fatal Voyage — Bonar Law's View of Lloyd George.

(By Tpos. T. Champion Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 11 (Canadian Press Cable)—David Lloyd George, who was then Minister for War, had actually arranged to go with Lord Kitchener to Russia in the ill-fated cruiser Hampshire in 1916.

This is revealed today in the second volume of Lord Beaverbrook's "Politicians and the War." Lloyd George revealed from notes, and from sharing the fate of Kitchener, only by the projected Irish settlement and Prime Minister Asquith's appeal to him to handle the negotiations.

The Tory boss of the Canadian-born peer and newspaper executive, who was the Canadian Government's representative at the front in 1918, is vividly interesting to those who were acquainted with the political crisis of 18 years ago.

Domestic Situation

The domestic political situation, at that time, was as intense as the simultaneous hazard of the war. Lloyd George and Andrew Bonar Law, the Canadian statesman who was later Prime Minister of Britain, gradually saw the opportunity for a drastic change.

Lord Beaverbrook describes Bonar Law, of whom he was a close friend, as a "self-effacing man who under-estimated his own powers and was willing to let the credit for his own actions go to others." true.

Handling Humanity By Carload Paying C.N.R. Says Thornton

Ottawa, May 11.—Handling humanity by the carload is comparable to Canadian railways, Sir Henry Thornton told the railway committee as railways yesterday.

"Handling humanity by the carload? Yes," replied Sir Henry. "The secret is, instead of trains to fill the trains."

Sir Henry said there had been a fair interchange of views between the railway as to rates, excursion points and dates so that there would be no conflict and no competition.

Fisher, in court, declared he had no money and no place to go and wanted to return to Halifax.

Mixed Marriages by Anglican Clergy Valid, Says Bishop

REGULATIONS

Quebec, Que., May 11 (CP) —A marriage solemnized between a member of the Roman Catholic Church and an Anglican by an Anglican clergyman is perfectly valid, according to Bishop Dauth, of Lennoxville, Bishop of Quebec, and Metropolitan of Canada, in the Diocesan Synod.

The Synod debated at length yesterday to the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada to stop this practice, particularly with the question of "mixed marriages."

The Bishop said:

"Whatever regulations the Church may make, it cannot make a marriage her own present in the case of mixed marriages. The Bishop declared "and these regulations have been very prominently broadcast, that it is ought to be made perfectly clear to our own church people that a marriage duly solemnized between a Roman Catholic and a member of the Church of England by one of our own clergy is perfectly valid and cannot be annulled.

That was definitely decided, the Bishop stated, by decision of the Privy Council in 1921 in a case of that nature. Copies of that judgment had been published in the Synod Journal.

HENRY PLEASED ON COAL BONUS

Ontario Inclined to Co-operate in Public Use of Coal

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—"I am very glad to learn the Dominion government is giving a close study to the subject," declared Premier Hepburn, K.C. Henry, of Ontario, in referring to the action of the Federal government in bonusing Nova Scotia coal in order that it might enter the Ontario-Quebec market.

"This province is disposed to co-operate in relation to the public use of fuel from any part of the Dominion where such a course is practicable," he said, "having in mind the cost of the fuel we have been using up to the present.

Ontario's Purchases

"Last year Ontario bought 6,000 or 7,000 tons of Nova Scotia coal, amounting to a portion of the entire coal. This year we would be very pleased to buy it, looking towards the use of Nova Scotia coal as much as possible.

"The assistance suggested by the Dominion government breaks down the difference that has thus far existed between the delivered price of coal from the United States and other parts of Canada."

Non-Stop Voyage by Boat Over 3 Dams to Moira River's Mouth

Claude Quinn, master mariner, conqueror of the turbulent waters of the Moira River, made a non-stop trip in a 24-foot boat from Cannifton, late yesterday afternoon, through three dams, down boiling currents, and landed safely on the river bank at the mouth of the Moira.

Shucks, that wasn't so much," he said as he stepped back and dusted off the spray from the dock.

He was cheered on the journey by scores who stood on the banks and watched him negotiate the rapids.

Like Big Chief Rain-in-the-Face, whose buoyant birch bark canoe successfully negotiated the same length of water one hundred years ago, Quinn, standing erect in the boat, stood in the prow of the punt guiding it through the tortuous swirling channels, and away from sharp-edged rocks which threatened time and again to rip the shaky craft to pieces. Quinn, a veteran of those choppy billows, which was often, he said, as high as his head, steered clear from there.

The canoe did he have to beach the wallowing boat and that was at Coopers dam. Here the currents were strongest, and here the sharp-edged spikes of the old dam. Even this occasion to half forty gallons of the Moira out of the boat, and then pushed off on the last lap. Spectators held their breath and bet among themselves that he wouldn't make it.

"Who bet you couldn't do it?" a friend asked him.

"Bet nothin', I bought the boat in Cannifton some time ago, and that was the way I wanted to bring it to town. So I did."

Ratte and Boullonne were rescued but Emeric Ratte was subsequently recovered but the body of the drowned man is still missing.

Toronto, May 11—A warning that still more drastic cuts in British national expenditures may be necessary was given last night by Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in an address at the annual dinner of the Bankers' Association.

YOUTH SUICIDES AS POLICE ARRIVE

Named as Slayer of The Brother-in-Law's Wife

Wooster, O., May 11.—The suicide of a 19-year-old youth after he was implicated in a murder confession by his brother-in-law, provided a crashing climax early today to an investigation of the slaying of the latter's wife last Sunday.

The accused youth, Harold Young, fired a shotgun charge into his head just as officers arrived at his home here, to learn that his death came less than an hour after Herbert Meeker, Wayne county farmer, named Young as the actual slayer of Meeker's wife.

Sheriff John Parrett of Holmes County said Meeker also implicated himself.

The nude body of Meeker's young wife, Gertrude, was found Monday morning lying in a creek near Millersburg. She had been killed by blows on the head.

FRONT ST. CHUTE COVERING REPAIRED

Habeas Corpus proceedings are expected to be taken at Halifax on behalf of Mrs. Orsino and her son Holmes and Konrad Gessenger, who were arrested in Winnipeg following May Day demonstrations and brought to Halifax by Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

KINGSTON MAN

Kingston, May 11—William McFlugham, 40, is dead after being shot in the head with a rifle bullet, an automatic revolver and his brother, Frederick McIlquham, 38 is under arrest charged with the shooting, which it is alleged, occurred early today following an altercation, Frederick was to appear in police court today. It was during this outcome of the police following a telephone message received to the effect, that there had been a shooting affray. Coroner M. J. Morrison has been notified and will hold an inquest tonight.

When police arrived at the house Mcllquham was dead and it is believed he lived a very short time after the shooting.

"Send a man up here quickly and also a doctor" said a man's voice over the telephone. Two constables responded and shortly afterwards Chief of Police Robinson and another Constable appeared.

The McIlquham brothers lived with their mother, Mrs. Isabella McIlquham in a double house. James McIlquham, another brother, lives in the other half.

When police arrived they were met at the door by James McIlquham who said Frederick had been there, they found William McIlquham lying dead on the floor in the kitchen room.

Police reported that from what they could learn the two brothers had engaged in a fight and the row started because William McIlquham turned on the radio, when he arrived home early this morning.

Frederick McIlquham was found in the house and arrested. He was placed under arrest.

A six barrelled rifle with which the shooting is alleged to have been done was also found. It was empty when handed to the police.

MAN SEVERELY BURNED ON FACE

The actual cause of the short circuit has not as yet been ascertained, but the unfortunate youth was directly in line with the electric flash at the time of the short circuit. Deforge's clothes were completely burned with the result that they fell burning from his body. Besides being badly burned about the face, his bare arms and legs were badly scorched from the result of the electric flames.

Deforge was rushed to the office of Dr. J. J. Robertson, where medical attention was received. Although badly burned it is not expected that any serious damage to the eye will result due to the fact, that electric flash burns do not have the same effect as ordinary fire on the human body. Electric burns of this description penetrate through to the bone and sometime later the pain is quite unbearable.

Bridge Street W.M.S. Meeting

Bridge St. W.M.S. met on May 6th for their monthly meeting.

Mrs. Bisbee presided during the absence of the president and opened the service with the hymn, "O Jesus I have Promised to Serve Thee to the End" and followed with prayer. The minutes of the April meeting were read and adopted and the monthly and quarterly reports of the Prayer user given. Report were also given by the Corresponding, Flower and Temperance Secretaries. Mrs. Robertson, the Auxiliary delegate to the Belleville Presbyterial, recently held in John St. Church, gave a synopsis of the program carried out at the convention.

Mrs. Morgan's group was in charge of the afternoon program, and in the unavoidable absence of Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Bishop requested Miss Simmons, associate leader, to take the chair.

After the hymn, "We've a story to tell to the Nations" had been sung, Mrs. Knight read the 19th Psalm and also an article published some ago in the Christian Herald setting forth the Bible as a store of wisdom and truth. Mrs. McKinnon sang a solo and was listened to with much pleasure. Dr. Waldo Smith of Albert College was the guest speaker and chose as his subject, "The Churches of Europe." He discussed his theme under the following heads: The Russian Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Anglo Catholic Church and European Protestantism.

Dr. Smith said that the anti-religious movement in Russia today, was due to the unchristian character of the orthdox Greek Catholic Church, the State Church of Russia under the Czardom. It was a very wealthy church and had always of education, and of the Czars and was looked upon as the enemy of education, and of the freedom of the working people. There had been no renaissance of the Russian Church such as had taken place in the Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches. More than a thousand years, the creed of this church had remained unchanged, and was entirely out of touch with the needs of the times when the Revolution of 1917-18 took place. From the first the Church was a strong force working against the Bolshevists. In 1921 during severe famine it was asked to help the suffering people from its immense stores of wealth but with no response.

The attitude of the Roman and Protestant Churches toward the people had been different. In the 19th century it was priests who led in the Peasants' Revolt. In the 16th century, during the Reformation and in the 17th century under Puritanism the Church was the side of the common people. In the 18th century, the whole Wesleyan movement was directed more to the needs and rights of the working class.

In 1905 a few of the Russian clergy, ashamed of the evils existing in their church, introduced spiritual preaching and teaching into their churches, but they have been suppressed by the Communists who are avowed atheists, in bringing about better social conditions. They are not permitted to build or support hospitals, or engage in social relief work, for the Communist are afraid that this would help to hold the people to the church and they are determined to capture the masses and blot out religion in Rusia. Dr. Smith thought that it is doubtful if any government can make a hundred million people into atheists.

Dr. Smith spoke of three spiritual movements at work in Europe these days one is known led by Karl Barth, and the mystical and Oxford movements in England, all of them are a search for God.

It is Dr Smith's belief that the Christian people of Europe needed a more sensitive conscience as to the responsibility for masses and slums than we have or this side of the water. It was his experience that Scotland that there were few churches which were not identified with social work in slum areas.

The thanks of the Auxiliary to Dr. Cmith for his most interesting and instructive address was expressed by Miss Simmons and Mesdames F. Deacon and Gallo-way.

At the close of the program the Auxiliary members enjoyed a pleasant social half-hour as guests of the group in charge.

Firm Had Few Expenses On Power Negotiations Millard Says at Probe

Little Basis For Suspicion of Further Hydro Payment, He Admits

CHEQUE ASKED

Slaght Wants to Know Who Got Interest on Beauharnois Bonds

Toronto, May 11. — One man's suspicion that John Aird, Jr., might have received more than $50,000 for his part in the Hydro purchase of the O'Brien Madawaska properties, and a partial history of the Aird's $125,000 Beauharnois bonds since he received them, were included in evidence yesterday at Hon. Justice Orde's Royal Commission probe into certain Hydro transactions.

R. W. Millard, former partner of Aird, stated that he had been given to understand that he and Aird would receive "up to $100,000" on the Madawaska deal and stated that he was "still trying to find out how much Aird had received. He agreed, however, that he had nothing substantial on which to base his belief or hope—that more than $50,000 had been paid by the Hydro other than Chairman Magrath's statement that the Aird, Millard firm would receive $50,000 as a sum up to $75,000 for "time and expenses."

Bonds Exchanged

Taking the stand after C. B. Shepard, accountant for the firm of Thorne, Mulholland, Howson and McPherson, had stated that Aird had received $4,900 interest on the bonds handed to him by the Beauharnois company and had sold $50,000 and exchanged $50,000 worth of them, Millard also revealed that the partners of the Aird, Millard firm had been "cooling" at the completion of the Madawaska deal. He had felt "peeved" at Aird when the latter declined certain information to him and had felt that Aird was not taking him fully into confidence.

Millard declared to the Commissioner that he felt the partners should have received more than the $50,000 acknowledged payment, and added, "I suggest at least there is a possibility it was paid," when His Lordship asked if he believed any other $50,000 had been paid by Hydro. At first, he stated, only a memorandum signed by Magrath was tabled to support his explanation, they were to have received $125,000 which McGrath was to recommend to the Commission, but later been cut to $50,000 fee and $50,000 time and expenses.

Arthur Slaght, K.C., counsel for Opposition critics, pointed out that Ambrose O'Brien of Madawaska ownership, F. A. Oaty, Hydro chief engineer, and F. O. G. Kerry, O'Brien's engineer, all had stated that during the period that John Hydro was negotiating for the Madawaska site, Aird and Millard had contributed no time or expenses. Millard agreed that J. H. Gundy's interests, who had spent about $75,000 on the project, had received nothing from Hydro, although that was the "real" outlay on the proposed power development.

In the early part of yesterday's session Mr. Slaght recounted that on the day Aird received the $125,000 bonds from Beauharnois he had purchased a $3,155 automobile. In the two years following, Aird's bank accounts revealed withdrawals totaling $126,862.37. During the same period his investments in shares and bonds were $60,851, and deposits and cheques received by his bank accounts had totalled $127,000.

Aird Partner Recalled

R. W. Millard, former partner of John Aird, Jr., at the time the engineering-promotion firm of Aird-Millard was pushing a proposal to sell to the Hydro power development at the Madawaska holdings was called to the stand shortly before the noontime adjournment. Mr. Millard testified at the time Mr. Justice Middleton was conducting the inquiry, revealing at that time that the partnership was dissolved after he and Aird had divided the $50,000 Madawaska payment in July, 1929. The partnership began in 1923, he said yesterday.

Examined by commission counsel, Mr. Millard told yesterday of meeting on the Madawaska proposition with Peter White, K.C., and J. C. Kerry, engineer, and recalled that both of them had strongly favored the "higher ups". At one time, he recollected, he had commissioned E. L. Cousins, advisory engineer to the Toronto Harbor Board, to see if F. A. Oaty, chief Hydro engineer, was working on an anxiously awaited report regarding the site.

With Heber Smith, "a friend of Mr. Aird's", he had discussed the plan, proposed at one stage of the negotiations, whereby the Hydro would buy an annual output of power from the Madawaska sites and own the properties at the end of 40 years under an amortization arrangement.

Resuming the stand after the noon adjournment, Millard told Colonel Orde of the Hydro Commission's final decision not to buy Madawaska power but to develop the properties and plants instead. An entry from his 1929 daily journal was read, containing a notation that "J. A. (John Aird) had seen Magrath and was assured would be protected."

In the original discussions of what they should receive by way of compensation, or "protection," the sum of $125,000 was first mentioned, said Millard, consisting of a $75,000 fee plus an "allowance for time and expenses not to exceed $100,000."

"We had spent a great deal of time on the development," Millard observed in explaining the proposed compensation. "We had shown the Hydro the value and possibilities of it perhaps more clearly than they had seen them before, and this led up to their decision to buy it. In addition, O'Brien did not wish to put to one side the feeling there was some obligation to us for what we had done, and we were entitled to go unless we were taken care of.

Fee and Allowance.

"I understood, from Aird and later from Mr. Magrath, that Mr. Magrath was going to recommend payment to us of the $125,000 to his fellow Commissioners," he added after discussion this was changed. The next understanding was "we would get a fee of $50,000 and an allowance for time and expenses not to exceed $50,000 more."

Replying to a question, Millard acknowledged that he had an action pending against Mr. Aird involving $50,000.

"Any one he or I may suppose," interjected commission counsel with a chuckle.

It later developed, however, that the $125,000 referred to in the suit is the sum obtained by Mr. Aird from officials of the Beauharnois Power Corporation represented by George O. Tic in a few well chosen words.

Dr. Routley in opening his address expressed his thanks for being allowed the privilege to speak to the club for the Kiwanis ideals have much in common with the work the Red Cross was trying to foster. "We all realize that these difficult times and the last couple of years have brought home to us the saying, that material things some times vanish" said Dr. Routley, "it is time we took stock for happiness does not consist of what we possess but what we are able to do for our fellowman. He showed the work that has been carried on for the veterans, Dr. Routley stating that 1500 single, homeless veterans have been cared for by the Red Cross during the past year. "This is not the only work the Red Cross is doing," remarked the speaker, "as they have established clinics for research work and demonstration of health projects organized and established special training courses for nurses which have now been taken over by the government, a hospital ship service for rural physicians, so that they might keep up with the times, travelling libraries, public health nutritional and dietician clinics besides supplying quantities of cod liver oil to children to prevent rickets."

Dr. Routley spoke of the Junior Red Cross stating there were 13 million members in the world, 200,000 of which were in Canada and 2500 groups composed of 75,000 members in Ontario, who showed that 3,000 crippled children have been helped by the Red Cross and 24 hospitals in Northern Ontario had need of their 20 patients during the past year.

Dr. Routley Emphasizes Need of Funds to Carry on Plans

Members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday heard an interesting address from Dr. Fred Routley, organizer for the Red Cross for Canada in which period he pled for funds for that society. Dr. Routley is quite conversant with the work of the Red Cross and presents his subject in such a manner that listeners are soon cognizant of the fact that an appeal for funds is being made.

Business of the meeting was only routine except that great enthusiasm is shown by the members in the softball league, which is soon to open. Eddie Shapiro acted the members to get behind the club and boost softball for it was an outlet for recreation, that many of the clubs do not enjoy. Bernard Collins, the president was in the chair, and the speaker was introduced by Cyril Waite, manager of the Dominion Bank and Kiwanian sportsman. Vote of thanks was tendered to George O. Tic in a few well chosen words.

ROOST ROBBERS TAKEN IN TOILS

Trenton Farmer Catches Pair in Act of Robbing Coops

Trenton, May 11 (Special) — Chicken thieves are still continuing to operate around Trenton. On the night of April 4, Mr. Orin Humphrey was aroused from his sleep by strange sounds issuing from his chicken coop. He arose to investigate the noise and found two men engaged in chopping the heads off his hens. They had luckily only started operations when he heard them, so only two were killed. Mr. Humphrey quickly grappled with the thieves but they succeeded in shutting him under cover of darkness. When reporting to the police he was able to give but a meagre description of the culprits, but after quiet investigation Mr. Percy Gregory and Mr. Wm. Beatty were arrested last week and appeared in court to answer the charge. Gregory men pleaded guilty, but due to the absence of the Crown were remanded for sentence until next week.

Four young men appeared in police court to answer charges of drunkenness and on pleading guilty were each fined the usual $10.00 and costs.

Three ladies also appeared to answer the same charge, while one had the additional offence of being in charge of the car while under the influence of liquor. She was given a suspended sentence and fined $100.00 and costs, while the other two were fined the usual $10 and costs.

TOUCHES LIVE WIRE FELLED FROM POLE

Thought Switch Had Been Pulled Out

Ernest Ayling is in the Kingston General Hospital in a serious condition, following an accident at Wilton, when he came in contact with a live wire and fell 30 feet from a pole. Ayling is a lineman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission.

It was thought that the switch had been pulled out and the line dead, but Ayling, when 30 feet up the pole, came in contact with the wire and fell heavily to the ground. He was rushed to the General Hospital and attended by Dr. R. J. Gardner. It was found that his chest was badly hurt and there were other injuries.

NOT MEDICINE BUT DIET CURES DISEASE

Science Finds Regulator in Various Foods

New Orleans, May 11—A cure for celiac disease without a drop of medicine was reported to the American Medical Association today. Diet alone does it.

This disease is one of the pitiful ills of children, causing retarded growth, serious stomach disorders, general weakness, when too long neglected, almost certain death.

Predisposition to relapse has made it difficult to cope with. In announcing the discovery, Dr. Sidney V. Haas of New York City, said there has not been one recurrence.

The new treatment is an example of the rapidly developing science of finding in two or three commonplace articles of food a regulator that enables the body to convert the entire diet into its natural "medicine."

Potash is generally produced in the shape of potassium salts.

TRINITY W.M.S.

MADOC—The Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church held their May meeting at the home of Mrs. George Maybee on Thursday afternoon, May 5th, with a very fair attendance. After the Hymn "Sweet Hour of Prayer" and prayer, the Creed was repeated in unison, and sentence prayers were offered by Mesdames Wickham, Maybee and Dingman for special phases of the work. After the minutes, roll call was answered by scripture using the word "Repent" and called forth a good response. Treasurer's and Committee reports were received, after which Mrs. Maybee, Sr., gave a paper on "The Grace of Stewardship," and Mrs. Wickham on "Judas, the Man Who Might Have Been." A group of readings was given in synopsis on "The Ministry of Prayer." Petition taken by Mrs. Hicks, Intercession by Mrs. Brimacombe, Psalm of Prayer by Mrs. Hamm, Maybee and Dingman for Ashley. A very interesting report of the recent Presbyterial was then given by Mrs. Huffman and Mrs. Frank Dafoe, who was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for their graphic account of the addresses and discussions of the Belleville Presbyterial. A social half-hour followed.

WASTED SYMPATHY

Those who have raised an uproar because of the threatened deportation of Reds from Canada are given a hard nut to crack by the Toronto Spectator. The charge has been made that this action "smacks of Russia" but the Spectator says that this ought to be very welcome to this turbulent folk to have occur in Canada anything that smacked or savoured of Russia. If the system is not pleasing to them they are condemned out of their own mouths, says the Spectator.

The Spectator admitting that deportation is a serious matter, says that anyone who abuses Canadian hospitality in trying to wreck our institutions, is surely of an undesirable class. The Finnish editor of Sudbury has had numerous warnings and does not deserve one iota of sympathy.

Where these people will go to find a congenial spot one does not know. Canada is about the best spot they have found and it is a certainty that the last place they will like to go to is Russia, the mother of their thoughts and ruin. Why should they protest about being sent to the place where they will find their principles in force?

The Spectator assures those who have such great fears over injustice that none will be done these persons of either political leanings because every individual case will be tried before a board.

Canada is good enough for Canadians and will be in no way from precedent to precedent and betterment but it will not be the Red way. Not revolution but evolution is the road by which Canada hopes to see Canada reach its fullest stature.

JOAN OF ARC

The mystery of a character like Joan of Arc whose festival was celebrated on Sunday in France (quietly of course on account of the death of the president) endures for no life story has so thrilled the souls of men and women as that of this peasant girl of Domremy who became the deliverer of France. Science has not yet produced satisfactory explanations of inspirations arising out of the mind, soul, and personality of this remarkable character.

No fiction-maker, no dramatist, could create such a character. Again truth is stranger than fiction. Joan was the daughter of a ploughman and helped her father to feed the cattle, took a share in the domestic life of the home, was handy with the needle and the spinning wheel but knew little or nothing of reading or writing. She testified in her trial that all she knew she had learned from her mother, the Pater, Ave Maria and Credo. Somehow by reasoning about every-thing, she possessed faith in the rule of Providence and in that faith she achieved what no other human being has ever achieved. What has science been able to say of her "voices" which bid her go to assume control of the armies of the Dauphin? She was but a teen age girl of which class so much is heard today but she did an adult's and heroine's work.

Fascinated by scenes of warfare and coming to the coronation scene at Rheims, students of the life of Joan read of her standing at the side of the throne bearing white banner and the long-rusted sword of the Conte do Fierbois. What a scene!

No explanation of psychology has yet been given the mystery of her personality. Much as has been learned through research, science still has untold depths to explore and yet ever and ever again will some one demonstration of the richness of the soul in personal life as in the life of Joan of Arc, while science still lingers in the rear unable to explain. But it does not deny.

This personality is that which has led millions to believe that the voices heard by Joan received were divine and came from heaven and that she was so closely attune with the inner truth and spirit of life that things not to others were to her made clear seen by her in a clear light. That she felt herself the agent and bearer of a divine mission is the only explanation that she gave and that mankind can believe. Faith in the governance of the universe and in the triumph of good is the worthwhile motive in life. Joan's career shows that. If her outer life was remarkable how much more remarkable was the inner life of the Maid of Orleans.

THOSE NUDISTS

Nudists have been much in the news of late and science has met them with itch powder. At Stanford University some one scattered powder on the campus and broke up a nudist sunbath convention.

If the law did not take this step to put an end to these antics there would probably soon develop styles in nudism which would possibly make rapid progress among those not yet among the nudist throng.

"I wish I knew how to make a barrel of money," sighed the Little Man.

"That's easy," replied the Big Man. "Spend a half a barrel of money in advertising and you'll soon have a barrel of money."

BELLEVILLE IS THE BUSINESS CENTRE for a large and prosperous district — city and country folks who have been specially favored with prosperity, a district but lightly touched by the wide-spread disturbances in business and industrial life. Belleville district agricultural sections are the best in the world containing a healthy, happy and generally prosperous population, while Belleville city has been particularly fortunate in having industries which have stood the storm and stress of the world industrial crisis. Belleville is the shopping centre for a large and ever widening area, and this was particularly noticeable last week when the merchants of this city combined in a three-day sale of outstanding values in all lines of seasonable goods. Carefully organized and well carried out the sale aroused the interest and participation of the people in and out of the city, and the merchants spread a feast of splendid values which met the approbation of the host of shoppers from all points of the compass. The basic thought behind the event was the widening of Belleville's shopping area and convincing more people that for their shopping and business centre, that they will be treated well here at all times and made welcome. Belleville has fine stores and various attractions including fine theatres, and besides being an educational centre of great importance. It lacks some things which will be added in time, however, — one example like that popular one at Cobourg where the kiddies can play all day in the sand and everybody can bathe to their hearts content, which is certainly a great attraction. The proposed esplanade would have helped and could have been accomplished had there been the spirit of co-operation between the east and west sides of Front street and the business interests on Bridge street, as shown in the accomplishment of Belleville Days. However, the Parks Board may be relied upon to do their best in making Belleville more beautiful and attractive consequently with the energy the board has to spend and the spirit of progress will do the rest. A community restroom and rest-room centre for out-of-town visitors would also be appreciated. Belleville has been steadily going ahead during the past few years and the spirit of progress and co-operation was strongly in evidence during the Happy Days sale. This is a hopeful augury of a progressive and prosperous civic future in which all for-one and one for all will be the motto, instead of the individual effort and single viewpoints which think only of self and are not a part of the larger and broader civic spirit which makes a community stand apart from the ruck as a bright and shining example of the progressive spirit of the new era which is animating the building up of a greater Canada, the world's youngest and greatest nation. Belleville Happy Days sale will prove to be celebrated again with even greater spirit and enthusiasm when the time rolls around for another celebration.

SHADES OF THE OLD GRAND TRUNK —many memories will be awakened at the gathering of veterans of the Canadian National Railways tonight. Old Timers of many a hard fought battle with storm and severe conditions will be here to talk over the good old times of long ago before the great mountainous steel monsters of today were even thought of, when a train load of passengers or freight might have been pulled down a heavy grade but—over the hill, not on your rusty sandbox. The days of the old wood burner, when a train was and fast time and slow time, in good weather and bad. The tremendous difference between to-day and yesterday. The mechanics will be brought forcibly to mind by the tales of long ago told by veterans of the throttle and ticket punch—and no one will try to peer into the future. For the past, bright, vivid and happy will be revealed in all the bright colors of the magnificence of youth and ambition—fortunate are those who will be guests tonight of the Veterans' Club Canadian National Railways, Belleville Division.

TRIFLING WITH PNEUMONIA IS REAL DANGER

Dangers of Disease Must Not Be Minimized By Patient

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Frontiers of Health.

LOUIS E. BISCH

The dangers of pneumonia must not be minimized nor underrated. Each year it lays low thousands of individuals apparently in the height of health. Its attack is sudden; and while no age is exempt, it is especially fatal to the very young and the very old.

We must not think that we are less apt to "catch" pneumonia during the summer than in spring than during the winter. The germs of pneumonia lill in every month of the year.

Nor does one attack make the patient immune to another. Anybody can have pneumonia several times.

Lastly let it be mentioned that although pneumonia may follow common colds, in the vast majority cases where no cold existed beforehand.

Seasonal changes seem to predispose to pneumonia, more in winter and early spring months and the period of change in the fall and times when temperature is specially prevalent. Steady cold weather shows few cases, generally. Changeableness of temperature and damp weather especially to lower the vitality of the body and permit the germs of pneumonia to find a foothold.

Pneumonia is a germ disease. It is not, mind you, a germ particular germ, however, but by one of several germs, usually called "pneumococcus." Several types of this class have already been isolated. Much scientific investigation has been made which are useful in the study of pneumonia cases. Nevertheless, scientists have not yet discovered everything we want to know about pneumonia.

In a typical case of pneumonia the onset is always sudden. In a rule, there is a chill. Sometimes, but this need not necessarily be true, the patient for a few days before the chill has been feeling out of sorts, the symptoms of a cold in the head. The chill, however, is rather characteristic in that usually it may last from ten to thirty minutes, and immediately after the chill a fever starts.

The temperature rise in pneumonia may be quite high. In a short time it may go to 104 or 105 degrees Fahrenheit. Usually the onset of fever the patient is definitely ill. Possibly even delirium is added.

Headaches may be present. Pain develops in the chest, which is increased when the patient draws in the breath. Coughing and breathing becomes faster and less natural. Sometimes the patient's gums are dialated, because the inflammation produces a toxin or poison accel is filling up the air sacs in the lungs and the passages, and the patient is having trouble, really to get enough oxygen. In fact pneumonia is a cough in pneumonia, of a dry character. After a while the cough becomes more up may be thick and ropey and tinged with blood.

These symptoms usually last for from seven to ten days and then, if the patient is to recover, a most remarkable thing happens. This is the phenomenon known as the "crisis". All at once the temperature drops, and the patient is remarkably better. After that, progress toward recovery may be fairly speedy.

Nevertheless a pneumonia patient who has had a light attack may still recovered, because relapses may occur. Consequently a convalescent should be as carefully managed as in the period of acute illness. Complications in pneumonia may occur in the heart, the brain, in the covering of the lungs known as the "pleura", or elsewhere.

Nevertheless, it is a mistake that a person has pneumonia, no time is one to lose in summoning the doctor. Pneumonia must be treated with, as its management is extremely important.

SNAKES—

When the average young boy comes on a snake, after running themselves on a rock in the woods or when they come across a snake or picks up rocks at it. Some run away and rattles them off the backs of their mothers. Not so two years ago. They know that a snake's tongue has taught them that they are harmless and that they are poisonous snakes. Therefore when Billy Bowen came upon a tangle of them down at the creek back east of the city last vacation day he was not better than to kill them. They had other plans. That day wasn't so very warm and the snakes were sluggish. So they cut some willow switches and with these formed a couple with a circle on the end around the snake's heads and pinned them to the ground by one and tossed them into a haversack.

All the way back to town they were busy with their work of starting a snake farm. There might be a little trouble at times for the reptiles and they meant to keep them in captivity. They had made some inquiries. They knew that it didn't cost much to keep a snake or two and that a dime could be made a day they might realize a handsome profit.

"Where'll we keep them?" asked Billy.

"Let's keep them in the chicken room in our yard except the garage." "Well, that'll do. We'll just put them in the garage until we find a better place," remarked Joe. "Maybe if we took them in the house the folks wouldn't like it. Better leave them out in the garage until we get a box made."

It was almost dark when they reached home and entered the garage. Billy found a wooden box and finally located a packing box. Lining this in the bottom with newspapers, he dumped the snakes in and then they parted. Joe had promised to come over in the morning and help get the box made before dark.

But Billy's father had arisen with the lark and gone to the garage after breakfast, which was early, and proceeded to open the doors to the car. One of the snakes during the night had become tangled in the folds of the paper they were on in the box and had left its skin. The snakes had small overlooked hole which had been in the cardboard. Then they had started perambulating around the floor of the garage. And how they perambulated!

Billy's father had walked into the car, backed it out in the car and was already to enter it when he observed a snake crawling across the floor, and raising their heads at the discovery. Being born and raised in the city he had been had occasion to greet a bevy of full grown snakes, but he was equal to the occasion to greet a bevy of full grown snakes, but he was equal to the occasion by leaving evilly at him, so he didn't stop to investigate. In fact he decided like a lot more men have done in like circumstances, to shriek lasted all the way from the garage to the front door of his house. There he received the explanation from his son who had just arisen.

"Get those snakes out of that garage as far as that, you rat," he yelped. "Kill them!" This upset Billy. He didn't want to kill them. They were good for the garden he remembered. So the next step was to shoo them all into the corner of the garage, pick them up one by one, with two sticks, put them into the box, and then take them out to the field where he had found them.

Worried neighbors in the vicinity who have become alarmed at the number of snakes which have been in to take their appearance in the gardens around about their homes now trend softly up around Bleas Bros.

FISHING—

The Colonel popped in to remark that the fishing up north of the city was going fine and specified trout, he says, are being pulled out of Egan Chute by a pound and a half in weight. To that, he says, However, some put the blame on the rain that he's talking about very trout. "Not so," says he, "grey trout do not mind a very large creeks." It's a matter which will be left for the Dominion to Argue over.

M. S. found a horseshoe a week or so ago in an alley down town. After carefully brushing all the dirt off it and carrying it home, he tacked it over the door of his barn and waited for the good luck which was to follow. It came about three days after. One night after he had put the car in he slammed the door after him, and while he was looking up, the shoe fell down on the top of his head nearly stunning him. The nails he had used were not large enough and the slam of the door had dislodged it.

After the Colonel had popped in to remark that he had caught a trout out again, entered another man who delights to register a good mind-can rest once more peacefully. How the fish really got in that inland pond east of the city is a matter of conjecture. It is said that a couple of years ago, and abandoned after it failed with which to stock it. It stocked most of them out of a nearby creek—they were mud-cat minnows about two inches long. Since then they have done well for they can be seen in the middle of the day with a piece of bread on a hook and a line and you want out of it. Davis is the man who put in the pond and the fish in it and he intends to operate the steam shovel that dug the hole himself. He is spending time with your fish pole and get some of the finny beauties out.

Deseronto—Although the tonsorial parlors in town have decided to observe the legal holidays from May until September, the merchants in town as far as can be learned will not observe these regulations on the next holidays until June. The month of May as a rule is a busy month throughout the district and should be more so this year owing to the lateness of the season.

Little Benny's Knock Book

Benny is learning the art of knocking. One day this week he and a friend of mine put considerable effort of the old newspapers we could find in our cellers and took them down to the junkman in my friend's express wagon. When the junkman gave us 3 cents apiece, and we were sitting on my front steps talking about what we would do with the money, I carelessly remarked that I could get it in our banks and save it. But we were talking about what a grate thing it is to save instead of spending it as fast as you get it and how much fun having any left to either save or spend. Then I told them how the man drove passed ringing his bell, and my friend spoke up and said he'd 3 cents worth with his money and I carelessly did the same with 5 cents to save him the embarrassment of having to offer me some and I didn't have any to offer him some.

Benny's knock at this one example of unselfishness will be quite effective in his sermon.

Probably meaning too much, and the wrapping papers and started the drawing lesson.

SHOPPING BY SIGHT

Mr. Grocer, do you realize the extent to which your shelf and floor space can be made an effective selling medium? You can make it a most effective salesman if you will only give it a chance.

Size up the floor space in front of your counter. Is it just a narrow space for customers to stand while waiting to be served? Is it unfelicitous to walk around a bit and look over the goods displayed on the shelves and throughout the store. It is said that goods well displayed are half sold—and shopping by sight is half the battle sold. Sight sales to the people who come in to buy a few things and then remain to buy many more. Is your floor space arranged to help you to keep the aisles clear and the goods on view.

Many women coming into your store with only a shopping list of the few items they want would buy many additional lines if they could conveniently reach the shelves on which they were neatly displayed in classified groups and view the goods. Some of the items on the list suffested from the wall behind around a bit and look over the goods displayed on the shelves and throughout the store. It is said that goods well displayed are half sold—and shopping by sight is half the battle sold. Sight sales to the people who come in to buy a few things and then remain to buy many more. Many women coming into your store with only a shopping list of the few items they want would buy many additional lines if they could conveniently reach the shelves on which they were neatly displayed in classified groups and view the goods. Some of the items on the list suffested from the wall behind the counter, such as catsup, marmalades, jams, salmon, etc., and smaller cards with prices will be found informative and helpful by many customers who like to help themselves.

Keep your shelves well filled as partly emptied shelves reflect back on you the impression of incomplete stocks. Let your customers see you don't just them full—a package missing shows the goods are moving. Keep your shelves dusted and your tins, bottles and packages in quite as essential in the store as in your own house.

In order that your customers may make their selections easily, give careful consideration to the position of your goods on the shelves. There are some items that move more rapidly than others. Place them where they can be seen.

Shopping by sight is today a very important factor and is so vital that it is worthy of careful study. Many stores have departments carefully studied and are constantly considering the effect of different packagings on the consumer; frequently trying one colour scheme after another—always with the object of compelling them to see at a glance. Place related productstogether—fast moving products at your hand. Goods in glass—where people can see contents. Group colours to give pleasing contrast.

NEXT WEEK—KNOW THE PRODUCTS YOU SELL

Softball Season in Trenton Officially Opened by Mayor

Shamrocks Defeat R.C.A.F. Team 19-4 in Well Contested Game

Trenton, May 11 (Special) —The Trenton Softball League got away to a fine start Monday night when the R.C.A.F. met the Shamrock Athletic Club. The Shamrocks were much superior winning the game by a score of 19-4, but it does not do to make predictions so early in the game, for the R.C.A.F. team is expected by having had little or no practice together and should develop into a strong team; the Shamrocks, a club made up of many former players, have had the advantage of working together.

His Worship Mayor Loki officially opened the season by throwing in the opening ball. Despite the inclement weather a good crowd was in attendance and softball has again proven its popularity in the town.

The field has been changed somewhat and is a big improvement over last year. The new officers and executive are doing some fine work.

The R.C.A.F. was made up of officers and enlisted men and considering can certainly be said about them, they are good losers. In the first inning the game did they lose heart. Morrison, on first, despite his size, showed a paltry fast when needed and also did well at bat. Bonfield, the bat, was the mainstay of the team and was in there working at all times. Lawrence Wray started the game on the mound but gave way to Gobeil in the fourth in an in turn gave way to Winder in the 6th. Winder was perhaps the best pitcher in holding the Shamrocks down at the last.

The Shamrocks started the game with Chapman in the box and he pitched wonderful ball for so early in the season, holding the airmen to no runs during his term; he also hit a home run. Loughlin, then tried his luck in the box, and while he did nicely, the flyers were able to score four runs. The field works smoothly and Doc Crowe and Bert Hall seem to have to step to win out this year, both showing much speed in hitting circuit clouts.

The line up:

Umpires — Plate, Jack Lewis; bases, Claude Purdy.

Scorer — Nolan.

The old standers turned out for the game. These Smith men stick to things: Al Smith is the brown derby in the U.S. and Harry Smith to his back one in Canada. While Harry hasn't entered a team this year he has an active interest in the game and the fact that his boy plays first for the Shamrocks.

Harry has a secret which he soon expects to discard, his derby, and he also has to take his place in the Sons of David or beside the Seven Sundays of Bloomfield. Steve's up to any of you men that need it, try cider vinegar if you don't believe us, ask Harry, he'll show you.

Jimmy Day was also on hand and gave the boys a hand, but said he would lay off the running until they had a chance to harden in it. Jimmy rather got the boys' goat "tied up or not." He had one hockey players ready to quit. So perhaps that's why a certain man was so nice to Jimmy. Perhaps he'll lay off now of 'em.

Gobeil wants the umpires to dress in a vivid red or sky blue pink as he mistook C. Purdy, the base umpire, for a player and tossed the ball to him.

We wonder who gave Slim Burgess the idea that the ball was also around here? The R.C.A.F seem to capture the weaker era as most of the cheering was for the high fliers.

Morrison was offering everything from a straw hat to a case of beer for a hit. Better luck next times, boys.

Mr. Harold "Doc" Crowe, manager of the Continental Life team, extended his team every hour to a banquet held at the Globe Cafe in Belleville last night. Doc says they have had the advantage of spring training, journeying to Belleville, Ont., for the past few weeks, where they were put through their paces by Mr. Morrison.

The cafe was tastefully decorated with the appointments of the day and year safely placed at the head of the banquet table with Mr. Harold, who means to get it this year, also the O.B.A. championship. He is starting up a cup to go to the most valuable players for the season. Mr. Morrison, who has been training the boys, expressed his appreciation for the fine spirit of their success, and his advice was well taken up by the boys as an athletic field but in the game of life. Harold in a few words also expressed his hopes for the coming year and after winning the championship of the Continentals for four years feels that they will be able to keep up their record and will have new additions to his team. He also said that his company was behind the boys in every way and whatever help they could give them would be somewhat saddened by the fact that one of the pitchers, Frank Lampard, had his foot severed yesterday by a piece of iron and will be out of the game for the season.

By the way Doc, don't give the boys too many meals like this if you want to keep them in trim.

HERR MAX PREPARES FOR THE SAILORMAN

Max Schmeling next month makes his first appearance of the year when he takes on Jack Sharkey, the Boston Gob. Max has an inch edge in height over Jack, who measures exactly six feet, but the sailorman will be about ten pounds heavier than the champion when they climb into the ring. James Joy Johnston, the promoter, is counting on another million dollar gate but it's hardly likely the figures will even approach the estimate. The last time Sharkey met Max he failed his chances by fouling the German. This time it is unlikely that a foul will mar the bout. Both fighters will wear abdominal protection and, unless there is a knockout, the fans will see the full fight. When Sharkey recently turned the first, and for the new stadium on Long Island he remarked that he was "digging Schmeling's grave." PERHAPS!

FROM A BUGGY-FULL TO 25,000,000 CIGARS A YEAR

Away back in 1878 Henry Simon of Whitby, Ont., owned a little factory for the manufacture of Cigars.—In a buggy, with as available horse between the shafts, he made the rounds of the small Ontario towns selling his Cigars. So successful was this little enterprise that in 1902 the headquarters were established in Montreal and today the annual capacity is 25,000,000 Cigars a year.

CUBS MAKING RUNAWAY RACE OF NAT. LOOP

Warneke, Young Rookie, Wins Fifth Straight Defeating Giants

SWELL STAFF

Vic Sorrell in American Wins in Near Perfect Game

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Trotting along at a merry pace in front of their closest pursuers today, their great pitching staff mowing down opposing batsmen with relentless efficiency and their hitters pounding the ball, the Chicago Cubs threaten to make a runaway of the National League race.

When young Lon Warneke set the New York Giants down yesterday, 9 to 2, the leaders scored their fourth straight victory over eastern clubs and their fifth in the last six engagements. Unless Rogers Hornsby's men falter soon, they will be a couple up such an advantage it will be able to coast through to the pennant.

Warneke's sensational hurling has been a big factor in the Cubs' formidable staffs in either league. In winning his first five games he has allowed but 14 hits, a full distance, the 23 year old product of Mount Ida, Ark., has given up only nine runs all told. His work has overshadowed that of such veteran mates as Malone, Bush, Smith, Root and Grimes, and has been almost well enough.

The Cubs could find Warneke not for only five hits yesterday, two of which came after two were out in the ninth, and scored their lone tally in the six of the nine innings he was with them. His team-mates smacked three Giant hurlers for 11 safeties, six of which came in the line-up getting at least one. They were helped along by three Giant errors, running the total for McGraw's crew to 21 miscues in 20 games.

The National League and the American League bout saw the Phillies break their losing streak, 6 to 0, behind Ray Benge's effective pitching, while Cincinnati's bats were widely spaced. Rain checked the scheduled activities at Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

American League

Vic Sorrell turned in the day's American League masterpiece when he allowed the Detroit Red Sox only two hits in pitching the Detroit Tigers to a 11-0 victory. Boston Braves Rhyne's two singles knocked Sorrell out of a no-hit bid.

Lefty Grove was almost as effective as the Athletics blanked the Chicago White Sox 8 to 0. The great southpaw allowed six hits but bore down in the pinches when Dykes knocked in four of the winning runs with a home run and a double.

The widness of Waller Stewart and Bump Hadley, who distributed 11 walks between the Yankees beat the St. Louis Browns, 10 to 3 in their delayed opener. Vernon Gomez held the Yanks to seven hits until the fourth win of the year and likely would have had a shutout but for a weak fielding behind him in the fifth, when two runs were scored on their runs.

Cleveland was rained out at Washington.

"V" and Kiwanis Clubs Willing to Sacrifice For Good of Loop

In order to assure the continuation of the Belleville Y.M.C.A.'s soft and hard ball leagues a final meeting for the purpose of organizing for the coming season has been called for Friday night at the Y.M.C.A. The sponsors of the league, the Kiwanis Club and the Y.M.C.A. are willing to give their time and endeavors in order to support this organization but the members' sporting element in Belleville, but if sufficient teams are not represented at the "Y" when the meeting is called at 7.30 p.m. the project will be dropped for 1932.

Considerable expense and labour is involved in the operation of this actively and unless the boys themselves show more promptitude and are at least willing to sacrifice one evening in order to get the league started on its way the officials will certainly conclude there is a falling off of interest in the sport and therefore will take no further action.

PITCHERS TO STRUT STUFF

First Call For Spring Training Has Been Issued By Manager

The annual spring call for baseball players was announced last night by Manager Walter Gerow of the Belleville Intermals, when he announced that the "Nats" spring training period would officially open tonight when the pitchers would gather up their winging arms at the Fair Grounds at 6 p.m.

Manager Gerow is only calling the pitchers out for this evening, but due to the fact, that the diamond is not in fit condition to accommodate the rest of the players. The entire roster of the Nationals will be called to arms on Friday evening, when the first practise will be held at the same hour.

Tonight and tomorrow night only the pitchers will report, and owing to the inclement weather it will be held in the gymnasium of the Y.M.C.A. Manager Gerow announced to the press, that any player considering a try-out with the Nationals this season would be entirely welcome as it is the policy of the club this season to favor young players as far as possible. This is the season for which all local young ball players have been eagerly awaiting and Manager Gerow expects plenty of material to be on hand when the practises start on Friday.

Correct Manners

BRIDAL ATTENDANTS

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

The other evening the question was asked whether the bridal attendants should pay for their gowns. That is a question which has aroused much misunderstanding between a very dear friend and myself. Will sincerely hope you will be able to clear up much confusion in the minds of all concerned.

When I was asked to be the maid-of-honor, I was told that I had the privilege of wearing anything I thought would be appropriate. Later, the bride wanted all the dresses alike and I had a buyer from one of the stores bring them back from New York at her quoted price. All of which was put forth before asking the girls about it.

It was all very embarrassing, as I was not able to pay such a price and at the same time did not like to hurt the bride's feelings by refusing to accept the arrangements. What would you advise in such a case?

Constant Reader.

This is an embarrassing situation, and one that the bride-to-be should never have allowed to happen. True it is that usually the attendants of the bride and the groom buy their own attire for the wedding. As a matter of fact, we have heard of only a few, a very few, brides who bought the outfits for their attendants—very rich brides, and very generous ones.

Perhaps the bride-to-be should have made it very clear about all these things at the beginning. Indecisive way of doing things and of making her plans.

I suggest this now however, since the plans have gone so far, and since the bride is such a dear friend of yours, that you strain every effort to put the thing out of your mind, buy the costume, even if it means a great deal of sacrifice on your part. This is distinctly the kind of circumstances when we must be "good sports"—even if it does pinch and hurt.

SERVICE PLATES

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

I—Will you please explain the use of, service plates? Not long ago I went to a luncheon and a very attractive luncheon and silver service plates were used. I might add that the lady was entertaining a bridge club, and the luncheon was limited to one table. Salads were served and no one it was rather awkward using a salad fork over the service plate. Would it have been in better taste to have had the service plate removed by the maid when she placed the cooled plate, that is what I should have done. Which is correct?

II—When there are two guests of honor at a dinner, are the seats of honor at the right of the hostess and left of the host? And if just two guests are invited is the left the chosen place?

III—Please help with you. With these plans for luncheon, the hostess might have instructed the maid to change the service plate for the finished luncheon plate. Of course the hostess was not entirely to blame. Sometimes hostesses owning silver service plates are loathe to have the maids even under the plates of the main course of either luncheon or dinner. But there is a certain point of service, and usually given an opportunity to learn, which is correct, as you say that it did in this case.

IV—Should the guests of honor be seated at one of the guests of honor are women or men. The woman guest of honor at the right of the host, the second place of honor for a woman guest being the left of the host. If the guest of honor is a man, he is given the seat at the right of the hostess, and if there are two men guests of honor, the older man is given the seat of honor, on the left of the hostess.

Always liked is the frock that relies for trimming on fine tucks. An effective frock in flowered crepe matt in a deep flame color has a camisole top and is matching or contrast with bands of tiny ruffles marking the hipline. The skirt is gored.

Lots of uses this Spring for the short fur jacket with a yoke and a back black galyak with a tripe shoulder capelet with an adjustable collar. The jacket is rather smooth fitting.

Still on the map is the color alliance of brown and white so liked last spring. A tailored suit in dark wear brown flannel has the jacket closing on a double breasted line of same edged with white pique. Pique also makes the overlap notch collar. The oblique closing is becoming increasingly popular.

A work of art is the beat description of a new and beautifully evening frock, moulded to the figure and fret cut on flowing lines. It is done in shadowy gray crepe and the classical decolletage fastens at one shoulder with a gray crepe rose.

Quite exciting is a lovely suit in beige wool. The little jacket has a slipped-in waist and is fastened with buttons, and has very wide revers of orange crepe. Below the waist the jacket has a flaring peplum. The skirt has pleats in a group at the center front.

For FULL-FLAVOURED COFFEE

This Question Must be Answered

WHEN buying coffee, ask yourself this question: Is there ANY air inside the tin or package or can any air get in?

If so — coffee deteriorates, loses flavour.

But — coffee keeps its full flavour indefinitely.

Sweet Revenge, Indeed

By Don H. Wimmer

"You know, Bob, I'm going back to Smithville tomorrow and show that ossified little burg where to get off!"

"You're crazy as a loon, John, if it isn't bedbugs that you've!"

"Just the same, ol' mah, I left Smithville exactly ten years ago with the one fixed determination to make that town pay for the way it snubbed me. Why man, just because my parents were poor and honest, nobody took me seriously. The girls at school laughed at me to my face, and talked about me to my back, just because I didn't have snappy clothes like the other kids and make 'em like it."

John sat up at his destination at five the next evening. Smalltown had not changed much since his passing years. Tom Hoffman had built an addition to his general store, and Bill Jones had a new dairy store blazoned forth in brilliant fronts at the intersection of Main and Second Avenue. Four cottages had been erected in the subdivision promoted by Chance Miller ten years before.

For a moment he forgot the motive of stark revenge which had brought him a fifty dollar an hour to the place of his birth. He was lost in a daze of boyhood memories.

"Why, why, if it ain't ol'd Chance Miller himself. Some grayer," he muttered, "but the same ol' Chance."

He had utterly forgotten the time when the old miser had refused him a rake and told him he was not big enough to work. "You're getting too much already." Funny, but the sight of that incident brought a host of half-forgotten memories racing back into a mind that had been four years in the making, and the worst was the remembrance of Chance Miller's refusal to lend him a dollar.

"Why, why, if it ain't ol'd Chance Miller himself. Some grayer," he muttered, "but the same ol' Chance."

John Hogan! How are you boy? Sure glad to see you. Why, I've been talking about you. They're right proud of you. The way you trimmed the store boys in the big city."

Old Miller stepped over to the car and reached out a hand, gnarled and wrinkled face wreathing into a broad smile.

Bewildered, John grasped the proffered hand warmly, every vestige of revenge gone, and the old man was seated beside him, and they were speeding down Main street, past the cemetery on the hill, the ancestral home of the Millers.

Presently they were acting in the great library, chatting about the old days and the successful events of the years following.

A beautiful young girl entered the room from the hallway, as a tiny bell tinkled from somewhere in the upper halls of the house. "Supper," the evening meal was ready to be served. John rose to his feet in a daze. Wasn't this—

"Virginia, we have an old friend with us tonight; someone you no doubt will remember as one of your schoolmates, John—"

"Why, father, of course I know the famous John Hogan. How are you John?"

The lovely figure swept forward and eagerly grasped the half-extended hand of the thoroughly befuddled man "who was going to show them where to get off."

He hands were white as was his collar, and of a manner and delicacy beyond belief. Her snowy teeth gleamed from the pearly lips that seemed to be naturally red.

He brought himself together with a supreme effort and held the warm, clinging hand of Virginia Miller between both of his, and looked deeply into a pair of sparkling blue eyes beaming with unfeigned pleasure at the contact. His heart pounded violently and his knees felt weak. Just to be near her was ecstasy.

After dinner, a deliriously happy hour for John, the lovely Virginia suggested a stroll through the park, to which the latter cheerfully assented.

"John," she said, "I suppose you remember the night of your graduation? I was proud of you that night. You held yourself straight and looked so stern and dignified. My eyes were misty with pride that night."

"Why Virginia," he spoke her name hesitatingly, reverently, as though it were too sacred to discard grand, "I—I didn't know that you even knew I was alive."

"I was a little bashfull in those pigtail days," she said in a low voice.

The old bitterness in John's heart disappeared and his pulses in wild joy came rushing in and filled it almost to the bursting point.

Two weeks later, as John swung out of his car in front of the ferry-boat building which contained his offices, he came face to face, with his old friend, Robert Jones. He tried to duck, but Bob was too quick and caught him by the arm.

"I say old man, how did you come out?"

"Aw, I didn't come out, Bob. See you later."

"Oh, no, you don't ol' Timer. What's this I see in today's papers about a wedding on Saturday? Who is this Virginia Miller anyway?"

"Aw, go peddle your papers! She was just an old school mate of mine."

N. Y. MARKET SLIGHTLY UP

No Strong Tendency But Trend is Little More Favorable

New York, May 11.—The stock market was again unable to make consistent or notable progress today, but it still showed more inclination to move forward than to slip back.

During the first hour, the list pushed up one or two points but many of the leaders, and lost much of its rise around noon. By early afternoon the market was again creeping forward, with leaders mostly up fractions to more than a point. Subsequent recession early afternoon found gains of one to two points in United Chromium, Sears, Westinghouse, Consolidated Gas, Coca Cola, McKesport, Leh-man and Eastman, while Standards of N. J. and California, American Can, North American and Dupont were up fractionally. U. S. Steel and American Foreign were only about steady. New York Central turned rather heavy, losing a point, and Union Pacific followed it down. United Aircraft sagged a point to a new low.

Cessation of New York Central's dividend, while it had been foreshadowed by deferment of action in the previous quarter, apparently prompted some sales of other carrier issues.

Chancellor Bruening's emphatic statement before the Reichstag that Germany was through with reparations gave additional attention to the international situation, but neither domestic nor foreign markets were notably influenced.

JUMPS OUT OF PATH OF TRAIN

Ottawa Milk Driver's Hop Saves Him From Death

Ottawa, May 11 (CP).—A fast jump was all that saved A. J. Glasser, milk wagon driver, from death today when his wagon was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway train at Bronson Avenue level.

The horses cleared the track safely, but the wagon, travelling 20 miles an hour, struck the rear of the wagon, the impact being so great that it freed the animals.

A second before, Glasser had jumped to safety, escaping without a scratch.

The 600 lbs. of glass, the weight of the wagon and the milk cargo were strewn. Only one wheel of the wagon and an empty milk bottle remained intact on the pavement. Several windows in the Westboro station were broken by flying bottles.

IN MEMORIAM

WESTOVER—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. George Westover, who died May 11th 1931.

One year has passed since that sad day,
God called the one we loved away.
Forget her no, we never will,
For in our hearts she liveth still.
The one we love has lost an idol,
The loss of wife and mother, without farewell.
God took you home, free from earth's cares,
No more to roam, a crown to wear,
Then when 'tis ours, for Heaven to gain.
What rapturous joy to meet again.
—Sadly missed by husband and family.

MANY ATTEND LAST RITES

Funeral of Deceased Post Master Held in Picton Monday

Picton, May 10 (Special). — On Sunday, the services at St. Andrews Presbyterian church were attended by two fraternal bodies. In the morning the Oddfellows attended in a body and in the evening the Orangemen were in attendance.

Rev. S. M. Scott, the pastor, was the preacher at both services and gave eloquent sermons to congregations that taxed the seating capacit There was a splendid attendance of both Orangemen and Oddfellows, and several of the Orange Lodges outside of Picton were represented. The Prince Edward and Hastings Regimental Band led the Orange parade in the evening.

Rev. Mr. Scott took as his subject in the morning, "Windows of Heaven," and in the evening his discourse was on "The Protestant Principle." Special music was given by the choir under the leadership of Mr. M. V. Dow and Mr. and Mrs. Dow contributed a vocal duet in the evening. Mr. James Smith gave a tenor solo at the morning service.

The Oddfellows' service marked the occasion of the 113th anniversary of the founding of the Order.

Mothers' Day

The Mothers' Day Service at the United Church on Sunday morning was especially interesting as the members of the Sunday School attended in a body and the Junior Choir, under the direction of Mr. F. E. Walden, gave a fine anthem. A bouquet of roses was presented to the oldest grandmother present, Mrs. D. Pearsall being favored. There was a very large attendance.

Miss Mary Messon

The funeral took place Monday afternoon in St. Mary Magdalene Church of Miss Mary (Mae) Messon whose death followed a short illness. She was a great worker in the Anglican Church and teacher in the Sunday School. For some years she conducted a flower shop and in early years was in a similar business in the United States. Her brother, Hedley Moxon, survives. Rural Dean Winter conducted the funeral services. Interment was at Glenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Gerrie Buried

Flags were flying at half mast on public buildings in town in honor of the late Robert J. Purtelle who died suddenly on Sunday. He had been postmaster since Sept. 1917, and was a highly respected resident.

The funeral was held this morning at nine o'clock in St. Gregory's R. C. Church of which the deceased was a devoted and faithful member. A very large number attended. Fr. Corrigan and Rev. Fr. Whalen officiated. Interment was in Mount Olivet cemetery. Mourners were his aged mother, his wife to whom he was wedded last summer; one brother Fred Purtelle of Miller; three sisters, Mrs. T. Mahaffy of Belleville, Misses Florence and Maude at home.

Mr. Purtelle suffered a nervous breakdown recently and this was no doubt responsible for his death.

Mr. Purtelle was born in Miller township 56 years ago. He had been school for some years and later conducted a feed and seed store in Picton. He was a very prominent Liberal and Sparrow School representative on the Collegiate Board for some years. He was a good citizen and well liked by all who knew him. His services as postmaster were very satisfactory in every way. Mr. Purtelle's death following closely on that of Bartlett Hoover, has cast a gloom over the town and surrounding.

Dogs to be Kept Tied

Picton council has served notice that it intends enforcing the by-law regarding dogs running at large. Lately there has been complaint about have done damage to flower beds and lawns.

WEST RESOURCEFUL

Picton, May 11—Writing to friends here from Ceylon, Sask., Rev. G. Mulligan says that a new vehicle has come into being in drought areas—the "horse-mobile." Lacking gasoline, farmers have turned back to chasis drawn by horses. "There are no infractions of the speed limit with these vehicles," says Rev. Mr. Mulligan. The wonderful patience of the people is commented on by the pastor, who says that they make their way to church in any old kind of vehicle, coming long distances. One woman of 90 walked twelve miles to a service.

The silver fox ranked first in Canada's fur productions for the 1930-31 season, with 71,816 pelts sold, worth £3,216,217.

VIEWS VARY ON BROADCAST

Mixed Reception to Report Favoring Gov't Control

(By the Canadian Press)

The report of the parliamentary committee on radio broadcasting tabled yesterday in the House of Commons by Hon. Raymond Morel and had a mixed reception by officials of broadcasting companies and others.

Sir John Aird who headed the 1928 Royal Commission on radio broadcasting said the members of the committee should be congratulated for their recommendations which he described as a victory for the Empire and for Canada.

S. W. Aborett, General Manager of the Trans-Canada Broadcasting Company at Toronto said he foresaw difficulties in carrying out the committee's recommendations if available revenue were to be confined to receipts from radio license fees.

Arthur Dupont, Manager of the Montreal La Presse station said no adequate attention had been paid to broadcasting in the French language.

Graham Spry, Chairman of the Canadian Radio League, said "The public has won a triumph." The report if accepted, he said, would make immediately possible Coast to Coast programmes. He approved provision of funds through license fees sonly as a wise measure of economy.

SUN AND SEA LIFE HEALERS

Mr. R. J. Graham Tells Rotary of Life in Bahamas

Dr. Sun and "dat ole debbil sea," are two powerful natural healers for humans whose machinery happens to be working out of time, said Dr. several cylinders required for one hundred per cent. efficiency, adding many a sailor avers that the old devil sea gets every last one eventually who dares to follow its vagaries and make a home on the bounding billow—all of which is just a preliminary to saying that Robert J. Graham has returned from the Bahamas, British West Indies, hitting on all six cylinders and claiming to be one hundred per cent. efficient as the result of the curative effects of Old Doctor Sun and the daily dips in the great and mighty salt water sea. So he told the Rotarians at the regular weekly gathering Monday in the Rose Quinte in giving an interesting account of four months spent down by the equator while Belleville folk were shovelling snow and coal and praying for an early spring.

Bermuda was found the usual interesting place bearing the distinction of permitting no motor cars within its confines, not one dollar but a series of islands shaped like a fish-hook. Water is the boss as a railway, fifteen miles long with operating force of one man, and passenger fee of a shilling, but not much prospect of profit. Many tourists and a new one recently finished with a rate of twenty-five dollars a day and no peanut. Canada had to import drinking water last winter from New York and Boston as it depends upon rain water, there being no drinking water on the island. The rains failed and water had to be imported.

All this and other interesting tales were told by Mr. Graham of his experiences at the Nassau and elsewhere. Nassau's glory as headquarters for the liquor smuggles of the Spanish Main and Rum Row is departing and the whites of warehouse fronts are now warehouses are failing into disuse, the boom period during that profit has declined to a shilling a case which leaves no margin for possible hi-jacking, piracy and the perils of the coast guard protective fleet.

Cocoanut and banana cultivation has fallen largely in line with supply demand and low prices, so that even with labour at 20c. per diem plantation is profitless at twelve shillings a week there is now no profit.

Tomatoes are a big and profitable crop, the plants being placed in holes cut in the limestone filled with rich earth from the Everglades of Florida. Shipments of thirty thousand tomatoes are frequent on Canadian ships.

Lafitte, Bonnett, Morgan and other great pirates of the Spanish Main, renowned in history and fiction, are still real live memories in the B. W. I. and the place is searched for buried pirate treasure, and occasional find. One was made recently of gold pieces (pieces of eight) which yielded three thousand dollars.

Bermuda onions have lost their supremacy to Texas, the Lone Star State, now taking the lead in the onion market with a better and cheaper variety of Bermuda onions than ever. Sponging is also profitless. So that Bermuda's principal crop, tourists is still the chief source of the cross-roads of the Atlantic. In fact tourists is still the mainstay of the principal ports of the British West Indies and the frequent calling of Canadian steamships with tourists is depended upon to keep many a larger population by the inhabitants, hotel keepers, store-keepers and natives generally.

MILLERS PROTEST LOW FLOUR RATE

Toronto Millers Feel Rate From That City Too High

TORONTO, May 11.—(By the Canadian Press)—Local millers have filed a protest with the Dominion Railway Board against a reduction of freight rates on flour from Georgian Bay ports to Montreal and Atlantic sea ports. They are asking proportionate reductions in rail rates to them on flour shipments to local points. A deputation of millers from Toronto and the district is expected to ring on Premier Henry, for assistance.

Rail rate on flour is now fixed as low as 14 to 17 cents per cwt. From Port William to Montreal, against a rail rate from Fort William to Montreal of 19 1-2 to 24 1-2 cents.

United States lines operating out of Buffalo, May 27th will establish a rate of 13 cents for 100 pounds on four and eight pounds packages, Buffalo to Ne w'York for export. The rate, it is pointed out, will have to be met by Canadian lines.

Kingston—As a result of good work carried out by Det. Sergeant Shail Armstrong and Detective Wm. Fitzgerald a large quantity of clothing, alleged to have been stolen in Brockville, has been recovered in Kingston, and Ernest Hawkins, of no fixed abode, who was taken into custody here early last week on a charge of vagrancy and remanded, has been taken to Brockville to answer to a charge of theft.

We ought to have the courage to go out into the world and live according to our beliefs.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Letters to The Editor

Belleville, May 8, 1932

Dear Sir:

In Saturday night's paper I noticed a long article on the front page about a captain of the cadets getting his trusty rifle oiled up to kill a little bear. Whoever wrote that article doesn't know much about bears. It is my personal opinion that any man who would give such a statement about killing bears in the Woods, actually laying a trap for them is no fit person to undertake training in woodcraft to our local cadets. Bears should be protected, not killed; they are harmless, I wish to register a complaint against it. Any real sportsman would agree with me.

—J. M. McG.

Editorial Note—J. M. McG. must have misunderstood the spirit in which the story was written, the writer of which endeavored, to put it in a jocular vein. We may assure J. M. McG. that the reference to taking out a few little pigs to attract the bears so that the hunters might get a potshot at them was intended as a joke and that the Scouts are no being trained to kill bears.

TRAMPS BREAK INTO CRYPTS

In Search of Gems Marauders Desecrate Vault at Smith's Falls

Smith's Falls, May 10—Desecrating a hallowed spot undisturbed for many years, vandals broke into the Chambers vault at St. John's cemetery at the week end, forcing open the thick iron door and tearing from its cement bed a heavy marble slab which topped one of the three crypts in the vault.

It would seem that the intruders were tramps, who hoped to find rings or gems in the crypts which enclose the remains of members of one of the oldest and best known families of Smith's Falls.

Situated at one end of the cemetery, the vault is built of limestone, and the entrance is guarded by steel-iron doors, which were padlocked. The vandals pried off the lock, and the crypts side by side, and occupying most of the space, were seized with irreverent zeal. Slabs of marble more than two inches in thickness. The vandals entered one in which lie the remains of James H. Chambers, who died January 29, 1902.

Intruders Ruthless

Marks showed that a crowbar or other heavy iron instrument had been employed. The intruders broke the thick covering in the centre, and finding nothing else they found a galvanized iron box, and this, too, was ruthlessly attacked, the entire front being torn out. A glass case which had covered the face of the coffin had also been broken through.

Police were unable to discover whether or not any jewelry had been buried in the crypt with the late J. H. Chambers, but were inclined to doubt that such was the case. The search of the vandals had gone to great labor and had been rewarded with disappointment to no avail.

Discovered by Women

The first intimation of the vandalism was given to the police by two women, who, visiting the cemetery, noted that the iron doors of the vault were open. An investigation is being conducted. Police believe the vandalism was committed by tramps, who, finding nothing in the vault, made their way out of town. Until recently a "jungle" had been located near the tracks which border the north end of the cemetery, and wanderers had been using it during the spring and summer months. Recently, however, the "jungle" was cleared out. The Chambers vault stood close to the tracks.

BREAKS BOTH ANKLES WHEN PLANK BREAKS

Tweed, May 10 (Special)—A most unfortunate accident occurred at the Hoyle Mines shortly after five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when Mrs. Baker, who is employed as cook, suffered serious fractures of both legs just above the ankles. It appears that Mrs. Baker in the performance of her duties was hanging out some articles which had just been washed. She walked out on a plank which was elevated about four feet from the ground, to reach the clothes-line. When the plank broke and the unfortunate woman was hurled to the ground. Dr. Ross of Tweed was summoned and after administering first aid and alleviating her suffering rushed her to the hospital at Belleville. It is stated that the serious nature of the injuries may require months to heal.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

He did not think. Now and then, he felt. There was Sally and her blonde hair. Thinking of her was not thought, exactly. She would see her tonight. He wondered if he could hide the Monet. He would not take it to Morgan's without his mother seeing. If he and Sally could sleep off the evening after, maybe she'd read. She might; at close to forty, her mind brushing his cheek would read aloud to her.

It seemed strange, unfair; to him that he could not read aloud as he read in his mind. In his mind, he was unemotional, unsentimental, unabashedly emotional, yet when he spoke, it was murky, it warped, rose and fell along the scale. He was ashamed of his voice.

CHAPTER SIX

Dinner was at one. Cousin Henrietta, red rimmed about the eyes, sat between his mother and himself. There were seven in all, three courses. The man servant stepped softly regarding different dishes with His mother talked, leading the conversation.

"A pity you could not have been with us this morning, Henrietta," thought Lennox, observing her profile. Did it impress you, Lennox?

Lennox looked up from his plate, blushed in the helpless fashion he had when spoken to suddenly and which he hated. He muttered something, and fell to stirring his mashed potato with a fork, watching the yellow chicken-gravy discolor it, until his mother spoke sharply to him. A moment later and she was repeating the essence of the minister's words to Henrietta.

Cousin Henrietta, Lennox realized her, a little embarrassed. Her obvious poverty, her pitcous leanness, her ugliness always disconcerted him. He would have liked her, he thought, really liked her if he had ever had an opportunity to know her. She was like the skeleton of a bird. Her eyes were dulled beads, her sharp chin and nose would meet one day; she picked at her food with an exaggerated delicacy. She was a wraith, unreal, not wholly human.

Yet once, long ago, he remembered he had seen her weeping bitterly. He had been quite small at the time, he had pulled at arms about her and had tried to console her. It was something his mother had said to her—what, he could not recall. Henrietta had hidden in her flat breast .to her frightened, unrevealed heart. He had remained there, a very gallant little boy, terrified at the sound of sobs which shook him as well as her, hating the musty odor of her clothes, the unpleasant fever of her breath. Then his mother had taken him away, had set him apart upon his two small feet, had left him. He had without a word and led him into her room.

She had said nothing to him. he remembered, but her hands had passed lightly, ceaselessly over his little, velvet-clad body, as though erasing from its hot clutch of Henrietta's empty arms.

Much later he had heard his father talking to Henrietta, as if he, too, were trying to comfort her. He had not seen her again until the next morning when she had crept to the breakfast table, looking oddly nervous, her eyes rimmed with red, as they now were. His father had said to him, "Be nice to Cousin Henrietta, Lennox—she has a bad time, poor old thing." Then he'd added something about cold chamber and old maids, which Lennox hadn't understood.

With a start Lennox came back to the present and discovered that his mother was speaking to him. The butler stood beside him with the dessert dish.

He took more of the ice cream than he wished, than he could eat. After dinner Cousin Henrietta scurried up the stairs like the scraggling thing. Louisa had disappeared, she always took a nap at this time. Lennox went to his room, according to the unvarying ritual. There he was expected to sit quietly until half past four o'clock when his mother would come, and he and she would go to her, next door, and she would talk to him about God and poetry and the battle of living and the traditions of his family. She talked to him, in this way, every Sabbath afternoon. She read to him from Scripture and Lesser, from the New Testament. Then they would separate to get ready to go to Morgan's.

How old was his mother? Had she ever been a girl. Did she call his father?

He speculated upon her, tirelessly. He did not wish to, but she cokored, she permeated his mind. She was everywhere, even when he was alone. He had the unformulated thought that she drew him down, absorbed him, that he was nothing, a drop in the infinite ocean of her being.

He did not love her— had not, since the babyhood which had loved everyone. She was too remote for loving, and too close. He did not know what it was that he felt for her. It was, he felt, that he had for his father, still felt for his disturbing memory. He could not measure it with anything, not even his settled affection for Nanna who was still so much a part of his life. He had seen Fred Van Alystyne and his younger brothers with their plump, laughing mother—a mother who drew them to her, pressed them and kisses, quite impartially, who said, "Run along, you bad little things," who sat rocking in a fat chair with a tidy behind her graying head and received kisses and offers to her arms and lap. They clambered on her like puppies and she lifted the arms or smote them lightly, chuckled, and pushed them away.

He tried to be like that, carelessly as if it were of no importance.

Supper at Sally's was fun. A big table, a dozen people talking, laughing. They had hot biscuit and cocoa with whipped cream. Lennox sliced to a curly thinness, potato chips, preserves, and cookies. And Sally sat beside him, amazing, so adult and self-confident, and if you held an antler he seeming decades older. Afterwards when her parents, her grandmother had departed and the guests had gone to the informal upstairs sitting room where they would sit and talk until ten o'clock she followed the others up the stairs to the cozy corner and made him sit down on cushions under a draped tent of Indian cloth which smelled exotic and sweet and sharp. A lamp with pink paper shades, ruffles trying.

Sally put a bed be thought. It she should die in such an attack—would be have killed her? He rubbed his thin hands together. They seemed sticky, he thought, with blood—her blood. He cried out, sobbing. He had no heart, simply that cry grasping for breath. Presently, he slept.

Next door Louisa sat propped up with pillows on her bed. Nanna was with her, making her comfortable for the night. Mrs. Sheldon's ex-hacks, neither rare nor frequent, occasioned quick action but very little real alarm. Nanna, who had come to the house shortly after Lennox's birth, could not remember a time when they hasn't happened. Soon Henrietta, on suddenly, She supposed that her mistress had suffered from them since childhood.

Louisa, in her coolness, could remember the first one, quite clearly. She had not been married long. George Sheldon had been — tiresome. She'd had no privacy, mental or physical. Every time he came into their room it had seemed an intrusion, grave and unnecessary. Emotion of a most unpleasant character had constricted her heart. She had wished him away, removed to an interminable distance. And her first attack had come on during the wedding-trip, an agonizing escape.

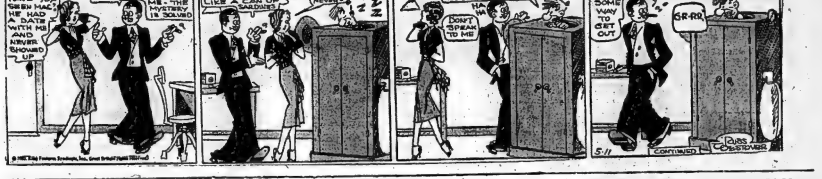
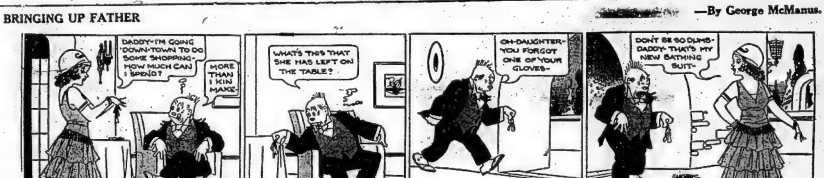
Relief from Backache, Bladder Irritation





Hamilton, Ont.— "Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets have given me the most wonderful relief from backaches and bladder irritation. A few years ago I was in a pitiable condition with my kidneys and bladder when my daughter advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets," said Mrs. Martha Peters of 33 Elle Ave. "I have never taken any medicine in my life so quickly effective just a few doses relieved me of kidney congestion and backaches, and made me feel like an entirely different woman. There is no medicine to equal it."

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 21. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

In the heart of the jungle, hidden away on the banks of an unexplored river, lay a small, heavily palisaded village. Twenty palm-thatched huts sheltered its black population; a half dozen goats skin tents housed a few Arabs who lived here while collecting the carpoes their camel trains bore twice each year to the markets of Timbuktu. Before one of these tents played a little black-haired black-eyed pretty girl, some ten years of age.

With her nut-brown skin and graceful carriage she looked every inch a daughter of the desert. Her little fingers were busily engaged in fashioning a skirt of grass for a grotesque doll made of ivory and wood, quite hideous and soiled, but Meriem thought Geeka (as she had named it) the most adorable thing in the world. On Geeka she lavished all her confidence and love; for everyone else was either indifferent or cruel to little Meriem.

Meriem was the daughter of Jane Clayton, who was known to the natives as Tarzan's mate, and of Paul D'Arnot, a French aviator who had been forced to land his plane in the jungle. Mabunu, the toothless, filthy, ill-tempered old hag who watched over the child, was always inflicting some minor torture upon Meriem. Even more than she feared old Mabunu, she was afraid, with an almost hysterical terror, of the Sheik whom she knew as her father. Always was he scolding her for nothing, often ending his tirades by beating Meriem until she was black and blue. Yet no amount of cruelty seemed to crush the inna's sweetness of her nature.

Left alone, she was always happy and singing, playing with Geeka, decking her hair with wild flowers, or making ropes of grasses. Only when the Sheik was near was Meriem quiet and subdued. She feared too the gloomy jungle surrounding the village, filled with chattering monkeys by day and roaring beasts by night. Yet often she wanted to run away out into the terrible jungle forever rather than longer face the ever present terror of her father.

DISTINGUISHED CAST SEEN IN LUBITSCH'S "BROKEN LULLABY"

Aloof, eldest of the three famous Barrymore kids, another wonderful characterization to a lifetime of distinguished acting with his portrayal as "Brobek Lullaby," Paramount talking picture which comes to the Belle Theatre tomorrow and Friday, starring daily.

"In this story based on the play by Maurice Rostand, famous French playwright and author, Barrymore essays the role of a middle-aged German parent, who, although the war has been past history for a decade, is still a fanatic nationalistic partisan.

Violent in his accusation against the French; he inspires his entire community, a small town in pre-war Germany, to subscribe to his own point of view.

His neighbor, Nancy Carroll, had been the sweetheart of Barrymore's son, a German soldier who was killed in the war. When Phillips Holmes, the French youth who killed him, and has since suffered a perfect remorse, comes to tell of the dead man's last words to Miss Nancy intercepts the errand. Schroeder-Lubitsch tell the father, and sets sure the old gentleman would hit him. Holmes, in the meantime, becomes one of Nancy's entreaties, he refrains from telling them the harrowing story that has preyed on his soul.

"I'm Telling You", a very funny Vanity comedy with a cast of noted funsters, also clever novelette titled "Slim Figuring", and the Belle Sound Newsreel with its latest news events are accompanying the exhibition on the same program.

"LENA RIVERS", FAMOUS NOVEL, POWERFUL SCREEN PLAY

Another famous American classic has at last found its way to the screen. Millions of readers have thrown out the country will hail "Hallmark Productions" talking picture version of "Lena Rivers," the celebrated novel by Mary J Holmes, as a sympathetic and completely satisfying transference into celloid of a star that has won the hearts of generations of this country's readers. As performed by a brilliant cast, and directed by Phil Rosen, "Lena Rivers" lives again and we venture the assertion that it will prove one of the most surcharg pictures of many seasons. By all means see it at the Capitol Theatre.

It seems hardly necessary to give in detail the story of Lena, transplanted from her New England home to a Southern plantation, where she and her grandmother are suffered to live with their aristocratic relatives. When the fiance she displaces and her cousin Caroline, the latter reveals the fact that Lena's mother never married—and Lena's cup of bitterness is filled to overflowing. Through the aid of Henry Graham owner of the adjacent plantation, but victim of Nancy's entreaties, he refrains from telling them the harrowing secret that has preyed on his soul.

"I'm Telling You", a very funny Vanity comedy with a cast of noted funsters, also clever novelette titled "Slim Figuring", and the Belle Sound Newsreel with its latest news events are accompanying the exhibition on the same program.

OBSERVE ARBOR DAY AT TWEED

School Grounds Show Splendid Results of Pupils' Care

TWEED—The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Tweed United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon at three o'clock with the President, Mrs. J. W. Kingston in the chair. At the opening the reports of Mrs. E. B. Cooke and Mrs. H. Grier, delegates to the Presbyterial held a short time ago in Belleville were presented. Mrs. W. E. Turnbull and Mrs. A. H. The proposed softball game between the girls of Tweed Separate School and the Consolidated School in the afternoon did not materialize owing to unsuitable weather.

The pupils of Tweed High School have met with their drill preparatory to their annual inspection which will take place on Friday, May 13th.

Mrs. Harry Grier is visiting relatives in Peterborough having been summoned there owing to the serious illness of a sister.

Mr. Earl Allan, Hamilton, has recently come into the employ of the post week with his brother, Mr. A. E. Allan, druggist, of the local branch of the Royal Bank. He was accompanied by his sister, Miss Nellie Allan, who is attending her studies at Hamilton Normal School.

Mrs. R. A. Hicks accompanied by her sister has gone to Toronto, where she will remain for a short time.

Miss Helena McGee, Toronto, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. McGee.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Wagar and two boys, Gerald and Jack, of Cannington, were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Wagar.

Miss Myrtle Foster, B.A. of Prankford, Continuation School Staff visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Foster on Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Irwin Foster, Toronto spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Wagar.

Mr. Charles Bell, suitably observed at the United Church, A special order of service prepared by the Ontario Religious Education Council furnished the basis for this beautiful and impressive service in accordance with the custom introduced a few years ago. The members of the Sunday School attended the morning Church service.

Mr. W. G. Gordon, Superintendent of the school, conducted the service. He spoke briefly on the origin of Mother's Day and noted that it is generally observed in the United States countries.

The hymns and prayer were appropriate to the occasion. Special mention was made of the Mother's Love is Everywhere", by the children of the Primary and Junior Departments, and the singing of "Mother's Face" by Enid Conner.

Mrs. Gerald Gay and his eight year old son, John, played a violin duet in quite a pleasing way.

Mrs. A. Gerald gave the address on Sir Francis Chantrey, the great English sculptor of a few hundred ago and told of the debt which he owed to his mother.

Rev. E. B. Cooke delivered a short address on the reasons for the observance of the day.

The front of the Church was decked with their drill prepara- ed up then comfortable and snug until next summer, when the sun comes along and drives the insect cozies him into activity. Then he'll get busy, and his fellow moths will hatch and proceed to fly for miles. They're strong fliers and will fly for distances up to thirty miles. When they reach the flying stage they circle about the country seeking out the new fresh corn which is already beginning to form, coinciding with the growth of the moth, and without fuss they make a soft ear of corn still in the milk stage, they proceed to lay their eggs. From the eggs develop little worms, which now called the corn borer. From the eggs hatch little worms which make tunnels like a farm half a mile square, and stored in a cocoon-like robe, apparently ready to be taken back to the young foxes. Farmers can see this after the foxes, determined to put an end to their marauding.

Parasitic Armies Employed to Stem Ravages of Insects

Mr. A. B. Baird Tells Reporter Shows Steps of Progress

INSECT WAR

Canada wants more insects. She wants them so badly that a search is being sent post haste from England to Central Europe by the Federal Department of Agriculture and the Empire Marketing Board, with instructions to capture and send the insects back to Canada.

Recently the Department of Agriculture wrote to the British Parasite Laboratory at Farnham, England, (the central insect parasite breeding and distributing centre for the Empire, whose director, Dr. Edward Thompson, is a Canadian scientist), asking for help in finding combating several severe outbreaks of destructive insects. The request has been revealed by a recent exclusive article forwarded to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer from Farnham Royal, England.

Briefly,

One of these pests is the Spruce Sawfly, which is ravaging the spruce forests of Quebec, and bids fair to destroy all our spruce forests, as the larch-fly destroyed all the larch forests some years ago. The insect enemies of the sawfly are to be sent to Europe and brought to this country by the first boat in October.

While the wheat-stem sawfly has not yet reached such importance in this immediate district, it is one of the western farmer's greatest problems. The pest has spread in Ontario successfully tackled. The laboratory at Farnham Royal, England has already despatched nearly a million parasites to various parts of the Empire, and these, it has received a large share of these, which have saved the country many thousands of dollars in the destruction of the pests. The work in Canada is all conducted by officers of the Dominion Entomological Service, men being especially trained and going to various parts of the country to undertake the difficult mission to the insect.

Corn Borer.

In regard to the recent dissatisfaction shown by residents of Prince Edward County over the threat of the Corn Borer Act, Mr. Baird when questioned by a Post reporter, later stated that if the farmers of the County could only realize the fact that if they would but cut corn stalks just a few inches shorter or higher than they usually do, and have been doing for generations the corn borer would be a thing which would be not only brought under control but stamped out within the course of a very few years. An illuminating insight on the habits of the pest was given by Mr. Baird.

Draws Sketch.

With a pencil Mr. Baird sketched a diagram of a corn stalk. Then he proceeded to lop off the stalk, leaving a standing stubble such as would be left according to one or seven inches high, after the average farmer had cut it off. He tapped the diagram with the pencil. "In that innocent looking bit of stubble lies the danger. That's where you'll find the corn borer — the pest of which you have been so afraid. Now be's ready for the winter. In that bit of remaining stubble he's called up then comfortable and snug until next summer, when the sun comes along and drives the insect cozies him into activity. Then he'll get busy, and his fellow moths will hatch and proceed to fly for miles. They're strong fliers and will fly for distances up to thirty miles. When they reach the flying stage they circle about the country seeking out the new fresh corn which is already beginning to form, coinciding with the growth of the moth, and without fuss they make a soft ear of corn still in the milk stage, they proceed to lay their eggs. From the eggs develop little worms, which now called the corn borer. From the eggs hatch little worms which make tunnels like a farm half a mile square, and stored in a cocoon-like robe, apparently ready to be taken back to the young foxes. Farmers can see this after the foxes, determined to put an end to their marauding.

Suggestion.

It's a constant procession, you see, up and down the stalks, out to the ears, as a young grub corn borer, to the ground level, and overwinter, and finally to the stubble, just far enough from the ground to be cut and leave enough stubble to cover him. The point that if it could be impressed upon the farmers to eradicate the pest than anything else that could be devised. If the farmer would cut that stubble closer to the ground level, and not leave several inches of it standing, then there would be no home for the grub to sleep all winter, there would be no eggs next summer, and from the eggs which would not be laid there would be no moths to fly twenty-five and fifty miles to other fields to repeat the performance."

Close Cut Stubble.

"Then you mean that if the stubble was cut that close the borer would be carried off with the stalks, the stalks would then be put in the silo and the cows, when eating the corn during the winter, would eat the corn borer along with the stalks?"

"Exactly. But, farmers for generations have been in the habit of cutting their corn just so high, in many cases with a sickle or hand reaper, and it will take years to educate them otherwise no matter how much they will benefit from it. It's a point, however, that cannot be overlooked in any way."

Additional Parasites.

"What are your plans for the coming season, Mr. Baird, as applied to the corn borer?"

"Well, we are already well under way for the introduction of additional parasites to the fight across the border. During the week the first shipment of the parasites will be brought from Europe and Japan, as well as China. These will come through the United States from the laboratory at Arlington, Massachusetts. All the work will be done in co-operation with the other governmental agencies, the procedure being exactly be blamed for the spread of this pest. Originally the borer made its appearance some years ago in a shipment of broom straw from Central Europe. The thing was first found out in St. Thomas, Ontario, and, almost simultaneously with this outbreak they were also discovered in two other places on the American side. It is thought that the same shipment was divided here in Canada as part of the first to reach America. The borer was in the cocoon in the straw.

No Danger in Parasites.

"Isn't there any danger of letting loose some new pest flying around which will eat the eggs of the borer? Isn't it possible that they may themselves become a pest to something else?" Not the slightest. That has been carefully gone into. The parasites we will liberate will harm nothing but the borer or its eggs. Danger or anything else will not be touched by them. That is a point to mention, too."

"What is your opinion of this corn borer — do you think the thing will ever be eradicated or can it only be kept under partial control?" "It could be, in the course of a few years stamped out. The farmers themselves could recognize the most advantageous way of treating the pest. As it is we are keeping it fairly well under control, which means constant work. You must remember that the borer had many years start before anything material was done to prevent it, therefore it will take time and patience to eradicate several years of hard work before these parasites can catch up to them."

Peach Moth.

"This peach moth that has been bothering some of the western counties, has it been felt in any extent here in this district?" "There is hardly enough of the pest to make it serious in this district. In Niagara district, however, they are waging a constant war on the pest there in this district, owing to the climatic conditions, but as yet we have no real difficulty except that of the corn borer, which destroys a great deal of corn, however, and unquestionably the effect is felt to a greater extent. There is no commercial production of anything right around here."

"This Belleville laboratory, being the only one of its kind in Canada, is pretty well known all over the continent, is it not?" "We are quite a national and continental reputation. We have been in constant touch with the whole of the Dominion and other countries also.

Forest Pests.

Another thing which has not yet been brought to the attention of the public is the work of the entomologists who have been engaged also in trying to stem some of the pests which have been seen attacking forest and shade trees to this section of the country. Just north of this city we have been carrying on extensive investigations. However it is not serious."

"There is one thing more. A number of Canadians have been bothered with ants attacking the woodwork of their homes. Several of them have written to me about it. Then is this something out of the ordinary in Canada? The only ants which have gained a foothold in this country are the field ants, which don't much you can do except remove the affected wood with new. Soaking the wood in kerosene would help considerably."

MOTHER'S DAY PROGRAM GIVEN

Churches in Madoc Mark Day With Special Services

Mother's Day was fittingly celebrated in Trinity United Church on Sunday last. The programme given on the Sunday School meeting at 2.30 p.m. was followed by one during the services of the day the church was graced by beautiful flowering plants. The Sunday School and pupils were suited to the day and a splendid address, "Mother's Day Wonderful Mother of Mine," was given by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bunting, the text from 1-Sam. 3-10. Dwelling on the fact that this mother was the child Samuel's birth, trained him well, and then gave him to God. The address showed how the influence of a mother lasts through the years of life.

The anthem by the choir was "Mother, Dear Mother, You," the solo being taken by Mrs. Orval White.

The evening service at Trinity United Church, the choir was of Mother's Day programme. The choir music was again a feature of the service. The anthem was "Sweet is to mothers, and the mothers have been requested to occupy the centre seats.

Beginning the service with very impressive prayer, a hymn of familiar hymns, the interest was held by the singing of "The Old Rugged Cross," and after the address "Mother's Day" by the choir. The solo was "Mother o' Mine," Rev. R. Bervan Nelles took the address, "The Wrinkled Face," and from the text, Psalm 103-15, Isaiah 54-13, II Kings 4-19. First showing how the wrinkles enter in the face of illness and trouble. Mr. Nelles dwelt on the wrinkles seen on the face of the mother, and how they are caused by toil, anxiety and care. He pointed out them it is due that we hold her in reverence and love.

Mother's Day solos were given during the evening by Mrs. Bedford and the other by Mrs. Kennedy. During the offertory, Mr. George Mayhew rendered by request, "Mother's Prayer."

The subject for the evening was "Tied to the Mother's Apron Strings," and the musical numbers were an anthem "Story of My Life" (Turner, and a Mother's Day solo of Mr. R. Bedford.

Ascension Day services were held at St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. this evening. The special preacher for the morning service was Mr. J. Lewis, Rural Dean, of Bonarlaw.

Sunday last was at seven p.m. Rev. P. Gailey Reynolds gave the preaching. The subject was "Is it Well with the Child?" taken from II Kings 4-26, and the text, "They covenanted with me by a sacrifice." Shiloh Matthew 26-15. Strong and true was the message and the impression was driven home that it is possible to walk with God and live in many ways, one of which is by worshipping and uniting our ourselves together at the Holy Table.

State Liquor Sale In U.S. Advocated

Washington, May 11—A "twentieth amendment to the United States constitution to permit the repeal of the 18th Amendment to states so desiring was recommended to the senate finance committee yesterday by John M. Henderson, old State Minister to Sweden.

Permission for Morehead to testify before the group, which has under consideration numerous proposals for repeal and modification of prohibition laws, was asked by the State Department. Previously it had been withheld.

Morehead described himself as "personally dry" and said that "if the question should come up whether we should keep what we've got or go back to the old conditions," he would "vote dry again."

Before the judiciary sub-committee, Minister Morehead explained and analyzed some of the Brett system of liquor control in force in Sweden. He said the system is temperature and sale under strict government control.

PIPE SMOOTH AND RUSTLESS

Main Laid 45 Years Ago Now on Exhibition at Office

Striking proof was exhibited this morning of the remarkably enduring material state of excellence of the water mains throughout the city, when a large piece which was cut off from the main laid 45 years ago yesterday morning was on exhibit in the office of the manager of the water works department. For over forty-five years the main has been in the ground without ever having been uncovered. With the exception of a small thickness of the iron of which the main is composed it has been badly rusted. This is not the case. As can be seen on the piece which has been cut out, the protective covering of tar which had been painted on it before it was laid is practically still covers it. There is no trace of rust under the paint. Inside the pipe the surface is also smooth and rustless. Countless millions of gallons of water have passed through the main at that point during the first half of the last many years so, but they have left no trace of deterioration or even thinning of the iron walls. This should successful demonstrate to the public the value of laying the mains are wearing out, the fallacy of the statement propounded by Mr. E. T. Austin, manager of the department.

Three hours after the cutting machine had been delivered on the pipe laying gang had been tapped and the pipe ready to insert. No trouble was experienced by the man except that the pressure of the water was very high indeed and was commented on by Mr. G. Townsend who was sent from the Toronto water department with the machine to help the local employees.

Accounting of Lines Had Been in Chaotic State, He Says

STATE OF LINES

Conditions Inheritance From The Earlier Administrations

Ottawa, May 12 (By The Canadian Press) — A total of $372,800 has been paid to G. A. Gaston by the Canadian National Railways since 1923, Sir Henry Thornton, President of the system, told the House of Commons Railways and Shipping Committee here today. This was in answer to a question put by Peter McGibbon, (Conn. Muskoka), who demanded an explanation of the amount.

"A member of the committee suggested that Mr. Gaston's salary had been $50,000 a year, to which had been added $12,000 a year for two years as receiver for the Grand Trunk Pacific. "This latter post he was holding in 1931, when his services were dispensed with by the C.N.R.. The $62,000 figure was confirmed by Hon. J. L. Manion, Minister of Railways.

Assembling

Sir Henry replied that shortly after he came to Canada, he called in consultation with the Minister of Railways, that the accounting of the lines was in a lamentable state. "There were about 150 mortgages, all with different rates of interest, governing different parts of the system, with different trustees, rules and different conditions. Some were guaranteed by the provinces, some by the Dominion.

Old Mortgage Liens

A number of these mortgages were liens on the railway properties for a few hundred miles, after which they became second liens. These conditions were an inheritance from the previous administrations of the Grand Trunk, the MacKenzie and previous administrations of the Grand Trunk and the MacKenzie and Mann roads.

The entire situation represented the most difficult mass of financial documents that ever confronted any business enterprise, Sir Henry said. With a view to straightening things out it had been thought wise for the directors and the government to employ some one to assist them for some time to the investigation. Sir Henry again emphasized the fact that the railway's finances had fallen at that time.

Catalogued

After mature consideration Mr. Gaston had been employed, and with him it was necessary to employ a large number of clerks and accountants. Eventually after a great deal of work, extending over several years, these matters were all catalogued, so that the railways now knew where they were.

When it was completed the railways, management undertook to prepare what the financial structure for the C.N.R. which was eventually presented to the Minister, but no action had yet been taken on it. In April 1931 the C.N.R. had dispensed with Mr. Gaston's services.

To Dr. McGibbon, Sir Henry said no member of the railway staff was competent to carry out this work. The entire affair had been carefully examined and the procedure adopted was considered the best that could be found.

As to the objection against employing a United States firm for this purpose, Sir Henry recalled that as many railway men and railroaders in Canada, Americans had been called in to render services.

The body was taken from the Pantheon, where it had been guarded after elaborate funeral ceremonies, through a city his widow, their one remaining son and other members of his family followed in procession moved to Vaugirard Cemetery where there was a brief burial service.

Prince Attends

Le Bourget, France, May 12.—The Prince of Wales, who attended President Doumer's funeral this morning, took off for London in an aeroplane this afternoon. The French army planes escorted his flight.

PARIS, May 12.—(AP)—France bowed in sorrow today and paid a last tribute at the funeral of Paul Doumer, the venerable, white-bearded President, who killed by a call "Putier". M. Doumer was slain while in which with a 10-foot pole. There was only one bullet and it killed an hour.

Tens of thousands of Parisians thronged the streets this morning and stood in solemn silence as the funeral procession tryed by on its way to the great Cathedral of Notre Dame.

Double, as such a funeral as Paris had not seen since the beloved "Papa" Joffre, hero of the Marne, was buried in 1931.

King and Princes

A king and four princes trudged behind the rumbling artillery caissons all the way from the Elysee Palace to the Cathedral. A march of an hour and a half in the warm, damp morning.

At the Cathedral the Requiem Mass was read by Cardinal Verdier, Archbishop of Paris, who was a boy at school with Doumer, over his flaming red cassock. The Nuncio of Pope Pius XI, Monsignor Maglione, officiated at the service money from the Archiepiscopal treasury. Army bands played the Fields!" at the elevation.

The body remained there the Presidential Palace 2 1-2 minutes before 3 a.m. and began the journey to the Pantheon.

Million in Throng

Well over 1,000,000 people thronged the streets and squares to watch the procession pass, many pressing against the serried ranks of Poilus, clad in their horizon blue, who stretched all the way from the palace.

At the Pantheon, on the very "Mountain of Sainte Genevieve", the body was received by the Abbe which repose the Nation's illustrious dead. Premier Andre Tardieu, who succeeded, described the dead President as "The Supreme type of Democracy while the army, in which M. Doumer's four sons gave their lives, passed in review and marched past with flags dipped at salute.

The Premier reviewed the late President's three-quarters of a century of life, extolling his services as a Colonial Governor in Indo-China and Algeria, as Senator, as Senate and as chief executive of the Nation.

"He would have rejoiced," the Premier said "in his high consonance that his death was the occasion for showing France as he is indivisible, ready for possible in the face of a danger of every possible energetic reaction".

Warble Songs to Verigin in Jail as Ancient Blondel Did

Blaine Lake, May 12—Recalling perhaps the success said to have followed the vocal exploits of Blondel who sang to King Richard Coeur De Lion while the latter was imprisoned in Austria, Doukhobors from all over Saskatchewan are reported planning to parade to Prince Albert, there to mass forces and, after surrounding the walls of the jail, much like Jericho was surrounded in still more distant days, warble songs of cheer to their leader, Peter Verigin.

Arrangements are being made with the utmost secrecy but details are leaking out regarding the activities of the members of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, who seem confident they can get their chief- tain out of prison.

It is not known if the parade will be in the nude like those recently staged in British Columbia.

ALL FOURS POSITION PROVES EVOLUTION

Discomfort Caused By Upright Posture

New Orleans, La., May 12—Discovery of the cause of backache, commonest discomforts of mankind, was announced today by Dr. Max Ehrmann, of the American Medical Association today.

The discomfort comes because of slight internal pressure, and the era of the theories of evolution enters because the bad effects can be relieved simply by resting on hands and knees the way the fours" quadrupeds claim was once either natural or comfortable. It would be difficult to get Canada to agree to anything.

SPRING SEEDING VERY PROMISING

Though Season is Generally Late, Gov't Reports Today

OTTAWA, May 12.—Throughout Canada, the spring seeding season is generally late. But more promising than for several years, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports today.

In a review of crop prospects across the Dominion, the Bureau says:

"In the Prairie Provinces the season is two to three weeks later than average, but heavy and well-distributed precipitation has resulted in the best germinating conditions since 1928." Conditions are promising in British Columbia.

Lake Lake Going

In Quebec and Eastern Ontario the snow was late in disappearing but clear, warm days in May have encouraged pastures and fall grains. In Southern and Western Ontario the season is further advanced, and the condition of all crops is promising.

According to the intention of farmers as at May 1, an increase of wheat acreage of the Dominion is estimated at 34,311,500 acres, a reduction of 3 per cent., or nearly 1,000,000 acres from the area of 35,344,200 acres sown in 1931. Most of the decrease occurs in the main wheat-growing provinces, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The forecast of farmers' plans in May is many months later. Depending greatly on soil and weather conditions and price prospects.

WEATHER LURES SUN-WORSHIPPERS

Signs That Spring's Uncertain Mood is Past

Today's warm breezes and sunny air lured scores from their homes to the downtown sections of the city. Parks and other places were crowded with the sun worshippers who have waited for cheery beams for some time. BURY SKELETON IN GRAVEYARD

Indian Finder of Skeleton Which Fell From Tree

The discovery of the skeleton in the wood on a farm near Northport on Tuesday last, and which is believed to be that of a man named Nelson Sea, who disappeared from that neighborhood three years ago September, was made by an Indian who chanced to be in a section of the wood not often visited. It is said that the Indian found the skeleton lying upon the ground with a portion of a rope about the neck, several days ago but before he reported the find to Provincial Constable Dumford of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

The authorities feel confident that the skeleton is that of the man named Sea, who had at one time been in charge of a large tree; it is surmised that the body was dropped from the tree. Clothing of the remains rotten and broke.

Further light will be held. The skeleton has been buried in a nearby cemetery.

MEDICAL SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING

The first meeting for the year of the Hastings Prince Edward County Counties medical society was held last evening at the Quinte sanatorium when a banquet was held in the hall of the Hotel Quinte. For the first time in many years in the history of this association meets, the Belleville association carrying on alone during the winter.

Last evening following the dinner the society hear an interesting medical address by Dr. Roscoe Graham, one of Toronto's outstanding physicians, and one of the head physicians at the Toronto General Hospital. He acted that this diary be projected. D. L. McCarthy K.C. reported that he had not been able to get kept a diary. Millard, however, said he had some Aird Mining entries several times in diaries.

Millard was again called to the stand today and questioned by A. McLaughlin, K.C., independent counsel, regarding the Madawaska negotiations.

Making Estimates

In a letter from J. G. O. Kerry, consulting engineer to Millard, the former suggested "our friends" be allowed to make "their own estimates of cost since they would probably be higher than our own."

Millard declared he did not know who "our friends" were, although Mr. Slaght suggested it might be "someone inside Hydro."

His Lordship objected, declaring there was nothing to indicate there was anything in the letter to suggest the "inside" was in the Hydro Commission.

Letters Favorable

In a letter to J. A. O'Brien, Aird stated the report of Fred Oaby, Hydro engineer, would be favorable toward the Madawaska project.

Mr. Slaght asked: "And this inside information?" Mr. Slaght asked.

"I do not know," was the reply. Further correspondence indicated "a member of the Hydro Commission had given the word" the report was favorable but again Millard said he had no knowledge of the commission.

Interviews Magazine

Sir John Aird had an interview with C. Alfred Maguire on his son's behalf, but witness said he did not remember what the result of the meeting was. Mr. Maguire had previously definitely what Sir John had reported.

A letter from Aird, Jr. to O'Brien said "we are now in a position to get our Official and Hydro friends to act," but witness did not know "who the friends" were, except Peter Witte, K.C.

Overpaid

"While I think of it, when you send your partner assigned yourself wires to Mr. White for $2,000, why did you not tell him about having received the $30,000?"

"Simply an oversight," said Millard.

A special account had been opened with Sir $30,000 and no entry had been made in the books of the Aird-Millard firm because he partnership was dissolved when the cheque arrived, said witness.

The Weather

Toronto, May 12—Synopsis — Pressure is relatively low somewhat over the Great Lakes and continues moderately high in the central west while a depression of moderate intensity is centred over the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Light showers have occurred in Western Ontario, Northern Quebec and a few sections of Manitoba while in other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair. Temperature of about 70 degrees is general yesterday in the western provinces.

Fire Inspector—Moderate winds; fair today and Friday with a little higher temperature.

R. W. Millard on Stand in Hydro Probe Tells Why Item Was Omitted

LEGAL CLASH

Millard Touches on Madawaska Negotiations

Toronto, May 12 (By The Canadian Press) — Admission that the $50,000 paid to John Aird, Jr., by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario had been omitted from the income tax returns of Aird and his partner R. W. Millard, was made by Millard on the witness stand before the Royal Commission enquiry into hydro affairs here today.

After a legal clash, Independent counsel, had charged every effort was made by the Hydro and his partner to conceal the payment of the $50,000 Millard said "someone in the Hydro had told Mr. Aird it was not necessary to include the $50,000 in your income tax returns as the money came from the Government, and so we treated it as expense."

As Commissioner

"I suggest Aird told you Hydro had told him the $50,000 would not appear in the Hydro books but would be put down as "commissioners" asked Mr. Slaght.

"That is correct," witness replied.

Cashing of Coupons

Further light was thrown on the cashing of interest coupons of Dominion of Canada bonds given to Aird by the Hydro Power Commission, when three cheques for $1850 were introduced in evidence and identified by bank officials today. Two of these had been cashed by Aird personally, while the third was cashed by Winnifred Green, Toronto.

Shortly before luncheon adjournment, there was a threatened clash between Mr. Justice J. Cyrde, Commissioner, W. E. Tilley, K.C., Commission Counsel, and Mr. Slaght, K. B. Sherard, accountant who audited Aird's books, was on the stand and was being examined by Mr. Tilley.

The latter had asked the accountant if he could in any way identify the ultimate destination of the $1850 cheques received by Aird for the cheques, and if he could say that they were used for political purposes.

The question was entirely unfair said Mr. Tilley, and his Lordship concurred. After brief discussion, Mr. Slaght asked if a search had been made to try to identify counterfoil cashed cheques that had been sought from Ottawa.

Mr. Tilley said everything possible was being sought, but that he received absolutely no assistance from Mr. Slaght. This was incorrect, returned Mr. Slaght, and verbal warfare followed until his Lordship intervened.

Millard again told of the Madawaska negotiations with the Hydro officers with his partner, continuating that Aird was not in the country because he felt Aird was not being frank with him in discussing information.

Entries Quoted

Numerous entries on Millard's diary were quoted, and eventually Mr. Slaght asked if witness had ever seen Aird's diary. Millard replied to the affirmative and witness acted that this diary be projected. D. L. McCarthy K.C. replied that he had not been able to get kept a diary. Millard, however, said he had seen Aird making entries several times in diaries.

Millard was again called to the stand today and questioned by A. McLaughlin, K.C., independent counsel, regarding the Madawaska negotiations.

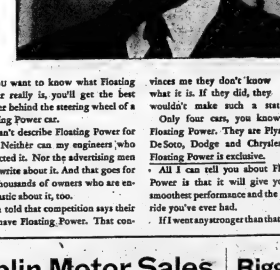
Old Homesteads Again Occupied

(By The Canadian Press)

FRENCH GEORGE, B.C.—Settlers are trekking into the lands between Quesnel and Prince George in increasing numbers this spring, chiefly from the prairie provinces. In some cases abandoned homesteads are being occupied again after many years of neglect. Fertile benches along the Fraser River are being looked over by would-be farms who see promising to move into this section of central British Columbia early this year.

Among the second arrivals this base located on the south side, near the Quesnel-Prince George Highway crossing, is the Fowlie family—Mr. and Mrs. James Fowlie, four grown-up sons and a younger daughter. Two sons came first to spy out the land and a few weeks later the others followed. They made the 1400 mile journey from Ancmidi, Sask., by motor truck with four-wheeled trailer attached, and stored their commodious conveyance, besides the personal belongings and a few farm implements, in a shed. Lodging with them a cow and calf, a heifer, two horses and about one hundred laying hens.



The Fowlies are typical of the families moving into this country. A Vancouver family has returned after five years' absence to find pack rats in complete possession of their own home near here. So they prepared for the remaining cold days in the abandoned dwelling of an elder son whose pre-emption adjoins and which eventually was inherited by the "packrats".

FLOATING POWER

"We Can't Put It In Words

—but we can show you by a ride,"

says Walter P. Chrysler

"CANADA by wave, & filled with Floating Power boosters. The thousands who have enjoyed the exclusive ride of Floating Power Ride have had the thrill of their motoring life. Don't miss that thrill."

Walter P. Chrysler

President, Chrysler Corp. of Canada, Limited

Don't Miss Your Floating Power Ride!

To be up-to-date in motoring matters, you must know about Floating Power. Everybody is talking about it. You will, too, after enjoying a Floating Power Ride.

For a surprise and a thrill, call on any Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge or Chrysler dealer and tell him you want a Floating Power Ride. Or, if you prefer, ride with a friend who owns a Floating Power car. Let the car speak for itself.

If you want to know what Floating Power really is, you'll get the best answer behind the steering wheel of a Floating Power car.

I can't describe Floating Power for you. Neither can my engineers who perfected it. Nor the advertising men who write about it. And that goes for the thousands of owners who are enthusiastic about it, too.

I'm told that competition says their cars have Floating Power. That convinces me they don't know what it is. If they did, they wouldn't make such a statement.

Only four cars, you know, have Floating Power. They are Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler. For Floating Power is exclusive.

All I can tell you about Floating Power is that it will give you the smoothest performance and the easiest ride you've ever had.

If I went any stronger than that, you'd think I had no respect for the truth. I'd rather have you find out for yourself.

Again, I invite you to take a Floating Power Ride this week. It will surprise you. Thrill you as you haven't been thrilled since the day you first drove an automobile.

TOO MANY APPLES

Creston, B.C., May 12—A serious marketing problem faces British Columbia fruit growers this year due to the heavy increase in the crops, according to E. J. Chambers President of the Associated Growers of the Province. Preliminary reports, he said, indicated this year's apple crop would show a gain of a 1,000,000 boxes over 1931. This year, Mr. Chambers added, that's market for 1000 carloads would have to be found outside Western Canada.

THE POWER OF RADIO

Two and a half million letters were received by Rev. Father Charlie E. Coughlin during his 27 week of broadcasting during the winter from persons of all religions, the handling of which required several score of clerks and typists who are still working on replies. His parish contains only 42 families but 10,000 people come to his church on Sunday.

This shows the power of radio and the interest of the people in matters of economics and social import.

It is clear that Father Coughlin has reached the people as few men have been enabled to do.

Such shows the latent power in this new agency of education and indicates how susceptible the people are to appeals from this source. Some such thought must have been in the mind of the advocates of nationalization in Canada whereby the national ideals of Canada as well as entertainment are to be disseminated.

If two and a half millions of people wrote Father Coughlin, many millions more listened to his discourses.

The radio is one of the greatest agencies of the present time for distribution of information and thought, but it requires a powerful personality behind the message for many radio programs are not effective because of lack of personality behind them. There must be combination of science and personality as in this case.

HARD DAYS ON STUDENTS

Just as it was recently shown that many young students are staying in the collegiates and vocational schools throughout the country thanks to the depression which has made jobs scarce and the demand for apprentices anything but good, so it is stated of the students who have been working their way through college, a course made more of necessity to pursue in order to secure an education in the higher institutions of learning.

Now of course good thing has its limitation and today many colleges are banning the practice of students selling magazines and other articles because the faker has come in and created an aroma of doubt and suspicion on the solicitor or salesman. This very prohibition makes it more than ever difficult for the poor man at school to eke out a living in the summer and "make" enough to keep him at college during the coming term.

The New Outlook in its latest issue makes a plea for the college student who has been forced to make his way through school by his own effort. Even the church mission fields have had to reduce and the students are here hampered through lack of opportunity to serve during the holidays and to make a little money.

A MOIRA ADYSSEY

Many tons of water have flowed beneath the bridges in Belleville since the days the Indians were the sole inhabitants and few men have since dared to brave the waters of the Moira and pilot a boat down stream.

It remained for Claude Quinn to bring the feat down, the non-turbulent waters and over the top of dams down the stream into the rivermouth.

Here was something new to Belleville and as they witnessed the unusual sight of the craft making its way down over the dams. Why had nobody tried it before? Because it was not necessary but necessity was the mother of the voyage in this case as the owner of the boat had decided to make a bold move to find some way of getting it to town. The full river and the fact that the dams are not what they used to be made the trip possible.

NOSTRUMS

Nostrums have become a national evil in England according to some newspapers. The New Outlook, the official organ of the United Church remarks that "sometimes one feels like complaining against the stupidity of people seemingly otherwise intelligent who allow themselves to be deceived by the absurd and impossible claims made for nostrums that are not only no good but often quite harmful, but there is some excuse for them, for men and women are incurably curious and very persistently interested in their own physical wellbeing. It really is those who prey upon human weakness and credulity by intriguingly described symptoms and diabolically clever appeals who merit mental scorn. And we oughtn't to hesitate to give it to him on all suitable occasions."

They are expensive the New Outlook says. The money spent on them would keep the Christian church coffers filled to overflowing if it were all turned in that direction. The paper noted, however, that the main harm is not the expenditure but the danger of pathological results of a serious character. The claim of cure-all is condemned as a wicked and very harmful untruth, it claims.

BUILDING TO-MORROW
By Ailsa Michaelis

Tomorrow is the day that waits
For us beyond the dawn,
Beyond morn's pearl and opal gates,
A little way withdrawn.

It bears strange gifts within its hands.
And it will steal away
Some things we love, when to dim lands
It goes, as yesterday.

They tell us none can ever guess
What it will give or take,
For it may bring us loveliness
Or make our hearts to ache.

But, as to-morrow's veil unfolds,
Each man will see at least
The threat or promise which it holds
—He fashioned in the past.

Each one has built through by-gone years
His hidden dreams,
To-morrow, with its hopes or fears;
The day that is to be!

CALIFORNIA, HERE WE COME, is a slogan which should be changed this year to CANADA, HERE WE COME, hence when the first carload of tourists to meet our eyes this season carried a California license we were quite pepped up with the idea that this slogan of ours bids fair to bear fruit.

SEE CANADA FIRST, as Mac Robertson says, there is so much to see in this young country, eh, Mac—that the ordinary lifetime is hardly sufficient within which to see its high points and new attractions. Pinstance this summer we will be able to visit the Barren Lands in a Pullman car and step out of our sleeping car on the banks of James Bay, adjunct of great Hudson Bay, so long ice bound and isolated—Canada's mining camps, and the many lakes, rivers and bays of surpassing loveliness also call. Where in the world is there a fairyland of islands, mysterious and romantic channels and sparkling blue water as the Thousand Islands. Go farther and fare worse. Then again, says Mac, when you decide that an ocean voyage is really the thing to improve your stroke and lessen your handicap, take a Canadian steamship to the British West Indies, where they depend so much upon the tourist trade for prosperity or otherwise, and in this way keep the money circulating within the Empire where the Canadian dollar can raise its head in pride without some Yankee trader trying to knock one or twenty per cent from its buying value, and the British pound is the monarch of all it surveys. BE LOYAL TO CANADA BY TRADE WISELY WITHIN THE EMPIRE—and EAT MORE CHEESE for your health's sake and to boost an industry which brings millions of dollars yearly into Belleville district.

BACK TO THE LAND is the basic thought in an interesting experiment being carried on in the United States. The Red Cross Society took a number of families from the bread lines of a certain city and put them on the land with sufficient acreage to raise enough food for themselves and some over. Instead of being an expense to the community these families have become self-supporting units and are not only comfortably housed—quite a difference from shivering on the bread lines waiting their turn for stale bread and thin soup in the winter. The Red Cross has also a system working for the good of humanity, whether in war or peace, and have implicit faith that the great unselfish majority of mankind who lack no good thing, whose lot has by the grace of God and good fortune been cast in pleasant places, will continue to give of their abundance to help carry on Red Cross work wherever needed. Remember this is Red Cross Week, and do your share.

Many excursions are booked for May 24th are being arranged.

How boats and steamers will appear on the bay in considerable numbers. An evening spent upon the waters of our beautiful Bay of Quinte is certainly most enjoyable. Last evening the singing of the occupants of several boats added greatly to the pleasure of other boating parties and the banjo solo on who played the banjo was certainly an artist. Tonight the moon will be full and if you desire a restful evening get out under it and drift in a skiff upon the bay.

HEARD ON THE STREET
(By Jay. Dee.)

HERE AND THERE—

With cool winds still blowing and lowering clouds hanging over the city, a suspension of spring activities has been apparent. Many of the allotters have been out on the various small patches of vacant land here and there, but there doesn't seem to be the same zip to it as there would be if old Sol had been beaming down and warming things up. Anyhow there's no discouraging us. We can't whip a fast one over from first to third with a cool one, but we can field a grounder without bursting a seam or two in the glove. That's what? So they are just merely talking the ball around for a short time in the back shops. Occasionally they take a little jaunt up to the ball diamond to see the white caps tossing, the gulls flying around and the boats coming in. The ball grounds are out at the fair grounds — out in the wilderness. Now, one might though it would be a good idea to go out to the park and kill time.

Being born and bred in the city, and having lived there all his life "Charge it to the club," growled W. G. who just one foot stuck in the door and one and laughed at the fat back cushions. Somebody who had been watching the one of the paddles tripped him as he started to give it. This settled that argument considerably. But he was powerless after getting the numbers who now packed themselves into the rear of the machine. "Come on," they chorused, "it's a long journey and we want to get there before dark."

In they arrived at the ball park. "Next year," remarks W. G., "we'll be driving out here in style with one of them big pennants dragging behind the machine. What, with all the good officers we have on the team this year, and one thing and another we'll cop the pennant for sure." "Yeah," from one of the group who had his hand covered with the rubber boots and boating equipment. "If they don't cop the pennant first." Who "they" were wasn't explained. He has gone to sleep. The long journey and the jolting motion of the machine had lugged him to slumber.

"All out, boys," came the refreshing call of the taxi driver who had recognized the load. "Let's observing a spotted gull hovering over it — the same gull he had seen last summer after a heavy rain. Other landmarks loomed faintly in the distance; there was a tree over there that Captain W. M. swore he saw some time last summer, too. The gentle lapping of the waves was the only sound to break the silence as they stood on the beach. That and the chattering of teeth from J. M., but he's a speckled trout, I know. "If I ever get over this trip," remarked J. M., "I'll come back next August and go for a good swim but right now I don't like to break the ice."

But the doughty manager, W. G., hadn't come this far to merely stand around and watch the gulls picking up fish out of the water — now that he wanted was action. "Man the hooks, men," he called, "we don't find out if this really is the diamond, or has somebody been fooling us. It gotta catch some of 'em in these bases and see for ourselves did somebody steal any of them over the winter." "Man the life boats men," yelled J. M., "don't point aim." "I've caught lots of flies in the good old summer time, but I don't see any around here, now. Oh, sometimes silly that we came out here merely to see the Toronto Ontario Hs the whitecaps on it? I'm going home." But the call to the ball team roused him, but his face was frozen stiff and he shivered with cold. Some one else looked around and made the amazing discovery that they were overlooking the ball driver had quietly sneaked off while they had been talking and was on his way over to the pitcher's box.

"Play ball," yelled W. G., simply remarked W. G. "I could stand for a little jog around the circle to get the kink out." They were supposed to charge to the club, but when he deliberately threw us here on the ice there is no far away from home, I don't know what to say . . . but I suppose they are something wrong with the guy's head." Indeed they were, for their muscles had begun to thaw under the excitement of finding themselves stranded on the beach, and W. G.'s teeth had stopped chattering. "How can we get back to the home sainly" wailed somebody. "Oh, we'll be rescued shortly, don't worry about it, best we can do now is to run up the fisheries signals on the flag pole," drawled Jay. "We will see and see it. Who's going to volunteer their shirts . . . who's got a while one?" Nobody had a while one so that idea died borning. Anyhow, no one would volunteer to swim over to the mark.

Darkness drew on space. Even the sea gulls had deserted the scene; a kildeer flew by, but that was all. The waves and laughed at the boobs in the woods. "Hey, you, you!" WARD I get the shotgun oiled up for the next fish I see," remarked Ivy. remarked W. G. "I'll put a bagb on the other side of his face — I mean his bill — and then he'll . . . "I'm too cold to speak; if some one would light three fires in the front of a stove," miserably chattered K. C. Irish — . . . they're bells on a sleigh . . . it's a dog sleigh, boys, we're saved!" Sure enough there came the chorus of three, "Saved!" "We'll only have to walk a mile and we can bribe the driver to carry the crews back to the boarding house," pessimist.

Thus it was that three days later the missing party was finally located. A hardy veteran of the trails, with his team of dogs and sleigh had been passing by and heard the melancholy strains of the lost and frozen explorers. For a consideration which was also frozen he agreed to carried the news into town and a truck was finally dispatched to their aid. "Better late than not at all, however," declared K. C. later when reviewing the affair. "I'm not sure for a while though that we were pioneers." "Ha," grunts W. M. "we might's come out on a dog sleigh but we've been stranded on the 24th of May on the Kingston Ponies"!

HIGH SPEED IS EXPENSIVE

Tests at 35 miles an hour and at sixty miles an hour costs three or four times as much as forty miles, says the Automobile Association. The experiments showed that oil consumption at 35 miles per hour is seven times greater than at 35; tire wear is four times as much; brake wear at 40, and gasoline consumption at 35 miles one-fourth greater than at 25. The cost of fuel for the road tests indicated that from 40 to 100 per cent more is required in the city, so the guiding spirits of the local Nationals had to go out to the ball park in the first vehicle which happened to come along.

Constable Bill Lewis was the lucky one to get the job of taking the boys to the ball park in style. "When you're in Rome you've got to do what the Romans do," those machines are all right for gadding about the city in but what you want is a machine that will get you there in a hurry and that's what I'm going to do it in style. Drive behind me boys and I'll show you how fast we want to go. Where's a livery stable till I get some horses? We want to do this thing right." But there wasn't such a livery stable in the city, so the guiding spirits of the local Nationals had to go out to the ball park in the first vehicle which happened to come along.

"Charge it to the club," growled W. G. who just one foot stuck in the door and one and laughed at the fat back cushions. Somebody who had been watching the one of the paddles tripped him as he started to give it. This settled that argument considerably. But he was powerless after getting the numbers who now packed themselves into the rear of the machine. "Come on," they chorused, "it's a long journey and we want to get there before dark."

In they arrived at the ball park. "Next year," remarks W. G., "we'll be driving out here in style with one of them big pennants dragging behind the machine. What, with all the good officers we have on the team this year, and one thing and another we'll cop the pennant for sure." "Yeah," from one of the group who had his hand covered with the rubber boots and boating equipment. "If they don't cop the pennant first." Who "they" were wasn't explained. He has gone to sleep. Fisticuffs Enliven Game Between Reds and Phillies

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The New York Yankees no longer are getting the flamboyant batting that had opposing clubs hanging on the ropes the first fortnight of the campaign, but their pitching suddenly has become a thing of beauty.

In scoring four straight victories over Detroit and St. Louis and setting still after the fiery Washington Senators, Joe McCarthy's current bats more than atoned for a marked falling off in the club's attack.

In four games the quartette of George Pipgras, Charley Ruffing, Vernon Gomez and Young Johnny Allen has allowed only four runs, two of which would have been bettered by snappier support. Pipgras and Allen have performed the outs. Last night a week ago rival manager was saying that the Yanks would be very difficult to handle if they had a pitching staff.

Allen, the rookie from Toronto, who barely was hanging on until he bobbed up with a glittering relief twirling last week, won himself a starting berth which only when he set the Browns down 2 to 0, on five scattered hits. He did not allow a runner past second base.

Offered Real Opposition

Sam Gray offered Allen some real competition for seven innings, yielding but five hits and one unearned run, but the Yankees topped the ace by the between them and the leading Senators to two games. All the other American League teams remained around the Washington, Philadelphia and Boston.

National League

The Brooklyn Dodgers traveled twelve innings to beat out St. Louis 2 to 1, and break a four game losing streak. Their three runs in the 12th inning stirred that the compliment of "Wild Bill" Hallahan. He was credited with the Cardinal southpaw uncorked three wild pitches, tying the league record for that specialty, passed one man and allowed single hits.

Up to that time, the late World Series hero had held his own against the Brooklyn tossers, giving up 8 hits and striking out 8 men. Jim Collins enabled the Cards to carry the fight into extra innings when he smacked his eighth home run in the fourth with Watkins aboard.

Cincinnati fans enjoyed a large afternoon as their Reds made it two out of three over the Phillies, 4 to 1. Not only did "Red" Lucas hold the Phils to five hits and his battery mate, Ernie Lombardie led an assault on two visiting moundsmen, but there were fisticuffs in the bargain.

Leo Durocher, displeased when he was tagged out stealing second, planted a right on the jaw of Dick Bartsell, Phil shortstop. Both were down and Durocher went out.

Yesterday's Stars

Charles (Red) Lucas, Reds—Allowed the Phillies only five hits in scoring the Cincy victory.

Rain has a contributing sub-stantially to the Western farmers' income. The weasel catch alone this year will amount to over $800,000, it is estimated.

Madoc, May 12 By Mail—Monday evening the third game of the series of Church softball League was played between St. John's team and St. Peter's church, with St. Peter's with a score of 15 to 8. The second game was cancelled on account of the rain on Friday evening.

St. Johns—James Watson p; Clinton Nickle c; Jack Avery 1st; Reginald Avery 2nd; Ken Forsythe 3rd; Fred Akey ss; B. Edwards cf; Jas. Reid lf; Cam. Wallbridge rf.

St. Peter's—Clarence Carswell, p; Mak. Scott c; Lloyd Wise 1st; Norman Winylock 2nd; Thos. Rupert, 3rd. Alex. Rupert ss; R. Armstrong lf; Wes. Wright rf; Arthur Brady f.

St. Peter's won 15 to 8.

E. T. Sayler, Umpire.

Madoc public school celebrated Arbor Day on Friday afternoon when several corps of boys under the management of the principal, Mr. Jas. Irwin, organized for a general clean-up of the school grounds. The results speak well for the efficiency of the Generals of the different groups, and add much to the looks of the grounds. Indoors the girls were organized and cleaned windows and desks, brightened up the rooms with pictures and flowers. The Household Science Room and the Manual Training room received their spring cleaning, which certainly improved the general appearance of all the rooms.

WET WEATHER CAUSES DELAY

Many Clubs Hard Hit By Postponements of Playing Dates

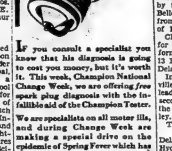
(By the Associated Press)

Although there have been no automobile complaints from the stagnates so far, the International League clubs have been taking a rough pushing around from the weather since they moved into the northern section of the circuit ten days ago.

Since the opening in the north on May 3, a total of 36 games were scheduled and 14 remain to be played off at future dates. There was a 13th postponement, but Newark and Toronto managed to squeeze in a doubleheader and get one game played.

Of the home clubs, except Montreal and Jersey City, have suffered about equally. Baltimore and Reading have managed to play eight of their nine scheduled games at home. Montreal without a postponement at home, can report important progress in all departments.

Twelve in Row



Coming home with a winning streak just getting under way, the Royals have won all of their nine home games to make it a dozen in a row without a defeat. Not only have they advanced in the standing to second place, but the attendance has reflected their improvement with crowds of around 10,000 turning out regularly.

After clouting away against the lower ranking clubs of the league, Jersey City and Reading, the Royals turned in one somewhat more important victory yesterday, when they defeated the Baltimore Orioles 9 to 5. The triumph placed Montreal only one game behind the league leading Newark Bears and shoved the Birds, rated as outstanding contenders, down into fourth place. A half game behind Buffalo.

Montreal pitchers gave only seven hits and Baltimore had to fall back on its favorite home run system to get any runs. Homers by Frank Packard and Russ Ariett accounted for all the Orioles tallies. The Royals lambasted Jim Chaplin for four runs in the first innings and kept right on hitting the way Cy Well Chaset was credited with the victory, although a streak of wildness forced him out in the sixth inning.

For the second successive day all the other clubs were kept idle by rain and wet grounds, three games being postponed.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Considerable controversy has been noticed in both the Kingston and the Peterboro newspapers as to the respective ability of shortstops, who have performed with the C.O.B.L. for years past. The sports editor of the Kingston press apparently is suffering from a feeling that Mickey Compeau was the classiest infielder ever to perform on the diamond of a Central League team. He was at one time keen to task by the Peterboro scribe on the ground that the late Roy Cherrett and Charlie Amsden were both of the Lindsay siren flash. Right here and now we will toss Harry Blakely, the local baseball player ever to perform in the C.O.B.L. in the ring. Harry always depended able when the occasion arose and was never known to make a slip in a crucial game.

Getting back to the seat of the argument, however, we are firmly of the opinion that the late Cherrett of Peterboro was the fastest player ever to perform in the Central loop. It might be worthy at note to add that the Kingston club never had the opportunity, or perhaps we should say privilege, of seeing Cherrett in action. He would of made Compeau look like the proverbial snail most any day, we imagine. Compeau is not as dependable, at the crucial moments, as was Cherrett. Blake Sly or Amsden.

The following sports editorial on the subject, was noticed in the Peterboro newspaper recently: We have no hesitancy in saying in unqualified Cherrett was far the best shortstop in this loop we have had back in the early days of the league and perhaps the Kingston writer has forgotten him. It must have been about the time when Charlie Amsdin cavorted between second and third for the Petes and robbed visiting hitters of everything that came within a block of him. But we can't quite bit anywhere from .450 to.100 per cent better. It is always better than the present Pony infielder.

We've been at senior workouts when Amsdin scooped back to Solomon two balls he could hardly see, threw them over to the spot of the spot Jake would designate. He picked 'em up and it's a cinch Jake wasn't giving him any breaks with two bits at stake! And the way that boy Comsill could hit that ball was a caution at a slow start. But there, we're delving in the past now, and there's no percentage in that.

Two more teams were added to the proposed Belleville Senior Softball loop yesterday afternoon. This makes six teams that have signified their intentions of operating in this proposed loop. The organization meeting will be called next week.

Three National hurlers, Tommy Fointer, Alex Weir and Ernie Smith were in action here at the Fair Grounds last night getting the kinks out of their arms. The pitchers will do a little more training tonight and a general turnout of players will be called for Friday night. Manager Greer announced last night that every position on the "Nats" team is open and will be meted out to the player showing ability to the best advantage during the ten days of spring training.

A number of new players have made their bows to Belleville since last fall and it is expected that a lot of new faces will be seen in National uniforms this summer. There should be one or two excellent baseball players up at the C.C.A.F. camp. Manager Greer is not counting on any particular players for individual positions this year, but intends giving the younger element a real opportunity to display their wares. The perfect 12 reconstruction has arrived and the Nationals will be rebuilt from the ground up. All that is required is the hearty co-operation of the fans. The team is to be entirely a "home brew" aggregation and therefore the fans will once again have that personal interest which was so marked in Belleville not so many years ago.

Dr. Jack Marshall, chairman of the planning committee of the Belleville Nationals, dropped into the editorial room of the Ontario Intelligencer yesterday afternoon to show us a few of the letters and orders he had obtained for the Belleville baseball dance on Friday night. "The Doc" feels quite proud of the number of prizes that are to be passed out at their dance. Three orchestras just below one of the spot Jake would designate. O. E. S. DANCE IS COLORFUL EVENT

Mrs. W. Chrysler Hostess at Affair Honoring Grand Matron

Johnstone's Academy, Front St., was last evening the scene of one of the most delightful and entertaining functions of the present social season. It was the occasion when Mrs. W. Chrysler tendered a complimentary dance to Mrs. Anna Boyd, Worthy Grand Matron of the Order of Eastern Star in Ontario, at which were invited the members of Belleville Chapter No. 55, and a few invited guests.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion, with the several colors of the order, red and white, cut spring flowers. Dancing, interspersed with songs, addresses, presentations and the dance numbers of a group of young girls of Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone's and Miss Kitty Johnstone's dancing class, went to make up an evening of rare enjoyment, and to which the members of the chapter and guests express thankful appreciation to Mrs. Chrysler for her kind thought.

During the evening a musical programme added to the pleasure of the guests. Mrs. (Dr.) Stobie in her usual charming style contributed a vocal solo that was enthusiastically received while Mr. J. Hillman delighted the audience with a solo that was greatly enjoyed. Both generously responded to the warm applause by encores. Mrs. M. P. Duff was accompanist for the musical numbers. As an interesting addition to the program, the Lennox Brothers, Raymond and Leslie, gave instrumental numbers, the latter's performance on the violin being outstanding. This young man has only recently returned from Austria where he has been studying violin, and is rapidly becoming one of the masters of this instrument.

A short program of speeches was arranged during the dances, in which Mr. George Jarmain, the Worthy Patron of Belleville Chapter No. 55; Mrs. W. T. Ramsbury, the Worthy Matron, paid honor to the hostess of the evening, Mrs. Chrysler, and to Mrs. Boyd, Worthy Grand Matron of the Order of Eastern Star in Ontario. His Worshipful Master Tice, also addressed the guests on behalf of the city, extending Mrs. Chrysler for her generosity in honoring a citizen of this city, who not only has brought honor to her own chapter, but to the city of Belleville as well. Mrs. Chrysler in this time, in a very happy speech, presented Mrs. Anna Boyd with a beautiful bouquet of roses, to which the Worthy Grand Matron replied, thanking the hostess and those present in their expression of good will.

Mr. E. T. Cherry, a Past Patron of Belleville Chapter No. 55, acted as chairman for the evening, and it was through his efforts that the evening's entertainment was carried out in a faultless manner.

Perhaps the feature of the evening was the dancing of a group of girls from Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone's dancing class, which included very clever and beautiful steps in such dances as the Dutch Dance, Tambourine Dance, and Little Sister Minuet. In the Dutch dance, the girls, Barbara Turvey, Mattie Browning, Myrtle Lancaster, dressed in customary Dutch fashion, with their wooden soled shoes, were immense, going through the formations of this very difficult dance in perfect harmony. Miss Kitty Johnstone, who is recognized far and wide as an artist in the art of Ballet dancing, was roundly applauded in her efforts in the next number.

Barbara Turvey, Mattie Browning, Joan Peeling, Myrtle Lancaster and Kitty Johnstone showed wonderful stability and dancing prowess in the Tambourine dance. Dressed in Gypsy costumes with their tambourines, they made a decided hit with the gathering.

Eight young girls in the little Sister Minuet, Betty Armstrong, Jean Peeling, Myrtle Lancaster, Mattie Browning, Barbara Turvey, Betty Ainsworth, Florence Kerrigan, and Kitty Johnstone, were, without doubt, the feature of the evening's entertainment. Special mention should be made of Betty Ann Armstrong—the darling of the dance—a little girl of some four years, who went through this step in a very pleasing manner; now her little feet could master such intricate steps was a mystery to all. Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone's and Miss Kitty Johnstone's training and care of these young girls was duly shown in the dancing of this young lady.

Following the programme refreshments were served by one of the ladies organizations of Christ Church, which were very dainty and appetizing, and commented on by those in attendance. The orchestra, for the evening, which was a feature much praise was under the direction of Mr. Floyd Martin.

When Daughter Goes Make-up Mad

Said a man in the presence of his sixteen-year-old daughter: "I have believed and always will believe that painted lips are vulgar and disgusting. I never imagined that a daughter of mine would use a lipstick. But parents and children don't understand each other these days; the children think their parents are fools." The child shrugged her shoulders, turned away.

A father or mother who makes a great issue of a small matter, who harps continually upon the subject, is making a grave mistake. It is my firm belief that less harm comes from permitting a girl to tint her cheeks and lips than by raising a cruel barrier between parent and child. The thinking parents says "I must keep my child's love, no matter what happens. Nothing must come between us, ever. I must be patient, tolerant, understanding, sympathetic. I must catch the child's viewpoint. I must see with her eyes."

It is distressing to see little girls, still in high school, with their sweet lovely young faces smeared with artificial coloring. We all hate it. They are much prettier without make-up. But they don't think so. And jawing, fussing, nagging will only cause their hearts to chill to-ward us. That is the tragedy. They may discard the make-up as the years came along, but the chill may remain. Who knows?

Any mother who has been head for the purpose for which it was intended will remember that, in her own young days, she had to do as other girls did. Youth and middle-age are miles apart, in some ways. It is for the older person to bridge the gap, to hold forth the loving hand, to guide the younger one. Not to stand firm and unrelenting. To lay down the law! Youth will ever find a way.

If there must be a discussion, let it be a tender loving, generous one, mother and daughter must never be separated by ill-feeling.

"Dearest if you like to redden your lips, let's try a lighter tone. It would suit your complexion better. And I have been reading that those vivid reds aren't used any more. Clara told me, as her beauty shop the other day, so I bought a lipstick for mine. It's an import from Paris. You can tell your friends that, and feel a bit set up if you like."

Parents echo as in a chorus "I love my child". Much more important is that their children love them. Youth is headstrong, won't be shoved around, but youth is human and easily touched when approached with affection, approached tactfully.

And, of course, it is the wise mother who talks to her daughter as if her daughter were of equal intelligence—which she usually is "talking down" is a mistake. The young 'uns are wise, can't be fooled. These grown-ups aren't as much as to which idea the grown-ups must agree, considering that all through the years we grow so being stupid, learning little, making the same mistakes, if children are much smarter than their parents were at their age, there wouldn't be any progress made at all. Give them a square deal, meet them on equal ground.

MUSIC CONTESTS AMONG SCHOLARS

Annual Competitions in Schools to Be Held on Friday

The annual competitions in music of the public schools in Belleville will be held on Friday next, the 13th inst.

The interest in these yearly contests has grown with each year (this being the seventh), and is looked forward to with keen interest by the pupils as shown by the fact that there will be over five hundred entries received. Rosettes, shields, medals and prizes this year.

Already the study of music in the schools is bearing fruit in the large number of girls and boys who have developed good singing voices, and who have a fair knowledge of the music of the great composers, and an appreciation of their immortal compositions. The Supervisor of Music, Mr. Hunt, states that very soon these competitions will include the school competitions of Hastings, both urban and rural.

Messrs. Jean Anglin and Leo Riggs will be the adjudicators as in previous years, and all the competitions are to be held in Queen Alexandra School beginning at 9.30 a.m. and continuing through the day.

Besides his widow, Mr. Weeks leaves one son, Dr. B. E. Weeks, a veterinary surgeon and also lives in the village of Consecon. Mr. Weeks was an active member of the United Church and a member of the Masonic Order of 52 years standing. Mr. Weeks was instrumental in the recent building of the new Masonic Hall in Consecon and will be much missed by all those who knew and respected him. MOST REVOLUTIONARY BOOK

The Christian World, of London reports a very apt reply made by Mr. Oliver Baldwin, who visited Canada lately, to a question asked at the close of his lecture in London. A member of the audience asked if the lecturer did not think a world transformation would be brought about if everybody would read and put in practice Drummond's "The Greatest Thing in the World," and Mr. Baldwin's reply was that it would scarcely be necessary to go so far. Whenever a copy of the New Testament could be got so much change would often be forget that the New Testament is the most revolutionary book that has ever been published.—New Outlook.

SELLING TURNS PRICES DOWN

WHOLE LIST SOFTENS UP

Liquidation Begins in Rail and Takes in Entire List

Prices Decline on Board Through Influence of Wall Street

New York, May 12.—Selling started in rail shares and gradually embraced virtually the entire list in today's stock market.

The market remained sluggish, but the firmer tendency of recent sessions disappeared, and several of the rails penetrated new low ground. The market seemed more interested upon dividend cuts and the generally low state of trade, than upon remedial measures such as might lead toward international credit expansion, as indicated in the Bank of England's rate cut.

Union Pacific surged more than three points, going under 50, on announcement of reduction of its dividend. Santa Fe slipped nearly as much to a new low. Miscellaneous issues off one to two points included American Telephone, American Can, U.S. Steel, New York Central, Standard of N.J., Eastman, Coca Cola, Allied Chemical, Dupont, Woolworth, Sears, United Aircraft, American Tobacco B., Case, and others. Some of the preferred issues were again soft, notably those of Johns Manville, Case and Adams Express.

Action of the London Clearing House Banks in reducing interest paid on deposits to 1-2 of one per cent. brought few sales there in line with those just announced by the New York Clearing House and was viewed in some quarters as an evidence of International co-operation inasmuch as the maintenance of a higher rate in London might have tended to attract deposit from New York.

Creamery Butter, No. 1, solids	19c

LIVESTOCK

LIGHT VOLUME MARKED TRADE

Leaders Under Pressure Remainder Moving Aim-lessly About

Toronto, Ont., May 12 — Light volume and soft price action marked afternoon trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today. Leaders appeared under pressure, with balance of the board moving in a dull and aimless manner.

Hollinger and Dome were soft in the mining list, former showing a decline of 18 at 14.00 and the latter 12½ at 26.75. Kirkland Lake also gave way, with a similar tendency and fractional recessions appeared in Sylvanite, Lake Shore and Teck Hughes. Buffalo Canadian recovered a fraction of yesterday's slump.

Base metals were firm, 14.75 for a 90-cent loss and Hudson Bay was steady at 1.23. Other metals and the silver and oil groups were inactive.

DAVID KEITH LOSES FINGER

One Cut Off, Other Crushed in Rotary Drill Press

David Keith of 21 Alexander St. had the misfortune to have the first middle finger and crushed quite extensively his index finger on his right hand while performing his duties at the Stevens-Adamson foundry yesterday. Mr. Keith, who is employed as a master mechanic at the plant was operating a rotary drill press machine at the time of the accident and in some unknown manner his right hand got caught in the drill, before the machine could be stopped it had practically chewed off his middle finger on the left hand at the second knuckle joint. The index finger was badly crushed and at present is in a very mutilated condition. Mr. Keith was taken to the office of Dr. J. C. Robertson where medical aid was procured.

Although Mr. Keith's middle finger had to be amputated at the second joint the index finger is quite badly crushed and Dr. J. J. Robertson is trying to save the index finger from amputation. Mr. Keith was able to be about today, although his arm is in a sling supporting it, and along and his entire right hand is completely bandaged as it was also recipient of many nasty cuts and lacerations.

JOHN SNOW A GREAT SEALER

Like Others Looked For Other Work When Sealing Days Ended.

(By The Canadian Press)

VICTORIA, B.C. — The recent death here of John Snow, pioneer sealer, who was known as Pacific seals the days when the sealing industry was at its height in west waters.

The name of John Snow was known to all ship masters and owners, and during his 50 years he was never out of this port his record as a hunter was high.

Like most of the sealers Snow had to look for other work when the sealing days ended. No compensation was paid to him by the government, although the Pelagic Seal Treaty of 1911 deprived him and many other sealers of their livelihood.

In one year, 1894, 94,674 seal skins were landed by Victoria hunting schooners, manned by 818 white men and 118 Indians. The industry was finally seized by the United States and Russian governments after disagreeing with all hands. A few years sold and the rest were left to rot at their anchors, and the sealing days out of Victoria ended.

In 1886 the late Captain O'Leary brought the first sealer around Cape Horn. He called him Pelican Finder, although later the name was changed to the more appetite one of Mystery. Sam was seized twice. Of her crew of 20 only two men survived—Captain J. Butler and J. Noble, both of Victoria.

NEIGHBOUR SAVES HOME FROM FIRE

Mr. Chas. Mitchell Comes to Rescue as McDonald Home Endangered

Front of Thurlow—Mr. O. Iverside has returned home after spending several days in Brockville. His son, Mr. Merrill Iverside, who has been residing in Brockville for some time occupied his home.

Mr. Walter Leavens arrived home from the States on Friday. He drove his new autogrip plane and on his arrival here many cars along the highway were stopped in order to give the drivers a chance to see the sighting of the new wonder. Nearby residents ran to their doors and windows to get a first view of it. It can certainly alight or take off in a very small area.

Mrs. W. Dafoe of Belleville, was a Sunday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Sinclair.

Mother's Day was observed at front Road United church on Sunday when an especially large attendance gathered at the United Sunday School and church services to do honor to the Mothers, many of whom have passed on but whose influence still lives. The program prepared by the Sunday School Education Council was followed. Mrs. C. B. Leavens gave a very interesting and suitable reading. The two United primary classes sang a chorus showing they had been well trained in many pleasing ways. The quartette was rendered by Messrs Lehman Bradshaw, Lewis Hammond, Jack Hall and Roy Cronkite, Miss Ruth Greatrix was accompanist.

The different characters in the pageant were taken by Mrs. Ivy Brown, Misses Gladys Bradshaw and Edith Hammond, Messrs Clifford Field and Kenneth Greatrix.

Rev. Mr. Keough then gave a special address based on the text, "Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Many very beautiful hand and cut flowers adorned the pulpit and platform adding both inspiration and beauty to the service.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. MacDonald had a narrow escape from being burned on the timely assistance of Mr. Chas. Mitchell, a near neighbor, and a passing motorist, there is no doubt the building would have been in ashes in flames. Much credit is due these two men who worked swiftly and judiciously and were thus able to subdue the flames before any very serious damage was done.

TELLS OF WORK AMONG BLIND

Canadian Institute Has Been Invaluable in Aid of Afflicted .

Madoc—On Friday evening, the organ recital and musical and reading given by Mr. Herbert Tremeer, late organist of King Street United Church, Cobourg, was highly well attended, and all were much pleased with the excellent program offered of instrumental and vocal selections, while the address on the work done by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, was very interesting, and most instructive.

Rev. C. W. Rivers, of Trinity United Church was the chairman of the evening, and Mr. Grey Asselstine superintended the operation of the lantern for the picture. Mr. Tremeer gave several pipe organ selections, among others, a vocal selection "Open the Gates of the Temple." At the piano, after playing "Polish National Dance" he played and sang "Old King Cole" for the boys and girls. He followed all by his "Carmencita," and "Tommy Lad." Cello selections "Valse Chromatic" and "Bacarolle" were much enjoyed.

After the opening of the program by the "Doxology," Rev. Mr. Rivers introduced the speaker, Mr. Tremeer in speaking of the Canadian National Institute of the Blind, said that it was organized in 1918, not as a school, but an organization to help the soldiers who had lost their sight during the war. Its first object was to help the blind to help themselves. Over one hundred and seventy-six Canadian soldiers lost their sight through the war, and not only military but civilian blind are helped. Offices are maintained in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. About 63,000 blind are registered in Canada. The school for the blind at Brantford is a government institution, but the Institute for the blind helps scholars to enter this school and assists them in getting employment afterwards. Many departments are maintained. The industrial department owns and operate factories in which brooms, baskets and rush-bottom chairs are made. The salesroom department finds sale for articles made in the homes, and supplies material for these articles, the profits being returned to the workers. Nearly one half million dollars worth of articles have been sold for them.

The home-making department teaches the blind by way of actual achievement, instructing many to take up the duties of the home in spite of their handicap.

The Library Department contains fourteen thousand volumes of the latest class of literature. These are sent by post, postage free, to those who read. The Braille Courier is supplied free to the blind, and is published once a month.

They have also a department for prevention of blindness, which conducts sight-saving classes to those partly blind.

At the close Mr. Tremeer extended his thanks to the Women's Institute for sponsoring the concert, to the girls of the Junior Institute who sold tickets, to Trinity United Church officials for the use of the church, and to Mr. Rivers for his valuable help and assistance, and to the Presbyterian Church for the use of the lantern, also to Gray Rivers who so ably operated the slides during the lecture.

THREE WOMEN
By FAITH BALDWIN

Later, she found that anything remarkably distasteful to her might function like poison. Even the day before Lennox was born that world found George Sheldon wanting and hadn't taken her then was prolonged worry than the others. She was frightened but determined, as for once she had failed of her desires. Lennox was a boy, sullen rather than repentant, voluble with effusive, extraordinary, unlimited confidences. He had blamed her, openly, for his misconduct.

The doctor had said the first child must be her last. If the heart attacks had not served to keep George Sheldon on the path of rectitude they had at least assisted to freeze his wife, gradually, from bondage.

She relaxed, closed her eyes and slept. Nanna stole quietly from the room.

In the morning Nanna had something of last night's story from Lennox. Later she approached Mrs. Sheldon, by roundabout measures.

Mrs. Sheldon was not interested.

"It is not the thing itself, you understand—I'm not interested. I see in him."

Nanna spoke out bravely. Louisa had subdued but never quite conquered her.

She's some too much—not near enough with the other boys. He keeps himself a-purpose, comes right home from school, most days. It ain't natural for him, it's not in nature."

Louisa said nothing then. She thought over her plans, and compromised. Lennox, entering Columbia at seventeen, found that he had he owed this realization of a repentant dream to a grasshopper and Sally.

Lennox was not permitted a latchkey. He did not find this restriction particularly awkward until his second year at college when, having become a member of an excellent fraternity, he discovered the drawbacks of such an example of maternal leading-strings. One night, getting in rather late, he stood at the top step and regarded the street door intently, holding a slightly vinous breath. This was the second time he had been so late. On the first occasion he had rung the bell and Nanna had opened to him, yawning, a flannel wrapper flung over her night dress. He had started up the stairs, and his mother had met him at the top of the first flight. He did not get to bed until an hour later.

This time his hand hesitated at the bell. To his astonishment before he had gathered his scattered wits the door opened of itself, as if by magic. He walked in and Nanna. She whispered huskily, "I listened for you, Master Lennox. No need to ring."

CHAPTER EIGHT

A few days later Nanna drew Lennox aside, making some signals for silence. From an apron pocket she produced a shining latchkey, she had had it made for him, from her own, she said. He took it in his hand, the little symbol of freedom, and turned it over in his palm. His tremor of awe at it was not fitting that he should be compelled to receive it in this contemptible fashion. It was his by right.

Then he laughed suddenly, hugged Nanna to him, kissed her. Nanna slept that evening with her head like the darning to do, the linen to look after. I've saved a little. I can live nicely with my sisters."

"I couldn't have you," he assured her, gently. "And she'll never know you gave it to me."

He hated that. "she'll never know." It seemed so far beneath his young dignity, to discuss his mother that way, even with Nanna.

Nanna watched him out of the house. It was only because he lived in that house that she stayed on. In performing her small duties. But she had been there nearly twenty years and it would have gone hard with her to be uprooted.

Lennox Sheldon, at 5 little past nineteen, was a subdued flame of a boy. He had broadened, he carried his height well, his dark hair was as rebellious as ever, blue eyes looked out from under heavy brows. He was still shy, still withdrawn. He was well liked at Columbia, and not well understood. The boys had found him worthless, more than once. They had laughed, but were a little proud of him. He had not proven much of an athlete, yet was not too good a student to annoy his friends. And he did—they couldn't find the suitable word special, perhaps, fitted best yet. It wasn't as soft as that—so shyly eager, then, to be a "good fellow." He seemed to feel a lack in himself, he listened to their sagas of rowing prowess with a little puzzled frown between his eyes.

He had a natural bent for science a love of argument, of discussion. He had even approached his mother on the subject of his future—did she really think he would do well in the business? It ran itself, did it not, with Simmons as nominal head? She knew her business? really. He didn't think he'd be any good as an office worker, undoubtedly. What did he want to do? she sons in girls, in music, in food and box met and was captivated by a certain Simmons woman, who closely and conscious resembled the prevalent Gibson type. She consented to be a minister's daughter, forced by circumstances to the unchancy life of the stage, and her story differed, but her fascination held. Her name was Lily. Further deponent sayeth not. She asked him to call upon her, she gave him her card.

Dancing with her was an amazing experience. She danced perfectly, yet so charmingly dependent upon her partner's guidance. Her voice, attractively husky, told him a number of curious things; her eyes said rather more. At two in the morning he had kissed her.

He returned home, a little unsteady, a very little. He had not been drinking excessively. Some thing more than the wine had gone to his head, troubled his blood. For several hours he had been a Man, dominant, sure of himself, under the wide eyes of an admiring young thing with her fair hair piled high, the neck of her satin gown cut very low and her sleeves like colored satin balloons.

Up the dim stairs he went, with caution. The house was so still that he heard the ticking of several clocks and placed them accurately. As he passed his mother's door, it opened and a light shone out.

"Come in here," she said, without further preliminary.

Lennox followed her in. "Sit down," she ordered, and he put his opera hat carefully on the floor. He wore an evening lavereneé, dropped it to the back of a chair. His faced was very clear-cut black and white in his dress clothes.

CHAPTER NINE

"Where have you been?" demanded Mrs. Sheldon.

Her son told her.

"How did you get into the house without ringing?"

Silently, Lennox exhibited the key.

"Where did you procure that?"

"I had it made——"

She looked at him sharply. Let it pass. It was unimportant at the moment.

"You've been—drinking?"

"A little," he admitted. "I am not drunk," he added.

"You were your companions?"

"There were young women present?"

"Yes."

"And what kind of young women?"

"They were all right," he muttered, childish and sullen.

"Young—ladies of your acquaintance Chaperoned?"

QUIT CAMP BORDEN IS OTTAWA ORDER

Many of The Fliers to Move to Trenton

Barrie, May 12.—Orders for the transfer of another number of men from the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Camp Borden were received yesterday according to advices reaching here from that place. While no official report was available, it was stated it is to men will leave Monday with possibly Ottawa as their destination. Twenty others were moved last Monday.

While these men are leaving the wartime training camp, others are being brought in for special night flying instructions, it was learned. When the final distribution is completed, it is stated, some men will be found in the staff service from Rimouski to Montreal and Detroit, some with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police patrols while the remainder will likely go to the new training base at Trenton. Rumors are still persistent here that the flying station will be practically abandoned by the end of June, although it is intimated the Camp Borden sources that activities will continue indefinitely.

ME AND MRS. J. WHY WIVES GET NERVOUS BREAKDOWNS

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 22.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Little Meriem could scarcely recall any other existence than that of the stern cruelty of the Sheik and Malouma. Dimly, though, in her childish memory lurked the blurred recollections of a gentle mother. "Oh Geeka," she would whisper to the doll, "why have I no mother, and why does the Sheik, my father, not love me?" Today as she poured out her troubled heart to Geeka she heard the sounds of wrangling beyond the village gates.

With the curiosity of childhood, Meriem listened. Presently she heard the crowd moving up the street toward the Sheik's tent. Cautious she stuck her little head around the edge of the tent. She saw two strangers—white men. They were alone; but as they approached she learned from the native talk that they possessed a considerable following that was camped outside the village and had come to trade for ivory.

The old Arab met them at the entrance to his tent. His eyes narrowing wickedly as he listened. Then the Sheik said: "I have no ivory." Meriem gasped. She knew that in a nearby hut the great tusks were piled high. She took a step forward to get a better view of the strangers. How yellow their hair was! How white their skins! Suddenly one of them saw her. Meriem noticed the look of shocked surprise crossing his face, as she dodged from sight.

The Sheik saw it too, and guessed the cause of it. "I have no ivory," he repeated. "I do not wish to trade. Go away. Go now." It would have been suicide to have disobeyed. The two strangers turned and left the village. The Sheik walked to where Meriem hid, very frightened, clutched her by the arm and dragged her into the tent, beating her ruthlessly. "Stay within," he growled. "Never let the strangers see thy face again or I shall kill you."

CONTRACTS of EARLY TRADER

Interesting Sidelight on Business Revealed By Archives

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL—Study of conditions in the fur trading business in the early days of the Prairie Provinces is revealing light on the life of that period, Dr. Z. Massicotte, Quebec, archivist, reports in connection with his investigations and interpretation of contracts drawn up between early French traders and settlers and the French, exporting and exploring companies.

The archivist has traced 13,055 contracts signed between the years 1670 and 1775. It shows that traders undertook, even in those early days, to travel to Northern Quebec, to the Lake Superior district and west of Lake Winnipeg. The contracts of some of the men who first ventured beyond the Rockies have been unearthed by Mr. Massicotte and he soon expects to publish his findings in third instalment in volume form. Detroit and the Southern United States received their quota of placards.

Few women ventured to travel the rough paths of the first adventurers. But as early as 1700 some women took to the trail and soon afterwards whole families moved into the wilderness in search of riches and forest game. "The women revealed the same fortitude and courage as men," says the archivist.

"There is a curious fact to be noted," says Mr. Massicotte, "which is that a good many of those whose contracts remain today went to the area which is now Detroit. Detroit as a matter of fact remained French in character for a long time. Late in the nineteenth century a French newspaper was still being published there by Abbe Richard."

Mr. Massicotte expects to launch into the study of contracts signed between 1760 and 1840, in the near future and anticipates discovering much data on early western pioneers.

PLACER GOLD AREAS ACTIVE

Rapid Expansion This Year Through Atlin Country

(By The Canadian Press)

ATLIN, B.C.—The reason for the almost unprecedented activity in British Columbia's placer gold areas this year is clearly psychological, according to Dr. J. T. Mandy, district mining engineer for the provincial government.

"The old-timers didn't go very deep for their gold," said Dr. Mandy. "They were content to scratch the surface. Their operations were confined chiefly to the shallow and rich-creek ground. Most of these locations have been pretty well worked out. In the better known mining districts, but practically no serious effort has been made by prospectors to discover similar deposits on other creeks.

"All through the Atlin country gold mining has experienced expansion this year. There was a pronounced decline in operations from the conclusion of the war to 1929, but since then the figures have been gradually rising.

The figures covering this period portray a psychological condition resultant from the World War, rather than a potential condition of the field, and are contradictory to the promise of the area, High wages, high cost of commodities, decrease in gold value, the employment of funds in other endeavors returning high profits, the depletion in the ranks of prospectors by the war on their change of occupation to other lines of endeavor offering high and more easily won reward, the temporary attraction of the cities as gold mines of commerce, ease and affluence, were all potent factors in retarding activity in this still potentially rich field. Today conditions are reversed again; capital is once more turning to gold with its increased value and unemployed men are searching for the opportunity to dig the only metal that is always readily traded for the things they want. For these the Atlin area still offers much promise in its unexploited opportunities."

OPEN VERDICT RETURNED IN SHOOTING WED.

Inquest is Sequel to Alleged Murder Committed Wednesday

BROTHER HELD

Committed For Trial — Fight Over Radio is Blamed

Kingston, May 12. — That death was due to a hemorrhage, caused by a bullet fired from an automatic revolver, was the verdict rendered last night by a jury sitting under Coroner Dr. M. J. Morrison at the inquest on William McQuham, who was killed in his home here early Wednesday morning.

Frederick McQuham, a brother, charged with murder in connection with the shooting, was committed for trial earlier yesterday.

It was brought out that William McQuham met death as a result of a bullet wound in the right side of the head, but the evidence of Dr. W. D. Hay, assistant professor of pathology at Queen's University, who conducted the post mortem, showed that the bullet never went into the body of McQuham." One bullet penetrated the right hand and went through his abdomen, and the other first struck his left hand, then left side and passed out through the left thigh. The bullet lodged in his abdomen was recovered.

Dr. Hay said wounds on the head appeared to have been caused by a blunt instrument.

Two witnesses who had given evidence also at the preliminary hearing, stated they thought they heard two shots fired.

Detective William Fitzgerald gave new evidence which was not submitted at the preliminary hearing to the effect, that in company with Archibald Cameron, an uncle of the dead man, he found two cartridges in an ash pile at the rear of the home of Mrs. Isabella McQuham, mother of the McQuham boys, where the tragedy occurred.

Chief Constable Robinson said that the cartridges fitted in the revolver which had been handed over to the police.

Preliminary Trial.

The story of an aged mother sobbing throughout her testimony in which she told of a fight between her two sons in the dining-room of their home in the early hours of the morning, and of her repeated efforts to stop the battle, featured the evidence given in the preliminary hearing at a special session of the police court in a room today before Magistrate J. M. Farrell.

Mrs. Isabella McQuham almost broke down towards the last. She was assisted from the witness stand and taken back to her home where tragedy had stalked several hours before.

Another feature of the hearing was the evidence given by Chief Constable R. J. Robinson, who stated that Frederick McQuham had made a statement to him in which he declared that he had shot his brother in self-defence.

Was Warned.

Chief Constable Robinson said that the accused made this statement after he had been duly warned and told that he did not have to make a statement unless he so desired.

"I have nothing to say, but I shot him in self-defence," had been the report of McQuham, the chief swore.

Following the hearing of the evidence, Magistrate Farrell committed the accused for trial, and it is likely he will be asked to stand at the Fall assizes.

The witnesses examined included Mrs. Isabella McQuham, mother of the deceased; James McQuham, another brother; Archibald Cameron, a brother of Mrs. Isabella McQuham, living in the McQuham home; Dr. M. J. Morrison, Chief Robinson and Constable McGee and Brennan.

Ambrose Shea appeared on behalf of W. P. Hicks, K.C., counsel for the prisoner, and as the charge was read the accused, in chorus with his counsel, Mr. Shea, said "Not guilty" in a firm voice.

Chief Constable Robinson produced a .25 calibre automatic revolver which he said had been handed to him by Police Constable McGee, who was one of the officers called following the tragedy. The chief stated there were no shells in the revolver when it was handed to him.

The mother told her story to the Crown Attorney, T. J. Rigney. She said that her son, William, came home last night about 11 o'clock, and that he, Frederick, Archibald Cameron, were in the house. William and the other occupants of the house were in bed when William came in.

Turned on Radio.

"When Will came home," said the witness, "he started playing the radio. The radio was downstairs and we were upstairs, but it made a terrible noise and was very disagreeable. He kept moving the dial around and kept at this for some time, and I got very nervous.

"After a while I got out of bed and went downstairs and asked him to turn the radio down low. He ordered me to go back to bed, but I did not go. He talked loud and was mad. I continued to ask him to turn off the radio. He was very drunk."

Witness said that after she had tried some time to get William to shut off the radio, her son Fred, who was in bed upstairs, came down to the dining-room, where the radio was located and that immediately the two brothers got into a struggle. They clinched and went down to the floor.

"William was the strongest of the two," added the witness. "William said he would kill his brother and called him terrible names. I tried hard to get them separated, but they kept on fighting.

"I did not see a revolver nor did I see any smoke," added Mrs. McQuham, when pressed by Mr. Rigney regarding the actual shooting. "I did not hear Bill say anything, nor did I hear Fred say anything. After I heard the noise I had my hands on both the boys and said, 'Do stop this and get up.' Later Bill seemed to roll to one side, and Fred jumped up and ran into the hall."

Witness said that then she noticed blood on William's face and this was the first time she thought that he had been shot. She could not find any mark on his body, however.

Uncle Testifies.

Archibald Cameron, uncle of the dead man, said he was in bed at the time of the shooting. He heard two shots, and following this he got out of bed to investigate. He met Mrs. McQuham on the stairway and then when he asked her what had happened Mrs. McQuham said that Bill had he is shot."

Witness said that he went downstairs and found the body of William McQuham lying on the floor. Mr. Cameron said Constable McGee asked for the gun that had been used. "I told Fred that the officers wanted the gun," said the witness, "and Fred handed the revolver to me saying, "There it is, I do not know if there are any shells in it or not!"

Mr. M. J. Morrison, coroner, said he made an examination of his skull and found a hole on the right side of the head above the ear.

Chief Robinson was questioned regarding injuries Fred McQuham, the accused, had received. The chief said Fred suffered a cut on the upper lip, a mark on his forehead and 2 cut in the centre of his back. Fred had been examined by Dr. Morrison.

Dr. Morrison asked Fred about the cuts," said Chief Robinson, "and he stated that when he felt something pressing on his back he pulled the trigger."

William McIlquham, the deceased, was born in Kingston and had resided here all his life. His father was Andrew McIlquham, who died some years ago and who conducted a livery stable here for many years. Deceased was married and his wife, formerly Isobel Brown, survives. Fred McIlquham, the accused, is unmarried.

Sensational Saving in Government Cost Expected by Tories

Cabinet Consisting of Not More Than Eight is Mooted

REDISTRIBUTION

County Council May Also Be Thing of Past in Retrenchment

Toronto, May 13—While there are no definite signs at present of an early Provincial election, many prominent Tory camp-followers feel that things are now moving in this direction, and that any appeal which the Henry Government may make to the people—in 1933 or at late in 1934—will be one for the forty-wide economies, with Queen's Park pledged to set the pace therein.

In any such economy platform, the following planks may be laid down:

1. Reduction of the present Legislature membership of 113 to 83, so as to tally with the Ontario House of Commons membership, and make possible the adoption of (or nearly as possible) Dominion electoral riding boundaries.

2. An eight-man Ontario Cabinet.

3. Abolition of all County Councils.

4. Discontinuance of the Grand Jury system.

Not Talking

Absolutely no confirmation of these suggested proposals is to be had at Queen's Park, but Government men are not in the habit of "tipping their signals" in advance, and unofficial rumor is that various members of the present Administration are at least discussing such matters nowadays among themselves, if not actually bringing them before Cabinet as a whole.

It is a pretty well accepted belief, furthermore, that a Redistribution Bill will be brought down to the Legislature at the 1933 session, and this, undoubtedly, would serve as the first step toward making the House smaller, and a less costly proposition than it is at the present time.

A smaller Cabinet, with amalgamation of various departments and elimination of others to effect that goal, has been rumored for some time.

County Councils

Doing away with County Councils has been advocated from public platforms during the past year by various Ministers of the Government, and abolition of Grand Juries has a forceful sponsor in the person of Attorney General William H. Price, whose intimation along this line at the last session of the House was generally taken to indicate that the Government was about ready to move in that connection.

Abolition of County Councils, with the subsequent adoption of the Township Council basis of rural municipal government would, if it is understood, necessitate considerable changes in Provincial grants—notably in highway construction contributions—but on the other hand, it is said, would effect a material financial saving all around.

VERIGIN PENALTY BEING APPEALED

Case Based on 12 Points —Claim Interpreter Inaccurate

Regina, May 12.—Notice of intention to appeal the conviction of Peter Verigin, Doukhobor leader, in a perjury charge, was filed at Regina court house yesterday on Verigin's behalf. The Doukhobor chieftain was sentenced to three years' imprisonment following his conviction at Yorkton last week.

The appeal will be based on twelve points set out in the claim that the trial judge, Mr. Justice Embury, misinterpreted the evidence in his charge to the jury, that findings of the jury was reversed and not founded upon the evidence adduced and that at the hearing at which he allegedly testified falsely the interpreter given him by the court interpreted inaccurately.

80 PER CENT PEOPLE HAVE UNEVEN HIPS

Toronto, May 11—"Four out of five persons have uneven hips. If blindfolded we would walk in a circle." declared F. F. Millard in addressing members of the Ontario Osteopathic Association here today.

"The Doubleboob are the only people not hip-conscious. They don't know that they have hips," he continued. "Gunmen have a pair of their own as they carry weapons. Golfers always have done the 'lock step' have not their natural hip movement when they are freed. Golfers certainly are hip-conscious when about to drive.

"Singers have almost perfect hips, as singing calls for correct posture. A hunchback sufferer could not sing grand opera."

Little Benny's Note Book

We was starting to eat breakfist this morning and I said to ma, Hay ma, does your tooth still hert?

Yes almst afraid it does, ma said, pop said, That reminds me, whose bewtiful contraito voice was making sounds of pane all last night.

Mine, I suppose, such a nise, ma said, and I said, Well O. ma, you know what you said.

Morning about going to the dentist this morning if her tooth still hert, and ma said, Or corse I know what I said, I hope I'm intelligent enough for that.

Standing like somebody that was sorry they said it, and pop said, Benny will go with you for moral support.

I dont need any moral support, thanks, if I go I think I'll take gas, ma said.

What do you mean, if you go? pop said, and ma said, Well what I mean is, I was reading a very intriting article by N. Willis Minkle in last nite's paper, in fact it was as timely as it was intriting because it was on the very appropriate subject of bearing pane, and he said that the ability to bear pane is often one of the most infallible keys to nobility of caracter and strength of will, as proven by the martiers of old, and in fact he said pane should sometimes be welcomed as a proof of, one's capacity to rise above the mere tortures of the flesh onto a higher and more permanent level from which all blessings flow, and I thought it mite be an intriting experiment if I tried it a few days with this tooth.

Did H. Willis Minkle say anything about the ability to look a dentist strate in the inverse and tell him to do his duty? pop said, and ma said, O, I'm going, there's no question of that, and pop said, I know there's not, because I'm going to accompany you every inch of the way.

Well, he did.

SEIGNIORIAL RENT PROBLEM

Farmers of Quebec Raise Protest and Ask Suspension

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL — Another interesting chapter in the history of French-Canada when lords of the manor owned the land and leased the rights of tillage to tenants was recalled recently when a delegation representing some 700 such tenants appeared before Hon. Honore Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests, at the government offices. The seigniorial rights have for many years, since the fifties in fact, ceased to be a serious material issue, as far as the tenants are concerned, for they cannot be dispossessed providing they pay what are now the purely nominal dues to the seignior, a seigniorial court established in Lower Canada prior to Confederation confirmed the valuation of the lands held under tenure by the habitants (the real origin of the word "habitant" coming from this source) and legislation was passed to provide that such-holders could acquire absolute freehold rights by payment of the capital.

In the case now before the government lands in the counties of Laprairie-Napierville and St. John are affected. These were owned by the Jesuit Fathers who sold to the government, but a series of lawsuits followed when the government sought to establish the right of collection of the rents, and gradually the payments ceased. Recently notices were sent out by the Department of Lands and Forests calling for payments of arrears, and this brought about the visit of the delegation to Hon. Mr. Mercier, the leaders being Vincent Dupuis, M.P. for Laprairie-Napierville and J. R. Charbonneau, M.L.A. for the same county.

The amounts of money involved are very trifling, and altogether a total of not more than $35,000 is involved by way of capital and arrears to run to approximately one half of that amount.

Hon. Mr. Mercier expressed the opinion that it would be best to clear the whole matter up by payment of the capital, and threw out the suggestion that perhaps the government might be willing to compromise as to the arrears by accepting fifty per cent of what is due on that account. He, however, made no definite offer, but promised to consult his colleagues in the matter and with that idea the members of the delegation went away satisfied.

HYDROGRAPHIC SCIENCE GROWS

Man Learns With Swift Accuracy of Ocean's Topography

(By The Canadian Press)

VICTORIA — Progress of hydrographic science has enabled man to learn with swift accuracy the facts of the ocean's topography, according to H. D. Parfrenz, chief hydrographer of the Dominion government on the Pacific coast.

"The floor of the sea is no longer the mystery that it once was, even to sea-faring men with access to the most advanced devices and data on the day," said Mr. Parfrenz, who is now engaged in charting the bays and inlets of British Columbia to make them safer for navigation.

In a recent address to a Victoria scientific body, Mr. Parfrenz told how the topography of the land sometimes behind the coast, the celebrated "points on the coast line, so that they will present a certain picture to the navigator making a landfall when his ship is in line with certain bearings; how the sounding is taken with a hand lead-line and how 30-score sounding is taken with a modern invention called the sounding machine. Mr. Parfrenz mentioned the methods employed in determining the velocity of ocean streams at different stages of water, spoke of drag-sweeping, aerial photography in its valuable relation to coast charting, of acoustic sounding, and the latest in the practices for geodetic work, the radio acoustic ranger.

Jerry is Bashful

By Thornton W. Burgess

With strangers always modest; Content to merely hear and see.
—Jerry Muskrat.

Paddy the Beaver and Mrs. Paddy appeared to have forgotten the tree that Paddy had just cut down and was yet to cut up into logs.

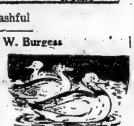
They were heading for the dam at the lower end of the pond for a swimming as if they were in a hurry. There being nothing else to do, Jerry Muskrat followed. They made their way around the end of the dam, down the Laughing Brook and so into the lower pond, which was older and bigger than the upper pond. At once Jerry saw a dozen great birds on the water in the middle of the pond, their long necks stretched out and their heads held high and watchfully. Not a sound escaped one of them, although a good time before as they had approached that pond they had been gabbling noisily.

As Paddy and Mrs. Paddy approached one of the great birds swam out from the others and gave a low honk. Jerry knew then that this was Honker the Goose of whom he often had heard, and whom he had seen leading his flock high in the sky. Honker and his flock never had stopped at the Smiling Pool, for the latter was too small and too open. But each year they visited Paddy's pond deep in the Green Forest. Honker and Paddy were old friends.

"Welcome!" cried Paddy.

"Honk," replied Honker, which presumably meant, "Thank you."

"Have you flown a long distance today?" inquired Paddy.



"Indeed we have," replied Honker. "We have been flying ever since it was light enough to see anything. We haven't stopped to either food or water. We wanted to get here before dark if possible and here we are. This is one place where we always feel safe. Goodness knows we need it! Safe places are few and far between these days."

Jerry swam a little nearer, but took pains not to give any attention to himself. Somehow these great birds made him feel bigger than he had expected that they made him feel rather small and of little account. Mr. and Mrs. Quack, the Mallard Duck and other members of the flock paid him he had long known. In fact they were good friends. He had considerable respect for them; but he wasn't afraid of them. But as he saw the length of the necks of Honker and his flock he realized that with what tremendous force one of them could drive the stout bill of his neck something more than respect, something very like fear, took possession of Jerry. He decided then and there that he would be very careful not to draw Honker's attention to himself.

Honker gave a low signal and at once all those long necks which had been held so rigidly erect were lowered and the big birds began to feed about. While some began preening their feathers, others began looking for food on the muddy bottom, and between times all did a great deal of gabbling.

"What a noisy crowd," thought Jerry. "Never have I heard such gabble, gabble, gabble. If they gabble like this all the time I am glad they are not neighbors of mine. It sounds to me like a lot of talk that doesn't mean anything. It must be that they like the sound of their own voices, for no one appears to be paying any attention to any one else. Some people are that way. Here comes Honker swimming this way. It may be all right, sometimes to be seen and not heard, but there are other times when it seems to me wise still to be neither seen nor heard, and this is one of them."

Jerry, who had only his nose above water, drew a long breath, sank below the surface and swam under water to Paddy's house. Where the Black Shadows were blackest close to this he came up again, and there he floated and watched and listened. He was bashful, very, for once in his life Jerry Muskrat was bashful. Those birds were too big and they gabbled too much for him to feel

"Have you flown a long distance today?" inquired Paddy.

CORNER WAR OF GROCERS

Bread and Butter Struggle Brings Police on Scene

(By The Canadian Press)

VANCOUVER, B.C. — Police were called in to settle a street corner "war" between a chain store and an independent grocery here recently.

It started when the chain store staff advertised "specials" at reduced prices and the independent shaded his prices a little lower. The chain store took the next step and cut again. The independent retaliated by offering free bread to all purchasers of more than twenty-five cents worth of goods. He took out a line-up of customers outside his store, but the chain store turned the crowd in its direction by advertising free bread for all sold by cartons.

"They can't beat me that way," said the independent grocer, who then put up a sign "Free Bread and Butter" and brought the crowd back. Every scale was entered his name was given a loaf of bread and a generous portion of butter.

The crowd on the sidewalk became so large that traffic was blocked and the city police were called in to establish a neutral zone. Shortly afterwards a truce was declared, with both stores still operating.

MEMENTOS TO SIAM'S KING

35 Pound Salmon Caught By Cousin is On Way Stuffed

(By The Canadian Press)

VANCOUVER — Memories of their recent tour of Siam, highlighted by a stuffed Tyee salmon caught by thirteen-year-old Prince Shirazadi, have been sent from here to the King and Queen of Siam.

The salmon, in charge of the Siamese nobleman, Luang Sitsi, who has been transferred from the Siamese legation in Washington to the foreign office in Bangkok. Included in the parcels was a huge map of the United States used to the extent of Prince Shirazadi guide and counselor of the Siamese monarchs during their visit to the continent.

The prince forgot to take the map with him when he returned with the king and queen.

The most conspicuous of the parcels, however, was that containing the big salmon, which had been caught by the king's young cousin at Campbell River. By landing a 35-pounder Prince Chirazadi became automatically a member of the Tyee Club, an exclusive angling club with a world-wide membership, eligibility being determined by ability to land a salmon of thirty pounds or over at Campbell River, with a light line.

NUG NOT NICE NAME FOR MAN

Melbourne Magistrate Assesses Damage at 10 Shillings

(By The Canadian Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia — Just how insulting is the term "nug" when applied to a person? A Melbourne magistrate recently assessed the insult at one pound, but later reduced the valuation to ten shillings.

Thomas Alfred Birch had to pay the price, although he insisted in police court that he was only being playful when he called a constable, using the evidently derogatory word "nug."

Magistrate James Clark pointed out that while the word might be regarded as harmless when applied in domestic circles, it had different significance when used by a man in his professional capacity, such as a constable on duty.

Constable Tom Philipini said he saw Birch acting in an objectionable way and told him to go home. "Since he got about twenty yards along the street," repeated Philipini, "then he turned and sang out "You cannot win an argument, constable." I was insulted by the "mug" part of it.

Birch testified that he wasn't referring to the constable at all but to a friend, who in turn admitted that he, and not Philipini, had been addressed as Muggins. He had not objected.

When the magistrate assessed the fine at one pound, Birch's lawyer asked how many Melbourne residents he would have to call to outweigh the evidence of one constable.

W. Huntingdon

WEST HUNTINGDON—One of the best May meetings ever held by the W. M. S. was took place on Friday last at the home of Mrs. Clarence Wright. The Doxology was repeated by the Presidents, Mrs. Geo. Cook and Mrs. P. McInroy led in prayer, The Roll Call was answered by Scripture quotation containing "Rejoice Evermore."

Mrs. E. T. Searles read the Scripture lesson from Mark. Chap. 19, Mrs. Jervis Wright then kindly read report of the Belleville Convention by Miss Georgie Pinkney. The report of the convention was not only concise but detailed and was very much appreciated by all.

Hymn No. 168 was sung. Mrs. J. Wright then gave a very illuminating survey on the Study Book dealing with education of the girlhood of Japan.

They followed a series of short reading namely:

Indian Women and Marriage by Mrs. C. Elliott.

Disarmament, by Mrs. F. Ashley

Central India, by Mrs. Donman

India, by Mrs. F. Wilson.

The People of India by Mrs. Geo. Post.

China by Miss V. Wilson.

Five O'clock Bible Society, by Miss Eva Wilson.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing hymn 138 and the benediction, by Mrs. J. J. Wright. A delightful lunch was then served by the hostess.

Mrs. W. Bray visited the General Hospital, Toronto, this last week and had a final series of Radium treatments and returned on Saturday last somewhat fatigued.

Pte. Frank Ashley took his son, John, to the doctor at Belleville, on Saturday, to have his broken ankle examined, which has been in a plaster of paris casing for seven weeks.

The cottage prayer meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Reid's on Friday last was a great success. A great crowd assembled.

The pastor led the meeting and Mr. Pitman read the Scriptures.

One of the greatest surprises, yet one of the greatest delights of Sunday last was the attendance of Mr. Paul Kingston, an old veteran and an honored member of the church who was present at morning worship. Mr. Kingston is well over 80 years of age.

Mother's Day Programme was fully observed on Sunday morning last at Church. The singing by the Young People was excellent. The duet by Mrs. W. Pitchett and F. Palmer was much enjoyed and the Pageant entitled "Honour Thy Mother" was well rendered by Annie Cook, Marion Truscott and Mrs. B. Post.

A special feature of the service was the baptism of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson's child, whose name was John Glenwood, which indeed was a most fitting climax to a most impressive service. The offering which was for the O.B.E.C. amounted to about $2.00.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mills of the Ridge Road were early callers at the parsonage on Sunday morning last. They wanted to celebrate Mother's Day by having their child baptized. The child's name is Marion Jean, a fine bright little girl.

DOLLAR PER TON GRANTED ON N. S. COAL

Third of Cent Per Ton Mile on Shipments Inland From Lakes

RAILWAYS AIDED

To Help Maritimes Penetrate Ontario as Balance Against Tariff

Ottawa, May 11—In order to permit Nova Scotia coal to penetrate the Ontario-Quebec market and compete there with the United States product, the Federal government yesterday announced substantial bonuses on the bituminous fuel when transported up the Great Lakes.

Effective immediately, a bonus of one dollar per ton will be paid by the Government on all Nova Scotia coal shipped west of Montreal, by water, in addition, one-third of a cent per ton per mile will be paid for every mile this coal is shipped by rail inland from the Great Lakes port at which it is discharged.

The railways also come into the bonus plan. For every ton they use in Ontario and Quebec over and above their total consumption of Canadian coal last year, a bonus ranging up to $3 will be paid to the coal operators or coal distributors. The amount per ton of this bonus will be the difference up to $3 between the laid down cost of the Canadian coal and the laid down cost as the same point of imported coal.

No estimate was given of the cost to the Dominion of this ambitious bonus plan. The scheme will be administered by the Dominion Fuel Board and the cost paid out of the unemployment and relief fund.

These bonuses are being given by order-in-Council in response to the demands of the Maritimes, which Nova Scotians hold that they pay more for such manufactures as they buy from Ontario because of the tariff behind which Ontario factories produce these goods. They asked therefore that, as a measure of compensation, the Dominion pay to them a bonus to enable them to penetrate the Ontario market with one of their chief products, coal.

The provincially-owned Canadian Nationals and Northern Ontario Railway comes within the terms of the railway coal bonus, but how much help it was rumored here that the Nova Scotia government was requesting the Henry government in Ontario to promote the use of Nova Scotia coal on this railway. The present bonus scheme represents the Dominion government's efforts to bring the two provinces together on this matter.

Since the Nova Scotia coal is entirely bituminous the domestic user, who burns anthracite, does not come into the scheme. The delay of the Nova Scotians is to get their coal used in as many as possible of Ontario's hundreds of factories.

LARGER SAWMILLS ON REDUCED SCALE

Announcement Made of Proposed Restrictions

North Bay, Ont., May 11.—This month will likely see all the larger sawmills of this district operating but on a restricted scale compared with last year. Practically all the operators have prepared their plants for the season but one or two are undecided as to when the saws will be busting. Approximately 800 men will be recruited from the ranks of old employees. The average period of operation will be two months as the big milling companies are unable to set a definite date of opening or to give any idea of how long the wheels will be turning.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
City.

Dear Sir:

On behalf of the members of the Belleville Rotary Club, I desire to express, through your medium, our deep appreciation of the splendid co-operation of all who, by their talents, unselfish efforts and self-sacrifice, made the Minstrel Show and an outstanding success.

The Belleville people have always been loyal in their support of our endeavours and it is gratifying to all concerned to know that, on this occasion, they have once again expressed their hearty approval both of our objective and the steps taken to accomplish it.

In addition to the excellent work of our guest artist, Aubrey Pringle, Conductor Reg. Hinchey, the principals, chorus, dancers and musicians, mention should also be made of the valuable work behind the scenes under General Manager H. F. Moorman and Stage Manager J. W. Lill, including the generous publicity through your columns, the local theatres and Canada's Chorus Station CKOW, and the sale of candy under the direction of Mrs. J. J. McPhe.

We look forward to expressing our thanks verbally to many of the performers and workers, but I am sure that their greatest reward will come from the knowledge that, in addition to giving enjoyment and pleasure to their fellow-citizens, they have helped to bring health and sunshine into the lives of crippled children.

Yours faithfully,
T. M. WEBSTER,
President Belleville Rotary Club

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE CONFIRMED

Jesuit Archaeologist Makes Finds at Sodom, Gomorrah

London, May 11—The Biblical story of the destruction of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah by fire and brimstone is believed by Father Alexis Mallon, Jesuit archaeologist of the Pontifical Biblical Institute at home to be confirmed by archaeological discoveries on the site of the two towns.

Father Mallon, who with Father Robert Koeppel, has spent three years excavating on the north shore of the Dead Sea in Palestine, said their investigation has shown that the two cities were contemporary and existed from before 3500 B.C. to not later than 2100 B.C. at the latter date, he said, both had been destroyed by fire and never were reoccupied.

Violent Conflagrations

Traces of violent conflagrations were found in the ruins, he said, including layers of ashes. He added that on the plain below the hill on which the cities stood there was a curious rock formation about five feet high which legend associates with Lot's wife, who, according to the Biblical story, was turned into a pillar of salt at the time the towns were destroyed.

The excavators penetrated 26 feet and dug through three cities, each built on the ruins of another, underneath these three, they said, is probably a fourth. The ruins of Sodom and Gomorrah were fund in the top layer.

REFORMATORY TERM.

Ottawa, May 11.—Guilty of defalcations of government funds totalling $4,521, Jean B. Lacombe, former employee of the Department of Marine, was sentenced today to a reformatory term by Magistrate Glen E. Hurke in city court. He was sentenced to six months definite and not more than two years less one day indeterminate thereafter.

Universal peace and universal co-operation among nations and individuals is the most praiseworthy of our times.—Patrick Cardinal Hayes.

MEDICINE MEN WIELD POWER

Young B. C. Indians, However, Do Not Like Witchdoctors

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA—Natives still gather in age-old witchcraft ceremonies and the witch-doctor and medicine men still hold sway among the superstitious aborigines, the Federal Indian annual report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police reveals.

Among British Columbia Indians and Eskimos of the Arctic, officers of the famous force have found evidence of the pernicious influence of the medicine man and of the extraordinary power he wields over his tribe. Instances have occurred, it is stated, "where a witch doctor has actually caused the death of a man by suggesting it to him." These instances, however, are rare and as a rule the witch doctor simply takes advantage of some natural death claiming to be responsible for it and thereby enhancing his position as a worker of miracles.

Weird Ceremony

Corporal M. T. Berger, of the Hazelton detachment, reports a weird ceremony performed in a cabin near Moricetown when the witch-doctor purported to take a bear out of a sick man's body and "blow it away," thereby curing him of an illness. Believed to be the first white man to see the ceremony, Berger and Constable A. T. Rivett watched it from a window. Tyee David, Moricetown chief, a neurasthenic, was chanting on his hands and knees in the middle of the cabin while members of the tribe were grouped around. Covered by a bear skin, the chief held in his hand a red stick with a small mirror sunk in the edge of the handle. As his chanting gained strength he would gradually raise himself with the stick, then collapse on the floor and the performance would be repeated. Others soon joined in the chanting, the women uttering a peculiar wail.

This continued for 20 minutes until the chief appeared exhausted. Then Alex Tyee, the medicine man, bent over David's stomach and pretended to take something in his hands. Standing up, he raised his hands, which cupped, above his head and blew into them. This was the "blowing away" of the bear.

Has Been Benefitted

Tyee David, the chief, claimed the ceremony did his sickness much good, which would have been increased had not the police interrupted the ceremony. Alex Tyee and another medicine man were given suspended sentences one year.

An odd incident illustrative of the clash between modern science and ancient beliefs in the north occurred at Coppermine, Dr. R. G. Martin complained to the police that Comtat, a native medicine man, was interfering with his patients, having one man to leave the hospital and submit to the ancient form of treatment. Death followed. Dr. Martin said the patient was beyond saving but he wished to protect his other patients and the native medicine man was warned not to interfere.

An outbreak of religious fanaticism of a different sort brought officers of the force to Leaf Rising in the southwestern corner of Ungava Bay. White inhabitants of the post became alarmed when a native named Miller, his mind affected by study of the Scriptures, had set himself up as a religious leader of the settlement. Making vestments for himself, Miller had fashioned an elaborate parade and was beginning to be a nuisance when reinforcements of the police arrived. The leader and his flock were lectured and the matter was closed, a report that the Eskimo divinity was in the moon proved to be stoned to death because of their barrenness being denied by all the natives.

REPORTED THAT KING HAS FLED COUNTRY

Jugoslavia Apparently in Midst of Revolt

Vienna, May 11.—Sensational reports which circulated in Vienna last night to the effect that King Alexander of Jugoslavia had fled the country in the midst of a military revolt apparently were based on the arrest of 16 officers of the army for insubordination, it developed today.

The affair was serious enough, however, to cause Minister of War Stopanovic to go to Hamburg, the scene of the insubordination and the officers, including a Colonel, were brought to Belgrade for court martial.

GOOD CROPS PROMISED

HITLER FORCES LAUNCH ATTACK

So Tumultuous it Was Necessary to Suspend Session

Berlin, May 11—Adolf Hitler's Nazi Socialists ended their policy of aloof tolerance yesterday by launching a furious attack against the Bruening government at a very stormy session of the Reichstag.

Nazi Spokesman yesterday demanded an end to the "tribute" of reparations. They assailed Minister of Defense Wilhelm Groener, the man who broke up the Hitlerite storm troops, and their demonstration became so tumultuous it was necessary to suspend the session.

Gregor Strasser, a Nazi spokesman, outlined the Hitlerite unemployment programme in a mild speech, interrupted by some observers indicating that the National Socialists were putting their best food forward in an attempt to convince Germany they were a solid party, capable of participation in the government.

At the conclusion of the Strasser speech, General Groener made a vigorous defense of his order dissolving the Nazi storm troops.

"If it hadn't been for the storm troops," he shouted, "we would have had peace long ago."

Herr Strasser leaped to his feet. He demanded that the session be suspended long enough for the cabinet to determine "whether such a man as that is fit to head the defence ministry."

The session was suspended until order was restored.

GORULOV WRITING STORY OF SLAYING

Killer Questioned Before Paris Magistrate

Paris, May 11—Paul Gorulov, the man who killed President Doumer, was brought before a Magistrate today for formal questioning about his personal history.

A great crowd waited outside the court to watch the assassin's arrival from Santé prison. He was mumbling prayers all the way.

After the examination the police disclosed that the man is working night and day in his cell writing an account of the murder and the events which led up to it. They said the manuscript had no appearance of having been written under a strain.

"BROKEN LULLABY" TAKES ITS PLACE WITH SCREEN'S BEST

Lionel Barrymore Superb

The combination of every good element in motion-picture making —substantial theme, inspired direction, sincere acting and logical backgrounds—makes "Broken Lullaby," the feature presentation at the Belle today and Friday, a n exceptional photoplay. It is the type of a picture which will join "Ten Days," "Seventh Heaven," "All Quiet," "Cimarron" in the lists of the screen's best.

Ernst Lubitsch makes the picture one of the best of his outstanding directional achievements. The spectator is always aware that a knowing hand is behind the construction of the film, though, like the propaganda of the story, there is no sense of intrusion.

The beginning of the photoplay is typical of Lubitsch's best work. The films in the first few months of the armistice. The place is Paris and victorious soldiers are parading through the streets. We hear the martial tread and the bands and we see the banners. But the first scene is shot from the ground from behind a soldier who has lost a leg in the conflict. The camera peers at the procession through the aching spaces that widen since flesh and blood—"The paths of glory."

Then the scene shifts to a cathedral where an anthem of service is being held. Voice drones on about peace on earth and the camera, as the camera ironically passes down the aisle. From each pew there extends the embroidered hilt of a sword as the men at arms attend the service.

Then the camera flashes on the speaker. Strapped to his belt is a wicked looking revolver. The signal comes for the men to kneel. From their pockets they took cooked ferocious spurs. Militarism is merrily taking a hand.

After the soldiers file out one lonely figure remains in the cathedral. The camera hurries to him and the throbbing, personal story begins. The man who remains is a sensitive French youth in agony of soul. During the war he has killed a German youth: why, he doesn't know. He feels that he has committed murder and no plaudits about "duty" or "patriotism" will ease his pain.

He has learned the German boy's home address. He goes to his little German village to plead with the bereaved father and mother for forgiveness. The task is hard and he delays by telling the parents that he knew the boy in Paris. Their bitterness is eased by meeting a relative of theirs and they receive the French boy with open arms. He is irresistibly drawn toward the sweetheart of the man he has killed and the drama progresses to intense heights.

War hatreds haven't been forgotten in this town and as the French boy walks the streets he is scrutinized with suspicion, a feeling masterfully told by Director Lubitsch. It wouldn't be fair to discuss the climax—but it is tremendously effective.

The picture has brought out the best in acting from fine cast. Lionel Barrymore is superb as the lonely German father, hating and vengeful, until the French lad brings him food memories of his son. Phillips Holmes responds with the best performance of his young career as the French boy and Nancy Carroll plays the German girl with sympathy. Laelen Millefield, usually condemned to more or less silly comedy roles, gives a surprising performance as the Prussian civilian of the old school and Louis Carter is appealing as the German mother.

"ALL QUIET ON WESTERN FRONT" RETURNS TO THE CAPITOL

Remarque Writes the Sensational "All Quiet on Western Front"

Remarque simply could not help writing "All Quiet on the Western Front", Hurtled from the quiet schoolroom at the age of eighteen into the vortex of war on the wave of patriotic patriotism that swept all of Germany he plodded through years of terror at the front. Disillusionment followed disillusionment. Horror followed horror, while his young and inquiring mind sought to grasp the meaning of the living nightmare in which he was plunged. At the end of the war, he returned to the world and woof of his book, sustaining the belief of many that "All Quiet on the Western Front" is a biographical study flavored with the legitimate license accorded writers.

Let his own words as recorded by a friendly and sympathetic interviewer clarify the situation.

"Comrade back to Germany after the war," he said, "was a terrible experience for everyone of us. After the strain and hardships and horror of the front we expected to find the country disintegrated, everywhere hunger, depression and bereavement. My own homecoming was over-shadowed by the loss of my mother, which was a great blow to me. I had entered the army as a mere boy and was not one of the few lucky ones with a job to come back to. I could not settle down to anything, there was a continual restlessness and dissatisfaction that drove me from one job to another.

"The truth was, there was something in my mind, the weight of horror and suffering I had seen during the war years. At last—I was on the editorial staff of a Berlin illustrated weekly at the time—I realized that I had to get these things straight in my mind, to get them formed once for all.

"The idea of my book came as a sort of safety valve. I came home one night from my work and started to write it. For obvious reasons I adopted the fiction form, but what I put down was the truth. It was not written for any wide audience; my object was to set down the experiences I had been through therefore I wrote with the utmost simplicity and integrity as though I were telling the story to an intimate friend. I avoided all the paragraphs and let the terrible facts speak for themselves. In six weeks the book was finished—it had written itself—and I called it 'In Western Nichts Neues' —'All Quiet on the Western Front.'"

"All Quiet on the Western Front" returns to the Capitol on Friday and Saturday.

MRS. DOMENICO SHAKEN BADLY

Struck By Car as it Was Being Backed From Curb on Front St.

While backing out from the west curb of Front street, on the north side of street last evening shortly after nine o'clock, Kenneth Ryan, 10 Cedar street, driver of the car, struck and knocked down Mrs. Samuel Domenico, 238 Front street, when she was crossing Front street from the west to the east. Mr. Ryan, who had had full control of the car and stopped before running over the aged woman. He, with Constable Bill Evans, rendered every assistance carrying the woman to her flat, which is near the scene of the accident. Dr. G. S. Cronk was called and after examination found no fracture but severe bruises. The woman was badly bruised and she also received a bad shaking up and today is suffering considerable from shock. After questioning the young man, he was allowed to go. It is believed Mrs. Domenico could not be seen by the driver of the car as she stepped from the curb, she being directly behind the motor car.

Mountain View Branch Holds Annual Business Meeting For Year

Huff's Island, May 12 By Mail—Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the Women's Institute was held in Mountain View with rather a small attendance. Mrs. Lyle Corbridge was returned to the office of president and no changes were made among the other officers. A splendid paper was given by Mrs. Clark Sprague after which the meeting was dismissed.

The Rev. W. G. Fletcher spent the noon hour on Thursday with Mr. Geo. Huff, afterward making several pastoral calls on the island and taking supper with Mr. Albert Wallbridge.

Friday being Arbor Day, the school children and Miss Dick cleaned up the school house and grounds in the morning, and at noon went to Mr. Nightingale's woods where they enjoyed a most satisfying and delicious picnic lunch, consisting of weiners and buns, marshmallows and chocolate and other dainties. The weather-man withheld the rain, which had been threatening until after lunch was enjoyed on the return journey and some flowers picked. Miss Dick had as her guests Miss Winnie Purdue and Miss Dorothy Sprague.

Miss Edith Dick spent the week end the guest of Miss Thelma Lloyd.

Rev. Beauchamp Payne and Rev. Gerald Graham, were callers at Mr. Thos. Nightingale's, Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Gerald Graham held his initial service here Sunday morning. There was a good attendance and all enjoyed the service, and we extend our best wishes to Rev. Graham and hope that his stay among us may be pleasant and profitable to all.

Several from the Island enjoyed the Mother's Day service at Massassaga and Mountain View.

MAY BE ARREST ANY TIME IN LINDBERGH CASE

John Hubbs Ex-M. P. Has Been Appointed Postmaster at Picton

No One Under Suspicion Attorney Declares as Intensive Search for Slayers of Child Begins in Earnest

PARENTS IN SECLUSION TODAY

No Half-Way Measures To Be Taken in Trail of Underworld Gang Implicated in Slaughter of Infant at Hopewell.

A shocked continent today shared the sorrow of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and the resources of many states were pledged to a relentless hunt for the abductors and slayers of Charles A. Jr.

The Presidents of Mexico, the Governors of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Illinois, among others, and hosts of other notables in public and professional life sped condoling messages to the Lindbergh home.

Relentless Search

"What infamy!" declared General Plutarco Elias Calles, former President of Mexico. "The news causes me profound grief."

"I am terribly shocked," exclaimed President Ortiz Rubio.

Washington, May 13—President Hoover today directed the law enforcement agencies and secret service of the U.S. Federal Government to set out upon a hunt for the murderers of the Lindbergh baby, never to be relaxed until those criminals are implacably brought to justice.

Detectives Shocked

Chicago's hardened crime fighters received the news with shocked silence. Joseph Leach, head of the Chicago Crime Commission, and Robert Tallon Randolph, head of the Secret Six, and Alexander Jamie its chief investigator, expressed a complete belief the kidnapping and slaying of the child was the work of a fiend, not of gangs. "Authorities must look for crooks in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the crime," advised Randolph.

At Minneapolis, Mrs. W. A. Rutter, aunt of Col. Lindbergh, was asked about a finding for several weeks the baby was dead. "It's terrible," she said adding that she had Red Lake Falls, Mrs. Eva Lindbergh Christie, hated sister of the Flying Colonel, deeply shocked, called it the most wanton crime in the world."

Chicago Rewards

Rewards totalling $1,100, were offered by two Chicagoans for the apprehension and conviction of the kidnappers and slayers. William Doyle, master in chancery in the Circuit Court, said he would pay $1,000 and C. C. Coy, a business man, $100.

New York, May 13 — Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan, head of the New York Detective Bureau, expressed the belief today that the Lindbergh Kidnapping was the work of a maniac.

"This apparently lets the gangsters out," commented the inspector who has worked on many kidnapping cases in New York. "To me, it looks like the work of a maniac. I have no direct knowledge of the case, but that's the way it appears to me now."

Mount Kisco, N.J., May 13—The land where the Lindbergh baby's body was found is owned by the Michael's Orphanage of Hopewell.

"The 500 children of the orphanage have been taught that the child might be left unharmed at the door of the Lindbergh home. Every morning they would look on the steps to see if the child was there.

New York, May 13—The New York American published today what it said is the last ransom note written by the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby.

It read as follows:

"Dear Sir:—Have $50,000 ready, $25,000 in $20 bills; $15,000 in $10 bills, and $10,000 in $5 bills. After 2 to 4 days we will inform you where to deliver the money.

"We warn you for making anything public or for notifying the police. The child is in good care.

"Identification of bearer is necessaries. Answer three fold. 1-3. 2-4.

"Two rings in blue ink, with circle over each. Also blue ink spot of the blue circles on the outer edges of the red. Hole in the outer edge of each dark circle and one in the centre of the red.

"Don't publish this letter."

Trenton, N.J., May 13—District Attorney Erwin R. Marshall said after a conference at the State House today that no one was under suspicion for the slaying of the Lindbergh baby "at this time," but that there might be an arrest "any time."

"But there may not be any arrests for a few days," he added. "We are not going off half-cocked on this thing."

Marshall, who is prosecutor of Mercer County and so has jurisdiction now because the body was found in that county although the kidnapping occurred in Hunterdon County, said he was unprepared to advance any theories yet.

He said that Dr. John F. Condon who paid the $50,000 ransom, and John Hughes Curtiss, Norfolk negotiators for their baby's return, had come voluntarily to the Lindbergh home after the body was found.

They made formal statements last night and were subjected to lengthy questioning today. Marshall said they were not under arrest but would be examined minutely as to every detail of their efforts in the case.

JOHN HUBBS, EX-M. P., IS NEW POSTMASTER

Appointed to Succeed Late Robert Purtelle

John Hubbs, ex-M.P. for Picton has received the appointment as postmaster of that town. He has been acting postmaster there since Monday last, following the death of postmaster Robert Purtelle on Sunday.

This appointment was confirmed by Mrs. Hobbs in communication with the editor of the Ontario Intelligencer today.

Do Rabbits Swim? This One Did as Dogs Chase Him Into Harbor

The old question of whether or not a rabbit can swim has been answered to the complete satisfaction of seven members of the Wharf Street Debating Club who witnessed the actual occurrence Thursday evening. A small wild rabbit was the star of the theatrical figure in the unheard of performance.

While a number of the members were in session in front of that building Thursday evening their attention was directed to the strange antics of a small rabbit which was causing terror stricken down the centre of the harbor. Dogs were laying in the rear. The rabbit apparently was blind to the road ahead in fright.

On a straight line he came down the road, dashed past the group of men at the end of the street, which ends in the harbor, entered the water and swam boldly towards the building on a nearby boat house. Reaching this wharf he managed to climb on the woodwork and then disappeared around the building.

As far as can be learned this strange act had never before been duplicated in this vicinity. Members of the Club who observed the performance, and who for a time spent nearly all their lives fishing and boating stated that such an act had never even been heard of before.

BETTER JOB IS ALL NEGRO FINDER ASKS

Hopewell, N.J., May 13—Wm. Allen, colored, said today he first found the Lindbergh baby's body, doesn't want to get much about a cash reward, but he would like a better job than a steer on a truck.

"I feel I'm entitled to some money," he said. "Yeah, if Col. Lindbergh has none, but can find me a job, I'll be all right. I just hope the police catch the fiend that killed the baby. He must be a devil."

CALLS FREE STATE POLICY DISHONEST

Cape Town, South Africa, May 13—The Rand Daily Mail, commenting editorially on the recent announcement of J. H. Thomas, British Dominions Secretary, that he would not break with the Irish Free State if it abolished the oath of allegiance to the crown, today said "Ireland's policy is dishonest."

Kidnappers in Fear Slew Stolen Child?

View Advanced By Some Officials Studying Case.

Hopewell, N.J., May 13—A description sent out immediately after the kidnapping said the child was wearing a white flannel sleeping suit —a garment that would cover him from neck to feet. Today he was wore a little flannel shirt his nurse had made and put on him late this afternoon to protect his chest and keep him from getting more cold.

On the body yesterday there was no sleeping suit; only the soiled and rotting remnants of a shirt, undershirt and a flannel band around the waist.

Article of Clothing

It has been reported several times both Dr. Condon and the Norfolk intermediaries turned over to the kidnappers an article of clothing or a piece of cloth that convinced them possession had been established with the actual kidnappers.

And such theory had to be considered that the kidnappers, believing by many officials to have been crazed, killed their tiny victim almost immediately, stripped off his sleeping suit, and after the body had been cast aside in the hidden hollow where it was found, set about obtaining ransom for a child they knew could never be returned to its parents alive.

Trenton, N.J., May 13—District Attorney Erwin Marshall announced this afternoon that nothing has been found to implicate Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the ransom deal, or Dr. Condon's brother-in-law Dr. Lindbergh baby.

"He has been released and has gone back to New York, Marshall said.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 13— James M. Clark, Director of Public Safety, today received a telegram from a New Jersey State Police officer asking investigation of the Lindbergh kidnapping case abroad, asking Clark to investigate court records concerning the stolen employee of a domestics and arrested here in 1929.

ARVO VAARA EDITOR ORDERED DEPORTED

Order Signed Today For Sending Him Abroad

Halifax, May 13 (CP) — Arvo Vaara, editor of the Finnish Daily Vapaus, will be deported as an active Communist, according to an order issued here today by the immigration board on hearing the charge against a group of alleged Communists recently arrested in six Canadian cities.

Clashing of Cheque

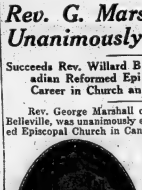
Another witness, Winthrop Grech whose wife and Aird's wife are sisters, testified that Aird received a cheque for $1,850 for Aird, and declared he had returned the money to John Aird in the office. He did not recall any unusual occurrence in connection with this and soon was released from the stand.

137 MORE NUDERS IN PRISON TODAY

Last Parade Held on Thursday Night

Grand Forks, B. C., May 13—Another nude Doukhobor parade, another police round-up and today there are 137 more Doukhobors in jail.

The latest parade occurred near here last night, and followed closely on the heels of two at Nelson. In protest against the imprisonment of their fellows at Nelson the 132 nudists, half of them men and the other half women, marched in march along the highway from their settlement at Graham Ranch to Nelson.



COST OF CAR CHANGES

Rev. G. Marshall Elected Unanimously as Bishop

Succeeds Rev. Willard Brewing as Head of Canadian Reformed Episcopal Church — His Career in Church and His Service as Citizen.

Rev. George Marshall of Emmanuel R. E. Church, Belleville, was unanimously elected Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada at a general meeting of the Synod held in Ottawa on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. There was a full delegation from all the churches in Canada and his name was the only name submitted for vote. The election was held on Thursday immediately after the luncheon hour and required but a few minutes of the synod's time. Practically all the churches had taken a vote in the congregations before the delegates left for the synod and they only carried out that which Bishop Vaughan had recommended to the churches in this country. Rev. Mr. Marshall will succeed Bishop W. Brewing, although Bishop Vaughan has governed from England in the interim. The new Bishop will reside in Belleville on his return from consecration and will continue the rectorship of Emmanuel Church in this city, a congregation which has made rapid strides since Rev. Mr. Marshall took over the duties some fourteen years ago.

Skein of Evidence Slowly Unwinds in $50,000 Payment

Efforts of Chicago Interests To Secure Power Site

CHEQUE CASHED

TORONTO, May 13.—(By the Canadian Press)—The tangled skein of evidence regarding the payment of $50,000 to John Aird Jr. of Toronto by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario has not been in the negotiation for the purchase of Madawaska Power. was slowly unravelled today, as Mr. Aird himself was called to the stand. He had barely started his story of the negotiations when the Royal Commission inquiry adjourned for lunch and will carry on this afternoon.

Interests Want to Buy

Efforts of Paul Reiss of Chicago, representing "certain interests" to obtain the power site were outlined by Fred Roberts of Toronto lawyer, who represented Reiss in some negotiations, but whose efforts failed after the Ontario Government had definitely outlined its policy of developing its own natural resources. Roberts had received a total of $500 from Aird and R. W. Millard, the latter's partner, for his efforts on their behalf. Although Aird had negotiated the contract with the Hydro Commission while he himself was still negotiating with the Reiss interests.

Clashing of Cheque

Another witness, Winthrop Grech whose wife and Aird's wife are sisters, testified that Aird received a cheque for $1,850 for Aird, and declared he had returned the money to John Aird in the office. He did not recall any unusual occurrence in connection with this and soon was released from the stand.

$110,743.94 WAS COST OF CHANGES

Statement Made in House Today Regarding Bennett Suite

Ottawa, May 13 (CP)—The expenditures incurred in the alterations to the 15-room suite now occupied by the Prime Minister at the Chateau Laurier here amounted to $110,743.94, and the rental taxed by Mr. Bennett is $400 a month. These figures emerged from the House of Commons Railways and Shipping Committee today as Mr. Bennett's case was presented. Mr. Bennett's payments to the hotel in 1930 totalled $3,627.71. He was asked by that hostelry for five months that year, although he had left the hotel at his suite. In 1931 he paid $1,200 monthly and thus far in 1932 $8,236.06.

"When he learned that the alterations would cost more than $50,000, a figure which, he had been told, would include care of all expenditures—the Prime Minister had instructed Gordon Campbell, who was attending the Imperial Conference in London, to inform Canada that the work be not proceeded with. On his return, however, he directed the work to progress and subsequently moved in to the remodelled suite on the understanding that he pay rental management. He paid the rental, the management had asked.

COLLEGIATE CADETS IN DRESS PARADE

Unit Presents Most Creditable Appearance

Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School cadets held their cross parade on Thursday afternoon preparatory to the inspection Thursday next. Headed by their school band of 25 pieces, the 250 battalion 600 strong, with the girl cadets and girls' ambulance brigade marched from the school to the Armouries via Bridge and Front Streets and Victoria Ave., the only collegiate campus where review could be held in the city, the whole unit presented a most creditable showing.

Yesterday next the cadets are to be presented with a new set of colors. These have been worked by the senior girls of the technical school under the supervision of Miss Everson of the school staff, and would be appreciated by any military unit. The ceremony will take place in the campus at 10:30 o'clock and will afford the general public an opportunity of seeing one of the finest parades between Toronto and Montreal.

PREMIER LANG IS DISMISSED FROM OFFICE

Governor of New South Wales Uses Executive Authority

LETTERS AT STAKE

Premier's Refusal to Recall Letters Leads to Decision

Sydney, N.S.W., May 13 (C. P. Cable)—Sir Philip Game, Governor of New South Wales today issued his executive authority to dismiss from office Premier J. T. Lang and to invite H. S. B. Stevens, head of the United Australia Party in the state to form a government. Mr. Stevens undertook

Election Looms

The action was the Governor, coming only a short time before a state general election, after refusal by the premier to obey an executive order demanding recall of circular letters which brought about unfavorable comments in the state to withhold from Federal officials funds due the Commonwealth under terms of the Financial Agreement Enforcement Act.

Letters Involved

The Governor's demand for Mr. Lang's resignation followed an exchange of correspondence today in which he ordered the Premier to recall the circular letters which Sir Philip declared in violation of the law and Lang steadfastly refused to executive demand and the Governor reluctantly asked for his resignation. The reaction of Mr. Lang was not learned at the moment.

Ministry Resigns

The Commonwealth Bill specified "no ministers shall be charged with any duty or invested with any power than could be charged under the laws of the state in force on 1st April 30th."

Mortgage Terms

Mr. Lang's mortgages are understood to total £7,000,000 extra revenue which, it is said, would be required to meet demands of the commitments which the Federal treasury suspended by the Federal treasury refusal to pay over external funds detailed by the state.

The ministry was censured, however, on the ground that insurance companies in the state were not compulsorily liable for educational and charitable foundations.

TO IMPEACH MEMBER ON BRIBERY COUNT

Acceptance of Bribe is Charged in S. Africa

Cape Town, South Africa, May 13 (CP)—One of the most dramatic in the history of the Union of South Africa is expected when the Nationalist caucus impeached today on a charge of bribery.

L. Blackwell, prominent member of the opposition Nationalist party government member, J. H. Munnik and charged him with accepting a bribe from Pacific Fish Company, fishing a diamond cutting agreement through parliament.

Munnik, who is a mining engineer, left Cape Town last November to sit for professional services rendered the year after the agreement was concluded. He denied having received other monies.

PRICE LEVEL WASHED DOWN

Soggy Nature of All Stocks Seen in New York Market

New York, May 13—Scattered trickles of liquidation met with little resistance in today's stock market and were sufficient to wash the general price level down close to the depression bottom reached recently.

Neighborhood movements on a point in some places, then eased again. Banic Fe declined 2 and Pacific Pacific 1 on the lowest of those issues since the year 1900.

Miscellaneous issues losing 2 to 5 points included U.S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Allies Chemical, Drug, Inc., United Aircraft, Coca Cola, American Tobacco "B", Eastman, Western Union, Safeway and others. Some of the specialties were again conspicuous. Commonwealth and Southern Grooping 4 points and New Haven 3.

Former King is Subject of Attack

Marseilles, Frances, May 13—Former King Alfonso of Spain, stepped off a steamer from Malta today into a rain of blows from a roughly dressed man on the pier.

The incident was so unexpected that the man punched the former monarch several times about the head and body before anybody could stop him. He was arrested immediately and identified as a Spaniard.

PLANS O. S. D. ADDITION ARE ALMOST READY

Work on Dormitories to Begin at Close of School Term

TO RUSH WORK

W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., Makes Statement to Ontario Intelligencer

Plans are being prepared at present at Toronto, for the much-needed addition of two dormitory buildings at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Mr. W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., for East Hastings informed the Ontario Intelligencer today.

As soon as plans and specifications are completed, tenders will immediately be called for. The work is to start shortly after the present school term closes at the institution.

This is good news both for those in charge of the school, which is fast outgrowing its present accommodation also for laborers and craftsmen in this vicinity.

Ding Dong Bell, Bull's in Well But Horses Land Him Again

RAWDON, May 13—(Special)—A valuable pure bred bull belonging to Clarke Hubbard fell into a thirty-foot well containing about twenty feet of water.

Neighbours were at once summoned by telephone and willing hands held the animal's head above water while rope was fastened around his body and with the aid of a team he was rescued from his perilous position.

When the animal emerged he was apparently none the worse for his given exercise, a rub down and it is hoped, will not be seriously affected from his morning dip.

The bull had been newly dug this winter and was covered loosely with boards. About the time of the accident several men were passing the premises on their way home to the inland for summer pasture and they were also of assistance.

SUGGESTIONS IN LINDBERGH MURDER CASE

One Topic of Conversation in City Slaughter of Child

HANG THE FIEND

Bellevillians Discuss Various Angles of Case

There was only one topic of conversation throughout the city this morning. The city seethed with the news of the finding of a little body of a baby boy with an ugly wound in the forehead, thought to be that of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh who was spirited away two months ago. Telephones in the office of the Ontario Intelligencer were kept busy throughout the afternoon and evening, asking for confirmation of the report which had come over the Canadian Press wireless late in the afternoon yesterday. On the lips of those who had called there was but one question asked: "Was it true that the Lindy baby had been found?" Most of the queries were from anxious mothers who had followed the case with great interest during the whole two months the baby had been missing.

Comments Everywhere

This morning, as office workers wended their way to work, they called to each other the news and passed comments on the matter. Groups in shops and stores all over the city the same news was being talked about from every standpoint. In the factories and even on the farms of the district confirmation of first reports spread like wildfire. Some of the comments made on the matter by residents of this city are interesting.

Fight the Underworld

A prominent city official is responsible for the statement that the only thing to do now was to take about four regiments of the Imperial Army troops from England and fire upon the underworld of America, assisted by about two hundred Scotland Yard detectives. All the underworld characters which were rounded up could then be taken to some island in the sea and made to live there for the rest of their lives. Any attempt to escape by policeman's hands were tied together or crooked policeman at the head of the force to be declared.

A merchant on Front street said that the kidnapping of the baby was too good for them.

A school teacher claimed that the work was that of a fiend who had killed the little lad over some fancied wrong.

May Not Be Child

Others contended that the body of the baby found might be that of a child who had died and that the whole thing was a frame-up.

Scores of others are convinced that the child's body which was found was that of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh and are absolutely convinced that it is not. The latter number point out that there is a scar on the baby's forehead other than the clothing. All however admit that other evidence to account for the mind of the person who committed such a thing as killing the little innocent boy.

Over seventy men were employed by the department of public works today. This shows a material increase over the registration bt employed in this city for some time. Laborers are now being dug for the main sewer which has been about finished. The quarry is now working and stone is being crushed for road work yet to be done.

BOYS THROW STONES AT PASSING CARS

A local garage owner this morning reported that while on a trip to the country in his automobile with his family early last evening a number of small boys alongside the road on the Foxboro highway just a mile or so south of the city were engaged in the sport of throwing stones at a number of cars as they passed. One small stone rattled off the hood of his machine as he passed. When he stopped the car to warn them of the reprehensible practice they jeered at him and fled into the nearby woods. Other motorists have experienced the same trouble and danger of having the glass in their windows rendered useless with the missiles. Serious injuries to occupants may also result.

REV. GEO. MARSHALL

Consecration in England

Speaking to the press today the Bishop-designate stated he was leaving for England, sailing from the port of Montreal on May 27th and would not return until the later part of July. "It is expected" said Rev. Mr. Marshall, "that consecration will take place in either Liverpool or London near the end of June. During his absence in England, Rev. George S. Buckingham of Stayner, Ontario, will assume the duties of this parish. Rev. Mr. Marshall also stated that he would take up residence in St. Agnes Manse or on his return from this city he would direct the activities of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada. Asked if a see would be established in the city, Rev. Mr. Marshall said that a Bishop's grant was made, which slightly more than the expenses incurred in handling the affairs of the church. He also stated his duties would take him from the city for considerable periods of time but that ample provision had been made for these contingencies.

Rev. Mr. Marshall has been in the city for the past fourteen years and during this time has made many friends both in and out of his congregation.

His associates in the ministry speak highly of his qualities and his advice is sought by many clergymen concerning the church as a whole. Before assuming the rectorship of Emmanuel Church here, Rev. Mr. Marshall served for some years as assistant rector of Emmanuel church at Oshawa. It was fitting that he be chosen Bishop in the church in which he ministered, the church now being under the ownership of Rev. J. J. Kerslake, B.A., B.D.

Rev. Mr. Marshall has always taken a deep interest in fraternal organizations, being a member of Eureka Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 283; Mizpah Lodge, No. 81, I. O. O. F.; Benjamin Lodge, L. O. L., No. 276, and Quintena Rebekahs, I.O.O.F.

Today the newly elected Bishop is receiving the congratulations of his many friends on the signal honor conferred upon him, and he will be welcomed back to the city after his consecration.

CANAL BRIDGES BEING REPAIRED

New Concrete Abutment Under Construction at Carrying Place

Carrying Place—Unpleasant weather conditions could not entirely ruin a winter the dominated by the A.T.P.A. for Saturday evening. Although it had originally been intended to hold the roast in the open, it was necessary to adjourn to the Hall and there turn the weiner roast into a weiner-stew. This did not detract in the least, however, from the enjoyment of the event; and the large crowd that attended seemed to enjoy to the utmost the welcoming hot stew bune that were served, and the games and the dancing that formed the amusements of the evening. Mixed dancing and square dancing was provided by Miss Jan McCubbin of Sinting, Mr. Frank Reynolds of Trenton, and Mr. Clifford Baker, also of the latter town. The weather is more agreeable several similar events are planned.

Work is progressing on the Canal bridges, and a number from here are employed in the construction of new concrete abutments and other concrete work. The upper bridge is the one that has received the most attention up to the present time. Messrs. Bill Hendricks and Vernon Westfall have been working there recently. Gaudie is not at all heavy, very few vessels passing through the canal as yet. One of the most recent was the new government tender, the Grenville, on her way west.

A revision of the schedule originally planned for the Inter-County Softball League now places the opening date on May 16th, with the locals first game against Victoria at Victoria on May 13th. The boys have been practising every evening under the supervision of Coach Clinton "Jimmy" Jones, and are shaping very fairly. An exhibition game was played on Tuesday evening against Consecon, with the visitors easily on the long end of the score. However the season is far from over yet, and the locals will be heard from before it is.

The many friends of Mr. Charlie Westfall are very pleased to see him walking, though feebly sround the store once more. Mr. Westfall has been confined to his home since last March when he suffered a serious heart attack while attending a Y.P.S. meeting in Consecon United Church.

The little son of Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Cook, of Consecon who accidently took several sleeping tablets more than a week ago is now out of all danger, and is playing around once more as well as ever. Quick action on the part of neighbours and doctors prevented more serious trouble, and though the little fellow slept almost continuously from Sunday afternoon until Wednesday, he recovered nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Taft spent Sunday with Mrs. A. McLaughlin.

Miss Jean McCubbin of Stirling spent the week end with Miss Helen MacDougall.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks of Canal spent Sunday at Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Tice and misses Hilda and Evelyn of Belleville, and Miss Enid Tice of Toronto spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hennessey.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Norrington and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Campbell of Trenton motored to Peterboro on Saturday to visit friends there. Mrs. Norrington remained to spend a week with her sister, Mrs. F. J. Courtyea.

Mr. Cliff Baker spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. John Buchanan.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese and Miss Lavina Weese visited Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Peters in Consecon on Sunday afternoon.

BISHOP-ELECT MARSHALL

Belleville for the first time in history will be the home of a bishop, Rev. George Marshall who was elected Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church of Canada at the Canadian Synod meeting in Ottawa on Thursday. The honor which is to be his was expected by his congregation for some weeks but the unanimous vote of the synod was very pleasing to those who for fourteen years have attended his ministrations and listened to his discourses.

Bishop-designate Marshall, goes to England for consecration shortly at Liverpool or London and on his return about the first of July will assume the duties to which he has been called. Under the rules of his church, the bishop remains as rector of Emmanuel Church at Belleville, which is eminently satisfactory to his parishioners and the people of Belleville who would be sorry to lose him should he have been called out of this city.

The new bishop follows one of the best known figures in the history of the church in Canada, Rev. Willard Brewing, who resigned to enter the United Church. Since his resignation the Canadian church has continued from England but the duties becoming too burdensome owing to the distance of the Canadian field from the diocese of Bishop Vaughan, it was felt advisable to have a Canadian bishop.

At the last meeting of Council Marshall as citizen Belleville has in Mr. Marshall an outstanding citizen, who has never feared to voice his opinions on matters of public interest.

His friends who are legion congratulate him upon the choice which has long been eminently merited by his long pastoral and ministerial training, his interest in every phase of social and civic life, and his executive ability to assume the office.

DIABOLICAL CRIME

If evidence were desired to show that crime is not even an escapade or even a profession but an organized industry, it is now clear in the dastardly murder of the Lindbergh child whose body was found yesterday in brush very close to the home of the parents. All evidence points to the murder as taking place not long after the kidnapping and the removal of the articles of wearing apparel for the purpose of identification and the securing of ransom. That is the view of the police. There is but one satisfaction, the knowledge that since the worst was to come the child was not long in the hands of his criminal captors.

Because of the importance of the Lindbergh family, the contribution which the Morrow family had made to the national life, and the honors which Charles A. and Anne Lindbergh had brought to the United States, weighed nothing with the murderers but the Lindbergh and Morrow money did, at least was their goal.

The last of the trail which has covered the world since March 1st is now ended. Henceforth the search of the police, the lawyers, the authorities having promised that it will be relentless.

No crime has so shocked the world because of the helplessness of a child in the hands of bandits and the revelation that the worst has taken place. For dastardly, diabolical crime this callous act can not be equalled. The world grieves with the stricken parents.

This crime reveals to men and women what diabolical steps the underworld will go to in pursuit of money, evidence of which is all too prevalent in this age. It brings the realization that a mighty task is required to uproot such an evil power in the state, which recognizes nothing but self, and the way of which is ruthless. Safeguarded the state must be to prevent development of low views of life which make men worse than devils is clear.

WATER SUPPLIES

Reference has been made in the press to the new water supply of the city of Ottawa on which the engineers were the same firm as drew the plans for and supervised the construction of the Belleville filter plant.

So many tributes to the Ottawa plant have been made that Belleville ought to feel proud that the same engineers were put in the Ottawa system installed that here.

The Ottawa system as taken out the color which has been so marked in the water there, the natural water of the Ottawa River being soft but the amount of vegetable matter in solution giving it the appearance of dark oak color, it is said. Ottawa had resorted to various bottled waters brought in from springs in the neighborhood.

Most Boards of Education cannot but feel grateful to the Secondary Teachers' Federation in their effort to help out in the present stringency by suspending the clause referring to maximum salaries of secondary teachers for the present time.

Despise no mortal for the marks of toil
Which, as the slow years pass have marred his frame;
The ploughman bent from turning stubborn soil;
The dim-eyed painter wooing hardy fame,
The kitchen drudge, with large work-roughened hands;
The mother with her weary anxious air;
The weaver's body twisted as he stands;
The narrow-chested scholar in his chair.
All men should wear the scars of life with pride,
As silent witnesses of patient strength
That tell a tale of ease and rest denied,
Of dreams long dreamed and conflicts won at length.
These signs of tasks that filled their hours on earth
Are the insignia which prove men's worth.

WANT IN THE MIDST OF PLENTY has upset all economic precedents, and was so commented upon by Hon. Winston Churchill in an international broadcast from London, England, last Sunday. No famine, no pestilence, flood or fire, but far too much of everything marks the newest phase of what people are pleased to call hard times. Overproduction is not responsible for conditions which have prevailed, but the world for some months, in the opinion of Mr. Churchill, who gives it as his opinion that the fault lies with a break-down in the monetary system, said Mr. Churchill and a readjustment must be made before conditions return to normal.

SIX MILLION DOLLARS ($6,000,000) in newspaper advertising space has been contracted for this year by Sears, Roebuck & Co., great departmental merchants of Chicago, an increase of half a million dollars from the previous year. This firm has 380 retail stores in various parts of the United States and its advertising policy for each store is to use newspapers for publicity purposes almost exclusively. "We have found that our policy of concentrating our retail store advertising in newspapers and using other media only after we feel that an adequate newspaper job has been done, is a policy which has paid us real dividends," said D. M. Nelson, vice president, in charge of merchandising. "In our experience and feeling, so far, we believe we are right in reaching the conclusion that the newspaper does the best job for us." Forty weeks of operation in 1931 gave Sears Roebuck & Co. a net profit of over $9,000,000.

Mercenary Mary, the many times divorced film star, was re-entering the married state. She decided to mention the fact to her director.

"Of course you will understand that this time I am marrying for love and nothing else," she said.

"How romantic," replied the director knowingly. "So at last you have decided to go off the gold standard."

A TRIBUTE TO ENGLISH

It is also a language of unequalled richness and flexibility, which has given the world the finest literature of beauty and aspiration since the Greek. Shakespeare in his use has deserved not only the homage of our heart but of our speech as a mother tongue, but of men of all nations, to whom, as the Prince of Wales said, he is "a universal friend." The Folger Memorial Shakespeare Library in Washington and the Furness Memorial in Philadelphia are fresh tributes far from Stratford to a genius who, as Ben Jonson wrote in the play on the First Folio, "was not of an age but for all time."—New York Times.

SPORTS FOR UNEMPLOYED

A week or two ago, in these columns, we threw out the suggestion that a good work could be done in maintaining the morale of the unemployed by providing them with organized sports activities to fill in their out-of-work hours. This suggestion has been taken up, not by any organization in the city, but by the unemployed themselves, and they are making an effort to establish a regular series of football games, with unemployed men taking part.

Naturally, we are delighted that the unemployed themselves have been the first to act on the basis of this suggestion. We believe, however, that there is room for some assistance and encouragement in placing their games actually on an organized basis. There are organizations in existence which might well take some leadership in this respect, and might even go so far as to have the games employed in securing the necessary equipment for the players. Once again throw out the suggestion that everything possible should be done to forward and take the leadership in this worth-while task.— Oshawa Times.

BRITISH FILMS

It is most gratifying to read the assurance, given in an interview published in the Daily Telegraph today, that the popularity of British films is now so widespread that it is even more gratifying to know that this increasing popularity is based not on the merits of the productions, but entirely on patriotic sentiment. There are evidences that the public is tiring of the stock-in-trade of Hollywood, the sex appeal, the sensual, the spectacular and lurid have had their day. Even the films of financial stringency parties will want more than the money than claptrap. There has, of course, always been a demand for good British films, but it must be admitted that there has been legitimate grounds for complaint sometimes with the specimens which have been shown Canadian theatres. British producers have, however, made distinct progress in recent times; they are studying their audiences more and are sparing neither pains nor efforts to win and to hold the competition.—Hamilton Spectator.

SPIRIT OF WEST

Evidently human nature in the essence has not greatly changed since those days. Those pioneers were endowed by those who laid Ontario of today; and the splendid Ontario of tomorrow is being endowed now by those who are seeking their homesteads in the West. The farmers of three generations ago in the Province met the situation cheerfully, and, one imagines, found their labor nor how small the immediate return. These God-fearing men and women set nothing interfere with their religious devotions. Evidently it is similar today in the West. Pioneers trying times the people are displaying a spirit of fortitude, of hope, and of determination to help through until better conditions return. And that spirit must win.—Toronto Globe.

RADIO BROADCASTING

Doctor Morand did not go too far in pointing out that broadcasting is capable of either a terribly evil influence or of a great influence for good upon the nation. And for that reason if no other it should be publicly controlled.

Government in favor of nationalization is the necessary answer.

Doing in this country from fifty to one hundred times as much broadcasting as is done in Great Britain, it will enable listeners-in throughout the length of Canada to hear Canadian productions if they want to.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

OBJECTIVES MUCH NEEDED IN TRAINING

History in United States Not Studied as it Should Be

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph.D, Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

A few weeks ago at a meeting of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association U. S. A., modern systems of education were scored by several of the speakers. One of a leader in pedagogics and thought in this country.

First of all they charged that schools do not prepare pupils for the practical problems of life which all of them must face. Secondly they emphasize the need of getting children used to what might be termed leisure.

Average, routine school life lays great emphasis upon book knowledge as such; not as it concerns personality problems, but rather as it concerns the 1st, and as interpretation of the subject matter not directly linked with the problem.

For example, except in some colleges, history is studied as a series of dates, facts, and elaborate reigns of kings. It is not studied as it should be, as relation to cause and effect, so that we may learn from the past what is learned by the people of past ages, through bitter experience, to political and social problems which arise now, and will continue to arise so long as we live on this planet.

Teachers often are not allowed by the authorities to add their own personality touches to the work in hand. Just as many facts as they can in a book must be covered in just so many weeks, and examinations be met.

Usually the children see no practical applications of what they learn in their school studies and the ideals they try to engender often are shattered when they go into life after he grows up, because when he learns what life is at first hand his mind makes no link with what he learned within the cloistered walls of the study hall or diploma.

Small wonder, then, that business men in this day, aware of the naivete and unpracticalit of even college and university graduates, and as regards those who merely graduate from the high schools, or do not even do that, that it is not true that most of what they take away with them—supposed as a preparation for life—is quite unpractical and consequently most of the problems they must face and settle for themselves.

Then take the question of leisure. Already the five-day work week is being talked of and will soon become a universal necessity, for machinery is doing and going to keep on producing more, and more efficient, machines. But what will men with such machines to dominate him. He will make it more time for leisure.

How few schools, schools, in their teaching, take that self-evident fact into account? How few of them teach hand work, industry, as punishment and the rest, all of which has its place, but not as an admixture of horse sense—something that is needed in life when there is no job to be done?

As it stands now, many people think of leisure as the proper time to drink, carouse and get generally drunk, and as an excuse for such an opportunity to forget.

Leisure should be more highly prized than that, and more intelligently utilized. Schools should teach hand work, industry, as punishment and the rest, all of which has its place, but not as an admixture of horse sense—something that is needed in life when there is no job to be done?

At a meeting of the Police Commissioners the charge brought against Constable Cook by a back driver there was fully investigated. It appears that Constable Cook was at the station one evening recently when a gentleman arrived in the city, asked him to direct her to a hack driver. The stable Cook of soliciting passengers and he was brought before the Commissioners. After hearing the evidence Constable Cook was fully exonerated and commended for his act of duty. The Commissioners referred to the hack drivers' conduct. Several hack drivers are when trains arrive, are in the habit of the men as they rush and grab valises. Passengers coming here often complain strongly at this kind of a reception. One gentleman recently a gentleman and his wife were separated at the station by the hack drivers and they were compelled to travel to their destination in separate carriages. The trouble is not entirely with the men—the system is wrong and some say should be arranged so that they will all have a fair chance to obtain passengers. No doubt this will eventually be arranged.

BRAVES MAKE DRIVE FOR TOP

Jesse Haines Wins First Start Defeating Phillies

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(A. P. Sports Writer)

Bill McKechnie's Boston Braves may not win the National League title this year, but they promise to establish a brand record for early season slashing of opposition.

For example, possibly the fact that McKechnie has his players fighting for the pennant and taking advantage of every opening, opposing teams have found it hard to retain their equilibrium and it afforded one of the very good reasons why the Braves are in second place today.

The Giants in six engagements have committed 17 bobbles, eight of them in one afternoon and five in another. Brooklyn made 10 in five games with the St. Louis Cardinals, Philadelphia seven in five.

That would seem to have approached the limit, but not so the league leading Chicago Cubs with a threat to surpass anything previously done. Facing Boston for the first time yesterday they were limited in number of errors only by the time they had to depart after nine innings. In the allotted time they managed to compile a more than ancient to the Braves an 8 to 3 victory behind Ed. Brandt.

Brooklyn Dodgers won first blood in their long-awaited series with Cincinnati, 5 to 2, as Babe Phelps hurled scoreless ball after the first inning.

Jess Haines made his initial start of the year for the St. Louis Cardinals and was good enough to beat the Phillies 5-2. The Cards knocked Jim Elliott from the hill in the second and continued the plaster his three successors.

The Pittsburgh-New York game at Pittsburgh was rained out, and only one of four American League engagements carsehing. Cleveland downed out the Boston Red Sox 8 to 4.

ROYALS WING WAY TO TOP

Virtually Tied With Bears For Leadership of League

(By the Associated Press)

Unbeatable for two weeks, Montreal Royals had pushed into a virtual tie with the Newark Bears for the International lead today on the wings of a 13-game winning streak.

Royals won from Buffalo 11 to 7 and lost nine compared to Newark's record of 15 and seven. The percentages, however, still favor Newark, .652 to .556.

Royals' latest victory, a 6-2 conquest of the Baltimore Orioles yesterday, did not come without a hard struggle.

Newark, meanwhile, was finding Del Wetherell of the Rochester Red Wings a comfortable jungle and a 6-0 beating was the result. Wetherell gave up only five hits and a first double play in the ninth ended Newark's effort to score a run.

Buffalo's Bisons, in third place, trounced Reading, 10-1, Joe Bloom or gave up only three hits and Reading failed to get a man past first base until three Barton doubled a homer with two out in the ninth.

Toronto and Jersey City split a double bill, the Skeeters winning the opener 7-2, and Toronto the second game 4-1. The Skeeters' victory, however, was a costly one for their star righthander, Earl Mattingly, suffered a fracture of a bone in his left leg in the fourth inning and will be out for at least a month.

MUSICIANS' PAY IS BROUGHT UP

Ottawa, May 13—Soloists broadcasting over the Canadian National Railways all-Canada network are now paid as much as $125 for one appearance, while the Toronto Symphony Orchestra of fifty-three musicians average about $800 per Sunday, and M. Gratian O'Leary Ottawa, journalist, received $15 each for his Sunday afternoon radio talks, which were a regular feature of the trans-Canada broadcasts during the past winter.

Information concerning the cost of these Canadian National broadcasts was tabled at the meeting of the Railways and Shipping Committee of the Commons yesterday, at the request of Dr. Peter McGibbon (Conservative, Muskoka-Ontario). Details were given for each of the radio stations of the C.N.R. at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Moncton and so forth. The remuneration paid to entertainers singing or playing from the Toronto stations ranged from $75 to $150 per person for the topnotchers performing for the All-Canada Hour, while for the local broadcasts in Toronto, Ottawa and elsewhere from $5 to $10 was paid to singers and lecturers.

RAILWAYS LAX MANION SAYS

Declares They Have Been "Asleep at The Switch"

Ottawa, May 13—The two principal railways in Canada had been "asleep at the switch" for the past ten years in not devising means of competing with the motor cars and trucks, declared Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways, before the Railways and Shipping Committee of the Commons yesterday. It brought his first public utterance on the point.

The minister was impressing on the committee that both the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National were losing their share of passenger trains and that unless they did something to stop losing in many years, were in spite of great efforts the two companies made to develop their freight traffic, would be beaten by uptown ticket offices, by hotels and steamships. There was becoming great expenses to serve the and the public did not pay, namely, the freight.

Hon. W. D. Euler suggested it at that a conclusion should be because the C.N.R. might overemphasize the passenger traffic and neglected the freight side of the business.

Mr. Manion regarded the failure of the railways companies to meet the truck competition as neglecting the freight department.

The railway minister is run at a loss all over this continent, Sir Henry Thornton said, where as metropolitan service, even at very low rates was often very remunerative. He agreed with suggestions from the committee that many first efforts should be made, in co-operation with the C.P.R., to reduce passenger expenditures, but added that if the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. had no hotels in Canada there would be a big drop in tourist trade in this country.

We are making history. We are not in the midst of an economic crisis, but a psychological crisis.—Hendrik Willem Van Loon.

May 21-28—Fifth Annual Celebration of Sports Week

Sport and recreation has become one of the strongest and most powerful influences for the social, physical and mental improvement of the civilized world.

Since human labour is being displaced in huge blocks by scientific inventions all over the world, the total amount of free time to be disposed of will go on increasing and the whole problem of leisure will become one of developing gravity. Industry in its present form of production can not absorb enough to give our great population. There will be, in fact there's now is a human surplus, industrially speaking, and the problem is to find employment for the enormous mass of human energy that is being released.

According to leading economic authorities, the most logical and altogether desirable "safety valve" for this increased leisure energy is further universal participation in sport and recreation.

In line with these thoughts it is interesting and gratifying to note that the fifth annual celebration of Canadian Sports Week will be observed the week off May 21-28.

Sports Week was inaugurated to bring about a more general appreciation of the many advantages that sport offers to the Canadian people. During that week sporting organizations, athletic associations and clubs throughout the country are arranging out-door programmes with a view to increasing membership, and bringing sport more prominently to the notice of those who are "stay-at-homes" and spectators of sport.

In the world of sport the spectator does not derive nearly as much pleasure or benefit as does the participant.

Although it will be readily conceded that only a very small percentage of us can be numbered with the "pros," Sports Week provides the greatest measure of enjoyment when one is merely able to develop his skill.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Manager Gerow assured us last night that he had plenty of open positions for young ambitious baseball players.

The first honest-to-goodness week-out will be in progress at the Fair grounds tonight when all players are asked to be on the job. The pitchers have had a few hard workouts during the exercises and will be ready to throw in the batters about Monday night. Practises will be held every night from now until the opening game vs. the champion Kingston Frontenacs on May 24th.

The ball diamond is quite wet and soggy at present but is being groomed daily for the ever approaching season. The pitcher's mound will be well elevated at present, will be completely raised before the opening game and will have several pitchers of an excellent pitching record to start their stiff from, this season.

The committee in charge of this club's season ticket sales is being received with open arms by the local sport fans. It is the only way to be sure of "give the sporting public a chance to see the game" and they'll respond." All season tickets holders will be guaranteed reserve seats during the league schedule as well as their personal season tickets, which by the way are transferable, by one or two, for the ball game well, you can send some "the referee" in their stead.

Although the local Dinghy Club have not organized for this coming season, they are making extensive plans whereby they will be taking the proposed Sea Scouts organization use their dock and therefore create more interest in that particular line of aquatics.

The boxing and wrestling bouts for the Eastern Ontario and Eastern Ontario, which originally were slated for the 26th and 27th, have been rearranged to be held on May 20th and 21st. Some of the local "fighters and grapplers" are preparing for these contests. Just when the next bout is to be staged, under the auspices of the Belleville Ball Club has not been definitely arranged as yet.

Although there has been considerable controversy as to a possible split in the management of the local hockey players, we are pleased to state authentic has as yet been brought to light, that the new organization is thinking of doing all over the hockey situation in Belleville this season. We hope to learn from other clubs about the difficulties they had been meeting in a big way at the present time. May 15th is the last day in which O.H.A. players may change their residence this spring.

Although there has not been much bally-hoo as to the possibilities of a box lacrosse league being formed locally, we personally know of a local organization which is giving it serious consideration. The proposed league would be played on the ice in the winter, lacrosse, softball, boxing and wrestling in the Belleville Arena during the remaining months. All this organization needs is a little good and financial support in order to make it a success.

According to Cobourg dispatches we notice that the "Sunset Town" is going into the baseball league in a large scale this season. They have induced Jack Clark, who caught for the Fort Hope C.O.R.L. team some years ago to come out of retirement and perform his recovering duties on the club this summer. They are pretty well supplied with pitching and batting, of late Clarence, lads of Bellerville, Tocy Eby, Ike Lott and Stanley Jordon, Phillipy, Walden of Cobourg and Holman of Port Hope are all eligible to take the mound for the Cobourgites when they open the season against the re-juvenated Peterboro club on May 24th at Herne Shaw Park.

If Kingston can get their club on their new grounds this summer which is very doubtful then the C.O.R.L. will boast of four outstanding clubs. Peterboro have James Stevenson Park, Cobourg are using Herne Shaw Park and the Nationals will have a baseball field at the Fair Grounds. At the existing baseball diamond play on the Cricket Field is the question it is to be hoped the Powers can secure the use of the playing field, at the Fair Grounds before the end of the season. We understand that they will have to relate activities at the Cricket Field, however.

Chris Holmes, the genial manager of the Capitol theatre is passing on $50 to C.O.R.L. schedules at the Belleville Nationals headquarters. Mr. Holmes will have 1,500 schedules printed in an ad and they will be given free to the baseball fans of this district. Each schedule is numbered and a corresponding number will be drawn at each home game at the 'Nats'. The holder of this called number will be presented with two tickets for the National's next home game.

When an election approaches, most, if not the treasurer direct to the heart of the voter are by some mysterious means smoothed away without epitaph or flowers. —Carrie Chapman Catt.

ORANGE HALL AGAIN IN USE

Dedication and Re-opening After Fire, Takes Place

Fire, which destroyed the Orange Block in Frankford some months ago, in which part of the records was burned, the lodge room gutted and the lodging places in the block ruined, did not depress the members of the Frankford lodge, they at once, after adjustments started to reconstruct their lodge home. Last night in the presence of many officials of the various Orange Lodges and L.O.B.A., the new Orange Lodge was dedicated and reopened. George A. Reid, who has been honored with many positions in the Orange Lodge, was signally honored by being invited to preside as chairman for the function, and he was accompanied by Mrs. Reid, who is a member of the L.O.B.A.

The honored guests were R. B. Peterkin, D.D.M., of Ontario East; Mrs. W. Gillespie, Grand Mistress of the L.O.B.A. of Ontario East and Rev. A. L. Green, Grand Chaplain of British North America.

A large number sat down to the banquet prepared by the Benevolent ladies, who have worked in the Frankford Lodge and the tables were loaded with all good things. At the conclusion of the bountiful repast, the Chairman called on the following for addresses: R. B. Peterkin, Mr. Gillespie, Rev. A. L. Geen, Rev. Mr. Byers of Stirling, Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. Emerson, Worship County Master; Wor. Bro. J. Ball, Worship District and Wor. Bro. Mayber, Master of Frankford Lodge. Each spoke on the benefits derived from membership in the Orange fraternity and the plans promulgated for the future welfare of the order. The evening was a delightful one and will be remembered locally, we personally know of a local organization which is giving it serious consideration. Favorable comments were heard of the splendid new lodge room.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Canniffon Church was held in the Sunday School Room on Thursday, May 5th with 18 present. Mrs. Cadiey the president opened the meeting with hymn 166, "Take Time to be Holy," followed by all repeating the Lord's prayer. Reports from the various circles were heard.

Mrs. Harry Parnham, member of Group four, then took charge of the meeting. Hymn 6 was sung, followed by Mrs. Harford Tweedy. The Devotional leaflet—was read by Mrs. W. D. Merrill, Judea. "The Man Who Might Have Been." A humorous recitation was given by Mrs. Maguire and an appropriate solo very beautifully rendered by Mrs. Wesse's. A very full and interesting report of the recent Presbyterial held in Madoc was given by Mrs. Bert Gilbert. A vote of thanks was heartily given to Mrs. Gilbert for bringing such a splendid report. Hymn 6 closed the meeting. The meeting closed with prayer and Benediction, after which group four served refreshments and a social half hour was spent.

"THE CROWD ROARS" THRILLING RACE PICTURE ON DOUBLE BILL

Not since the good old days of the late Wally Reid has the screen offered anything to compare with "The Crowd Roars," which is found in "The Crowd Roars," on the two-feature bill starting at the Belle Saturday and Monday, matinee daily.

This is no picture for the weak-hearted. It is jammed with amazing, unbelievable thrills as death-defying demons of the track pound around dirt tracks in their mad quest of victory. Cars collide. They crumple and burn on the track. They hurtle high over the walls with colossal crash. Several of these electrifying scenes are from actual catastrophies filmed at various speedway races.

The drama forms part of the picture which is only about 20 per cent of the whole, has to do with a racing driver's efforts to disgrace his kid brother from following in the hazardous footsteps of the professional driver. But the lad is stubborn and finally proves his mettle himself along with his own exhibition outfit. The picture is much more than the facts of life and of his brother's questionable private affairs.

The cutting is such that the kid defies the champ and marries an easy-going girl who is interested in nothing stops the boy. He makes his big brother look like a boob in a short time is crowned king himself.

In the end, however, the champ becomes a tattered bum and stumbles out on the track and down and out on the track and down and out on the track and down and

Correct Manners

INFORMAL SERVICE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:—

1—A girl and her young man friend are invited to a friend's home and when the sandwiches, cake, sugar and so forth are being passed, should the young man see that everyone is served before himself, including the host and hostesses, or should he help himself as his turn comes?

2—A girl and boy friend are on a crowded street car. The girl is sitting on outside of double seat. The person on the inside of the girl moves over and then is sitting on the inside of the double seat. Should the young man sit next to the girl, or let some girl who is standing have the seat?

1—The courtly young man at such a party will ask for the privilege of assisting at the serving of the refreshments, and if the hostess and hostess are not also assisting (which I should think that they would be), he would include the hostess in the serving, but the host, I should think, would insist that the guest serve himself and then he, the host, would serve himself. It would seem distinctly ungracious for both the hostess and the host to remain inactive about the service and allow the guest to do it all.

The moment that the young man sees that the time for the refreshments to pass, say, the plates for the service, if it is a buffet, or is time to set up the table for refreshments, if they are to eat at the table, he would rise and offer his help her. So would the host, naturally.

Where the young man is gallant and polite, he will let the lady in waiting go first to the table.

DOUBLE-RING CEREMONY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in the midst of preparation of being married soon. I would like to know if it is true that I must be married with two rings? If so, who buys the second ring?

Pee Wee

The double ring ceremony is not often used in this country, but it is entirely correct. However, the bride-to-be should not be meant with the groom-to-be about this, to see if he wishes to wear a ring . . . for most men in this country do not "favor" this.

If the double ring ceremony is to be used, the bride-to-be buys the groom's ring.

INITIALING SILVER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I know it is "tilting and proper" to have my initials engraved on any silver given to me before my marriage, but I don't want the silver to be mine. I want it to be joint, and it very incorrect to have the man's initials put on it? I don't care so much about my own initials on the linens, but I do resent the silver.

H.

Since you feel so definitely about this, by all means have your silver engraved with the initials of your name-to-be. The world of bridge-to-be is divided on this question, and most many of them use the initials of the married name. It is entirely a matter of choice, a matter of whether you wish to abide by the convention of the old days, or use the more "modern" form. Conservative brides choose the former; less conventional ones choose the latter. But don't worry about being criticised, for you won't be.

I'm a bit concerned with your words "the man's initials". These are not used. It is the initials of these your informal married name say Mary Smith marries John Brown. Then the silver would be marked, if you use the married initials, with M.B.B.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Weddings

BARTLETT—WOODS

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at Bridge street parsonage, Belleville, on Wednesday, May 11th, when Thelma Woods, eldest daughter of Mrs. B. Woods, of Bridge street, became the bride of Rev. Arnold Bartlett, eldest son of Mr. A. Bartlett, 34 Burton street, Belleville.

The bride looked charming in a navy blue georgette frock with hat and coat to match and carried a bouquet of carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrell Brickman acted as best man and never maid.

After the ceremony all went to the home of the groom, where a delightful luncheon was served just immediate relatives attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett will take up residence at 329 1-2 Front street, Belleville.

BIBLE SOCIETY NAMES OFFICERS

British and Foreign Bible Society of Roslin District Convenes

Roslin, May 12—By Mail—The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society for the Roslin District was held in the Presbyterian Church at Roslin on Tuesday evening, May 10th at 8.30 p.m.

The Roslin District includes all the United Church charges in the Trenfield circuit and the Roslin Circuit. The Anglican Churches at Roslin and Tomkinsburg and the Presbyterian Church at Roslin in all, ten churches are included.

Mr. Harry Foster of Chapman, President of the District occupied the chair.

The meeting opened by singing hymn 276 "Breathe on me Breath of God."

Rev. D. C. Hill led in prayer and the Scripture lesson Matthew, 4th Chapter, 23rd to 8th chapter 3rd verse was read by Rev. E. N. Grant.

After this the secretary-treasurer Mrs. W White gave her report.

The election of offices resulted in the election of the following: Honorary Presidents, Rev. J. W. Flath, Rev. E. N. Grant and Rev. D. C. Hill.

President, Mr. Harry Foster, Chapman.

Vice Presidents—Mr. Wm. Morton, Tomkinsburg; Mrs. Donald Leslie, Roslin; Mr. H. K. Denyes, Zion Hill; Mr. Hicks, Plainfield. Secretary Treas. Mrs. W. White, Roslin.

It was decided to have an executive meeting the latter part of June to decide a date for a Bible Sunday to be held early in July when the Ministers of the different churches will stress the importance of the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society and also to appoint collectors to visit the people in their homes after these services.

Mr. W. Stocks a representative of the society was present and gave an interesting address taking as his text Matt. 16 Chapter and the 15th verse. And he said unto them, Go ye into the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Speaking of the depression Mr. Stocks said, in these difficult times there is a greater circulation of the Bible than ever, and therefore a greater opportunity for distribution. The Bible Society is entirely dependent on the people for financial support.

Speaking of his text Mr. Stocks said, this was one of the last commands given by our Lord to his Disciples after his resurrection and before his ascension.

The Missionaries of the different denominations are dependent on the Bible Society for translation of the Scriptures into the different languages.

Mr. Stocks spoke of the work of the society in Foreign lands as well as in our own country. Millions of copies of the Scripture being distributed each year.

At the close of Mr. Stocks address, Rev. Hill moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker and this was seconded by Rev. Grant.

The President closed the meeting with prayer.

During the past generation the spirit of love of neighbors has grown by leaps and bounds. — Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Hurry and Worry Undermine Beauty

Clad in a new evening frock, her coiffure a delight, the sham complexion laid on with a discreet hand and her whole air that of one who regards herself as she is about to be off for the merry evening. She experiences a thrilling satisfaction in looking her best, even though she may not approve the rest that Nature gave her, or consider her ears anything to brag about. There are always some inherited defects.

In the early hours of morning she comes dragging in. She has perhaps been to the theatre and afterwards to a little supper. She has done nothing to produce an appearance of wreckage, but there it is. Frock just as gorgeous, coiffure without one hair out of place. But on the face not a bit of that early evening freshness but instead a distinct pulled-down dreariness. What's the answer to that? Disregard for health laws. Too much hurry; maybe, too much worry. And a possibly lack of clear grit doesn't get enough sleep.

Not that she has gone alive or forties in vigorous health, with a will that carries emotional flare-ups, with a calm outlook on life, should be able to get through an evening of entertaining and pleasure without undertaking on that haggard look. She should appear on the scene looking at midnight as at seven in the evening. But does she? Usually she doesn't. Every woman hates that "party-is-over" face of hers.

Buoyancy of spirit and the staying powers of youth are rewards that come when a woman does a bit of thinking, when she doesn't rush through life in a hare-brained fashion, believing that the human machine has the endurance of a locomotive. She knows that she must carry on some kind of a job, if she is to keep that wholesome state of mind, as idleness produces mildew in the mind. She finds ways to combat the imps of worry. And though this age be one of hustle and bustle, she takes things as they come, without undue hurry.

It isn't easy to keep poised, to be always tactful, because human beings are but human. Their reactions which, under stress, gives way to self-pity and all manner of disturbing and weakening emotions. No trick to say a person shouldn't worry. There are times when will power must be strong indeed to swallow it, when it is the bugler, tied it to go hence.

The woman who goes about each small task with groaning and moaning instead of grappling with it, getting at it, finishing it is the girl who ages before her time, gathers furrows in her brow. Her opposite, who is courageous and who has worked out a philosophy that boosts her over the hurdles and the rough spots, is the one who becomes a jolly grey old grandmother, beloved by the youngsters because she is abreast of the times, treating along with the crowd.

What a woman thinks and how she lives have to do with how she looks. Faces are creat in the making— or unmaking—as the case happens to be.

Then Came the Dandelion

(By Barbara B. Brooks)

March winds blew; April rains fell and—then came the dandelions! In the Spring parade of "greens" which invades our markets every year, there are thirty-nine varieties in all, everything from A to W (artichoke to watercress). The most attracting the most attention and getting the most applause and being greeted with the warmest is the dandelion.

Perhaps the enthusiast wrote: "If dandelions displace your garden, eat 'em, by all means." This is a sound bit of advice especially at this time of the year when dandelions are young and tender and when gardens need manicuring. There is nothing with a better flavor, and as the first mess of dandelion greens. They have a flavor which is half-pungent and half-bitter; only epicures describe it well. Then of course cooks have hidden qualities, minerals and vitamins, which are better known and never mentioned since some people have queer quirks about eating many foods which are good for them. And greens always fail in that classification.

There are different ways of serving dandelions. Some like them hot; some like them cold. The wonderful child John Henry who rose up in bed a few days after birth and called for a slab of bacon and a pot of greens was right about certain kinds of flavor.

DANDELIONS AND BACON

1 pound dandelions, 3 pints bacon, salt and pepper, 1 cup water

Dandelions are delicious in salads or wilted. For salads they may be used with other greens or vegetables

COLD DANDELION SALAD

1 pound dandelions 1 cup French dressing, 1 clove garlic

Rub the mixing bowl with garlic add the cleaned, chilled dandelions pour over the French dressing and toss until leaves are well covered. Serve alone or in combination as follows:

Dandlions with quartered hard-cooked eggs.

Dandelions and sliced tomatoes.

Dandelions, cucumber and radish.

Dandelions, romaine and minced celery.

Dandelions, chicory and chopped olives.

Dandelions, escarole and chives, chopped.

WILTED DANDELION GREENS

Wash greens thoroughly and shake until dry. Fry minced bacon until crisp and then remove piece of bacon. Add freshly cut greens and to-the hot bacon fat and heat quickly. Beat eggs slightly; add sugar and mix well. Add milk and All-Bran and heat. Stir dry ingredients and add to first mixture. Pour into greased muffin pans and cook sliced bacon. Bake in (400) degrees F.) oven for 30 minutes. Remove from pans and serve under 3 minutes to brown bacon.

Yield: 18 small pieces.

Something different again is the informal evening coat for wear with informal evening frocks. Such a model is done in black velvet. The wrap is of three-quarter length and a fabric belt marks the high waistline. The neck is collarless and there is a two-skin marten scarf.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Still under cover are most shoulders these spring nights. A lovely frock of flame red chiffon has a huge chiffon bow with the ends sticky with deep borders of gray fox. In contrast to the sophisticated frock, the shoulders are covered and there is a half sleeve.

The hand of time has turned back the pages of the fashion albums. A frock of black chiffon with two enormous pink chiffon roses in front has a jacket of black taffeta which ties at the waist and is distinguished by short sleeves puffed by elastic into an enormous size.

Red and mesh can be read into the bonnet this Spring for so many of the hats are just flower-trimmed bonnets. A rather deep crown of brown point straw makes one hat and lowered it very much to one side, is a large wreath of orange, pink and yellow marigolds tied with brown and yellow ribbon.

A nice match is that of black and red, especially for evening wear. A black tulle frock has a skirt with pleated insets and is worn with a brief jacket of cheery red crepe fastened with ruby cabochon buttons. The short sleeves are edged with silver fox.

C.P.R. AGAIN TO A RECORD LOW

Price Recessions Are a Reflection of New York Board

TORONTO, May 13.—Another slow but nevertheless enervating decline marked the progress of the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Action of the inter-listed issues indicated that price recessions here were a reflection of the continued weakness in New York. Rails were still under pressure in the larger centres and C.P.R. went down with the group until on the local board it reeled at its former record low of 12.

Bradlian as 9 3-4, Nickel at 5 3-4, Ford of Canada at 7 5-8, Steel of Canada at 9 were all down from last night. Of these steel was at a new low and the others within fractions of their lowest points. Last year The preferred made a new low at 1-2 point decline to 76.

Olé critted lower with the rest of the market, despite the fact the outlook for the company is much brighter than in quite some time. Hollinger likewise was unchanged while the food and chain store stocks were inactive. Bell Telephone and Consumers' Gas, B.C. Power A. were also unchanged. Shawinigan sold just below 17.

Pending completion of funeral plans the body of the baby remained in the undertaker's parlors in Trenton where the autopsy was performed shortly after midnight Monday.

As President Hoover in Washington was ordering the federal law enforcement agencies to redouble relentless and unending pursuit of the slayers, state and county officials gathered in Trenton to plan concerted action to bring the criminals to justice.

Statements were taken during the night from Dr. Charles H. Mc Condon, the "Jafsie" of the case, and from "A number of other people purported to have information," the police official said.

March 1. Mrs. Lindbergh did not appear at the class Thursday School this morning to meet her classes in chemistry.

This morning she boarded a train for the east after arranging for a substitute teacher to take over her classes. Her associates at the high school said Mrs. Lindbergh requested that no one talk to her about the baby.

Must Clean Up Gangland.

Vatican City, May 13 (AP) speedy punishment for the slayer of the Lindbergh baby was demanded today by Osservatore Romano, unofficial organ of the Vatican.

F. A. JAMIESON GETS NEWS BEAT

A.P. Correspondent Has News of Finding Hour Before Others

New York, May 13—Here is how the finding of the body of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was first given to the world late yesterday.

Frederick A. Schwarzkopf had charge of the kidnapping. Francis A. Jamieson, Associated Press staff correspondent in Trenton, learned Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of New Jersey State police, had summoned newspaper men to the state police barracks at Hopewell for an announcement.

Jamieson immediately raced two other Associated Press staff men to Hopewell. He knew the correspondents of the executive offices of Governor A. Harry Moore, in Trenton.

Governor Moore was not there. Jamieson called the Governor at his home in Jersey City and learned the New York office of the Associated Press by telephone had called the wire open.

Governor Moore said he had just learned Colonel Schwarzkopf had been trying to get him by telephone. Jamieson asked the governor if he would call Schwarzkopf immediately. He told the governor he had another line to Schwarzkopf, Jamieson told the governor that Governor Moore residence.

In a few seconds, Governor Moore shouted to Jamieson:

"Get ready and here for you. The Lindbergh baby has been found dead."

Then came the other details, quickly relayed by Jamieson to the New York office and to the waiting extra telephone, even as he talked with the governor.

But over the Associated Press news circuits, running to all sections of the world, flashed one of the greatest news "beats" in newspaper history.

Flash:

Flash: Later, Schwarzkopf's formal announcement was made at Hopewell.

Captain Watson Inspects Corps at Stirling High School

Stirling—The annual Cadet Inspection took place on the High School campus on Wednesday, May 11th, at 10.30 a.m. Captain Watson of the Imperial Army was the inspector. The cadet officers are: Arthur Gould, Captain; Donald Ward, No. 1 Platoon Commander; Lorne Bateman, No. 2 Platoon Commander; Kenneth Stapley, Sergeant Major; Clifford Holmes and Gerald Frederick, No. 1 Platoon Sergeants; Paul Stewart and William Sutherland, sergeants of No. 2 Platoon; Aubrey Rodgers and Gerald Sprenkell, No. 2, corporals. Fred Joblin, Signal Sergeant.

There were thirteen signallers on parade. Those who were classed as "good," Arthur Gould, Fred Joblin, John Monroe, Fred Beckett, F. Stewart, Clifford Holmes were presented with certificates for semaphore signalling, besides a cheque for $2.00 each.

The fact that the inspector had no fault to find with the cadets is certainly to the credit of the corps and the officers in command.

Mrs. Molly Girdwood spent a few days with Mrs. Dora Wescott and other friends in this vicinity.

St. Paul's W.M.S.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's W.M.S was held in the church parlors on Tuesday, May 10th, at 2.30 p.m. with the president, Mrs. Mackpin in the chair. "Rescue the Perishing" was sung, then Miss Rume led in prayer. The various reports were given and the minutes read and approved. Mrs. H. C. Manley read a paper she had prepared on "Motherhood." She said oftentimes mothers spoiled their children by being too lenient with them and sometimes fathers by too much of the upbringing of their children to the Mothers' training. The roll call was answered by a verse bearing on prayer.

As this meeting was given over entirely to Temperance and in charge of Mrs. R. Duffin, Temperance Secretary of the local W.M.S. instead of the usual scripture lesson, verses bearing on alcoholic liquors were read by the following ladies: Mrs. Hockey, Miss Kingston, Mrs. Gordon Ward, Mrs. George White, Mrs. Cortigi, Mrs. H. C. Martin. Miss Leslie Gordon then gave an excellent paper on Temperance. Mildred White recited "Poor House Man" in an effective way. The closing prayer was offered by Mrs. E. W. Rowland.

St Andrew's Guild

The Guild met on Monday evening, the program was in charge of Mrs. Roger Meidejohn. Mrs. Rollins presided over the meeting. Mrs. Frank Cosbey read the Scripture lesson and Rev. A. N. Reid led in prayer. The girls of Mrs. Meidejohn's S. S. class, Eva Chambers, Treneida Eggleton and Marguerite Rosebush, gave an account of the famous women of the Bible—the famous women being, Ruth, Dorcas and Deborah. Jack Moire and Marietta McKee each contributed a piano solo. Mrs. Rollins' class of boys sang "Dare to be a Daniel," Harold Baker a reading. Miss Gena Spry's class consisting of Helen and Amy McTaggart, Shirley Ormiston, Jean Salisbury and Jean Dunham, sang "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam." The main feature of the evening was a play entitled the "Forgetful Husband." The cast follows:

The Forgetful Husband, A. Duncan; the Wife, Mrs. D. Lamb; her Mother, Miss L. Smith; Curious Neighbors, Mrs. R. F. Williams and Miss Gena Spry; Maid, Miss Frances Allan.

The young couple were disagreed as to the anniversary of their marriage a year previous, on February 28th. She contended the anniversary should be February 29th and he, the first of March and indifferently he forgot about the anniversary until reminded of it.

A chorus entitled "The Blue Ridge Mountain Home" was sung by Misses Ernest Cain, A. Duncan and Messrs Derakly. The benediction was given the interesting meeting. Mr. Furnival was present and accompanied the hymns with his violin.

St. Paul's League

St. Paul's League met on Monday evening with an attendance of 42. The devotional exercises were in charge of the president, Mr. Jr. Hulin. Mrs. E. Snowdon read the Scripture lesson, and Mrs. Hulin led in prayer and gave a short commentary thereon; Mrs. Rowland led in prayer. Donalda Richardson presided over the remaining program. A chorus entitled "A Little Kingdom I Possess" was sung by Madeline Loerz. Olive and Jean Monroe. A splendid reading entitled "When Children did reading entitled "When Children did reading entitled "When God was given by Marion Bailey. Miss Laurena Scott delighted the audience in her rendering of "Norwegian Bridal Procession" by Greig, on the piano.

The outstanding feature of the evening was a missionary address by Mrs. J. Monroe, second vice-president. In her subject, "Pioneer Christian Missaries," the speaker traced the early missionary work of the Christian Church from the time of St. Paul. In the 18th Century Canada awoke to the necessity of sending missionaries to heathen lands. She specialized on the work of the New Hebridies missionaries. Donalda Richardson pulled the "Curtain" contained bits red and white cards gaining equal honors. The Misspah Benediction closed this instructive meeting.

HOMEBREW MUST NOT BE SERVED

Magistrate Finds Treating Friends Illegal Action

Windsor, Ont., May 12 (CP) — A flat ruling that home brew can not be served to friends or neighbors came today from Deputy Magistrate A. A. Hanuman in county police court at Sandwich as he imposed a fine of $50 and costs or one month upon Joseph Keyman, of Colchester North Township.

"It is my considered opinion that the wording of the section places a definite and continuing restriction upon the accused to confine the use of beer brewed by him to himself and the members of his family," the magistrate declared.

"Admittingly, the two-men found consuming beer upon the premises of the accused were not members of his family, and to hold that he was entitled to serve them this beer would be placing a wider interpretation upon the wording of the act than I believe is warranted."

UNITED STATES IS GOING FOR ITS BEER

Results in Primaries in Ohio Show Way

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 12.—(By Mrs. Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—By all the signs and portents the United States is going for beer and that right early, probably within two years.

"WHITTLIN" IS PLEASING PLAY

Carrying Place A.Y.P.A. Present Splendid Entertainment

Carrying Place—The first presentation of the A.Y.P.A. play "Whittlin'" was given in the Parish Hall here on Friday evening before a large crowd. The play was enthusiastically received, and a fairly large sum was realized. Rev. A. E. Tavener of Consecon acted as chairman, and the members of the cast were introduced by the author of the play, Mr. Clifford Baker.

The play centres around a young fellow, "Dopey" Jim", who is kicked off a freight train one day and is taken into the home of Mrs. Watson, a motherly old soul, who finds in him some resemblance to her own boy who was reported missing overseas. Ruthie, and her daughter Ruthie, do their best to make a home for the young fellow, and he, during his stay in their home, discovers that they are much in debt, particularly to a clutching, grasping cantankerous old Scot, Angus MacGregor, (or Adam Good, "Old Doc" Yak", is a friend of the family, and throughout the play, he volunteers his advice or assistance else to whittle whenever any emergency occurs. Eventually Ruthie and Angus hit on a way to make money the plan being to make toys to sell with Jim and his whittling as the basis of the idea. Angus, however, when Angus comes to foreclose the mortgage, they have no money, so Jimmie takes Mother Ruthie's "Chinie Chinie Fund" from the Rose where she has hidden it and pays Angus only to pick his pocket as he draws him out the door. Jimmie discovers this appears; and Angus is sure then that he has stolen the money. But when Jimmie returns from the village with a bank account paid for an option on all toys that they may make, he changes entirely, and becomes very meek. The play ends happily with Doc, "after twenty-seven years", persuading Angus Williem to elope with him, and with Ruthie and Jimmie deciding that they can not do without each other.

The parts of Mother Wilson and of Ruthie are played very capably by Misses Helen MacDyzaill and Aileen Hamilton respectively, and Fred Hennessey gives a very convincing performance as Dopey Jim. Adam Good, Miss Marian Griffin gives the play its name, is represented by Mr. Arthur Norrington, Clipping one of Jimmie's former pals, is played by Mr. Murray MacDonald, and Johnnie, a messenger boy who aims to be efficient, by Miss Joan Pearce. Annabelle is a neighbour girl, who is constantly giggling, and the part is taken by Miss Margaret Cockburn-bush. An outstanding performance was the one given by "Sandy" Greig in the character of the tight-listed Angus MacGregor. Sandy's acting and excellent acting brought forth rounds of applause, and his convincing way of grabbing all the money in sight caused a great deal of amusement.

During the intermission between the first and second acts the stage was darkened and a quartet consisting of Misses Nora Hennessey and Bernice Ow and Messrs. A. Norrington and Sandy Greig sang very effectively the number "Mondlight and Roses". The stage was beautifully decorated with a large lattice covered with climbing roses in front of a large illuminated moon.

In the second intermission a short dialogue, "Dumb as a Dorkknob" was given with Miss Grace Fitchett as the incorrigible maid. This sketch brought many laughs.

A short pause in the third act denoted the passage of a number of hours; and while the curtain was down Mr. Arnold Wrose sang "A Picture of Life's Other Side", accompanying himself on the autoharp.

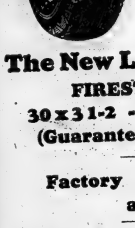
Peter used to be home every night at six, but then the firm sent him out on the road. It was what he had been working for, but how he and Marion dreaded being apart all week!



The very first Monday night, Peter was so blue and lonely that he telephoned home. "Extravagant," he told himself, but when he paid the bill he found it was only the price of a magazine or a package of cigarettes.

And now, their troubles are over. Every Tuesday and Thursday at 8.30, when night rates begin, Peter calls home. They are the hours Marion waits for to break the week, and the few cents the calls cost pay big dividends because Peter has a freer mind for his new job.

Long Distance is so easy to use, so speedy and surprisingly inexpensive.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

"No —not exactly—you don't understand."

She paused, evenly, ignoring him. "Who, then?"

After a time she had it all from him: models, actresses, girls, as she afterwards put it, of the questionable profession. Then she leaned back in her chair.

"I am disappointed with you, sir," she said in her carefully restrained manner. "Very hurt. Very disappointed."

He sprang. "Where's the harm? I'm not a child, I'm a man. I can go out and have a jolly evening, can't I, without being submitted to a cross-examination?"

She stiffened.

"You are not a man. You are nineteen. A boy. And I am not cross-examining you, as you impertinently term it. I am asking you questions every mother has a right, a duty, to ask her son. I am compelled to be both mother and father to you, Lennox, and I cannot shirk my duty and I will not. I take the wrong turning, unwarned, unadmonished—"

"The wrong turning!" he repeated, dully. He was bewildered, tired. The glow of the wine had died out of him. He felt cold, he knew a return of the old, intolerable depression, which was not physical yet made him sick.

"Whose feet, take hold on hell."

She said gravely. She leaned forward, spare in her severe black dress, the high-necked night gown encircling her unwilling throat, her dark eyes tragic, her hair in a childish, almost pitiful braid over one lean shoulder.

"Drinking—women—these ruined your father morally," said Louisa. "For every tear he cost me, he suffers now. I will not see you walk the same way to destruction. You are my son. You are your grandfather's son, and I will never again seek company of this kind."

Lennox answered, sick with shame that she could so speak to him of his father. "But I haven't done anything wrong. I don't see why I should promise." Boyhood's adamant terror spoke in his tones as he added, very low, "Every one will laugh at me."

"In the ridicule of your fellows fools most terrifying to you than the wrath of your God?" she asked him, and instantly he saw her hand flash to her heart, saw how her head fell back, saw her face go swimming. She gasped faintly, "On the bureau—the drops."

He ran across the room, caught up the vial, measured the dose into the glass which always stood ready, and returning, held it to her mouth. His hand shook, he silently cursed the rumbler who was livid, bluish-tipped.

Un his knees beside her, imploring her to open her eyes, to speak to him, to be better, he gave his promise.

Much later she lay alone, the terrible pain gone from her. She was weak from it, but she was strong with her triumph. She knew what Lennox did not know—that she would never die in these attacks. She had had plain speaking from Doctor Peters from the specialists. "They would not deny the reality of her pain, it existed, it was. Yet it would never kill her. All nerves, nothing organic. She did not know, they had not told her, even if they suspected it, that it was her form of escape.

On the following day, Mrs. Sheldon went to her son's room to look over his clothes, to send things out to the tailor's. She always did this herself, not even Nanna was allowed the duty. She picked up his evening clothes, Powder, very fine and soft, on the jacket lapel, the shoulder. She rubbed at it absently. "It must have had some sort of a cold cream base, for it smeared and clung." And there was about it the ghost of a heavy fragrance. Methodically, she went through his pockets. With his handkerchiefs and some stray coins she found a wisp of cheap lace and embroidery and a card.

Louisa held it between thumb and forefinger and read it. A card is quite a public thing.

She sat down, on a straight chair, the coat across her lap, Lily's card in her hand.

Lennox was nineteen. He had called himself a man. He was not a man, his mother told herself as firmly as she had told him. But he was—sufficiently a man.

Lennox, she thought, must marry young.

A physical pain took her, twisted her heart. She sat quite still, dreading an attack. After a time it passed, she opened eyes grey and lifting there, went on with her thoughts.

He must marry. To be saved.

She thought of him, young, slender, tall, in her eyes more beautiful than any youthful god who ever trod Olympus. A wave of pride drenched her. He would marry and have sons—sons in whom she could live as she was living in him. He would perpetuate the name. He would assure to her the earthly immortality.

She knew her mind made up, the snifts scheme unrolling as smoothly before her as a ball of ribbon. She renewed about the room, folding garments, laying them aside, conveiling the horrible confusion of the bedroom.

The girl must be very young. Very malleable. Of Louisa's choice. She must be healthy, she must have beauty, she must not have money. Good blood must be vital in her veins and she must be not be clever. Men disliked clever women, evaded

Louisa.

Above all, she must be brought into constant, clever contact with the boy, over a long period of time —a year, two years.

CHAPTER TWO

Mrs. Sheldon sat in her room and sat down at her secretary, the old one which she had brought with her from her father's house. She started at it thoughtfully, drew a sheet of paper toward her, took up her pen.

For over an hour she sat there making no marks upon the fine, creamy linen. Then she dipped her pen in the ink and wrote, unhurried but without hesitancy.

"My dear Elizabeth:

"I have been thinking of you so much during the past few days, wondering how you are and why I have not heard from you. It is unlike you to ask something of me. I want you to send me a letter. As you know, Lennox is attending Columbia. He is busy with his friends, his studies. The world revolves about him. I am lonely in this great house. Henrietta is still with me, but she is a growing younger, she is ailing much of the time. I have always regretted no daughters came to bless my home and to companion me in my middle years. If I may have Miss, beth I promise you she shall be as my own. I will provide teachers for her, I will travel with her, she shall have every advantage socially and socially. On my death, she shall be independent. I have always been fond of her. That picture shows me a sweet, innocent face, charming and lovable. You, over, talk with her, see if she is willing to come to me, if you are willing to part with her. We would come to see you, you would not be wholly out of from her. I feel that it will be a great happiness to me to have her, that it will be happiness for Lennox too, to have a little sister in the house.

"Let me hear from you soon. If you decide to let her come I will send my maid to Boston to bring Elizabeth to me. Do not bother about clothes. I will provide every thing.

"I know I am asking a great sacrifice of you, but I feel that you will never regret it.

"Affectionately your friend,

"Louisa Lennox Sheldon."

She reread the letter, set it aside. After a time she sealed it in the envelope addressed it and sat back in her chair her eyes resting thoughtfully on the small white square.

Ella Eyeland was a very distant connection of Louisa's. She was a sister of the improvident, well-bred man who had married Louisa's elder Emmeline. Emmeline was dead, her husband was beaten. Ella Eyeland remained in Boston, a widow with three daughters and a very little money—a small income, safely invested, enough perhaps for one but not for four. The two eldest daughters were public school teachers. Elizabeth, the baby, was now eighteen. Mrs. Sheldon had seen her a year and a half previously while on a visit to the Lennoxes. A simple child, graceful, docile.

Louisa smiled. She had no doubt of the answer. Ella would read the letter through, tears of pious joy. And she would write, gushing with gratitude —coy little girl. Ella's little girl that.

The child herself would be glad to come. It was not in nature that she would not be. Louisa remembered the small, moth-eaten house in the unfashionable district, the made-over clothes. Elizabeth had probably never owned a new dress in her life.

Mrs. Sheldon rang for the boiler gave him the letter to mail, and watched him out the room and rose stiffly, to her feet, and went to the window. Her room faced the Square. After a time she saw him emerge from the house and cross the street. Her fancy could hear the metallic, final sound of the letter-box flap dropping into place.

For an instant she had an impulse to run after him, to bid him, by any means, reclaim the letter.

Too late.

Well, she must submit to having her household upset, the even tenor of her ways disturbed must be resigned to the intrusion of somebody young and thoughtless, not her own.

Lennox and Elizabeth Howland. With care, it could be managed.

Suddenly she was aware that she had lied in her letter to Ella. She had written, "I have always been fond of her." A grandiloquent, sentimental phrase. She had never examined into the state of her feelings toward the girl. Now she knew that she disliked her cousin's child. Curious, she had not realized it a few moments ago. Had she been hasty?

She turned from the windows. Not accustomed to facing fear she did not recognize it when she encountered it.

Elizabeth's mother, upon the arrival of the letter was tearful and triumphant. "Oh, Elizabeth," in speech were as painful as guinea fowl, as shrill, as undirected—my little girl—to leave me—I cannot possibly—so good of Louisa—of course the child will be company for her—Lennox, now, such a nice boy as I remember him—handsome —all the advantages—my little Betty—not a thing fit to wear—where did we put the good packing trunk? —telegraph—no write first —I can't bear to think of the house empty for one minute—I shall be right.

Elizabeth herself was an animated exclamation mark! New York! Away from this stuffy house and the slippery horsehair furniture and Fanny's last year's dress and Ella's year-before-last-coat. Out of it! Theatres! Dances! Frocks and slippers! She talked, questioned, answered, at random. "I don't remember Lennox, Mother. Was he dark or fair? No of course, Aloe, Columbia isn't Harvard!"

"But I'll miss them," she thought, laying awake through the long, last nights. She tried to see, with her eyes shut, her mother's harried face. She thought lovingly of her sisters, she cried a little and heaved a little more and was genuinely horrified to mark how the features of her own people blurred into the dark.

What did Lennox look like? How bad Louisa Lennox ever come to see them? What relation were they really? Not cousins. Oh, it was so complicated. Mr. Sheldon was her mother's brother's sister-in-law—cousin, then, for courtesy and simplicity. How many days between herself and the great adventure? Oh, she couldn't go—comfortable, awkward, young, Elizabeth! Could she leave her mother? Could she endure to wait?

Louisa, folding up the telegram which had followed Ella's agitated, incoherent, acquiescent letter, smiled, with her lips. "The girl would come. So far, so good. She cast a dismayed glance about her room, about, mentally, the entire fourth floor, a stranger—a stupid, emotional girl. She asked herself, "Have I done wisely?"

She told Lennox, after the plans were made, and very casually.

"I've invited Elizabeth Howland for an indefinite visit."

"Elizabeth?" He knitted his brows. "Oh, of course. But I don't remember her very well. Legged kid, wasn't she, when I saw her last?"

His mother winced. She disliked slang fastidiously and legs intensely. She answered, carefully

"I do not imagine that you would remember her. She was very young the last time you were in Boston."

After a moment he asked, not caring particularly, "Indefinite visit you said? But why, exactly?"

Mrs. Sheldon explained, patiently.

"Ella Howland is very badly off, indeed. Three daughters and so little money. I have been thinking for some time that I would like a companion. Cousin Henrietta is not at all well. And you are away all day. Soon you will be taking your place in your father's business, and you will be even more away from me. You will marry, will set up your own establishment It occurred to me that I would not only be benefitting Ella but myself if she permitted me to take the responsibility of her daughter I had even thought of adopting her, but that was rash, until we see how things work out. I think we can find interests and amusement for the child. I live quietly, of course, but it will be a complete change from her very limited surroundings."

Lennox smiled. He had not seen his mother as expansive in some time. Never, now that he thought it over, had the strands of the latchkey she had been very noticeably withdrawn from him. Perhaps with a girl in the house—it, fine over—she might turn her attention from him.

"You're always doing things like this. I don't mean adopting children, of course, but being, oh, awfully kind and generally benevolent in a quiet way. I wonder if you'll like her?"

His mother's face softened at the careless praise. It was quite true, her purse was always open to the unfortunate. She did not commit indiscriminate charity, but she was a rock of strength to distressed people. Not sympathetic perhaps, not impulsive, but generous with her money, her time, her advice.

She felt the hungry, the clothed the naked, she succored the suffering. She obeyed, and very strictly, the letter of the Law.

"Ella Howland's daughter could not be anything but likable," was all she answered

MR. AND MRS.— YOU NEVER CAN TELL, CAN YOU?

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 23.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

In the camp of the strangers one was speaking excitedly to the other! "There is not the slightest doubt about it, Malbihn! But why the old scoundrel hasn't claimed the reward puzzles me!" "There are some things deeper to an Arab's heart, Jensaen, than money." "Revenge is one of them," answered the other. "It won't do any harm to TRY the power of gold," replied Jensaen. The other shrugged: "Not on the Sheik, but we might bribe his men."

But bribery failed—gruesomely! They succeeded in luring a young headman of the village to their scheme, who, for a certain sum, was to deliver Meriem to the Swedes late that night Immediately after dark the two white men prepared to break camp the moment the headman brought that which they awaited. Toward midnight came the sound of many footsteps. As they prepared the firelight, Jensaen saw that two of the men carried a litter.

Jensaen cursed beneath his breath. Could the fool be bringing other than the living prize he had paid for? The bearers came to a halt before the white man. "This has your gold purchased," said one of them. They set the litter down, turned, and vanished into the blackness of the jungle. The thing upon the litter was covered with a piece of cloth. "He should have known we wanted her alive," said Malbihn, as he jerked away the cover.

At sight of what lay beneath, both men stepped back—involuntary oaths upon their lips—for there before them lay the dead body of the faithless headman, with the Sheik's own dagger in his heart, telling its wordless message . . . Five minutes later, the "safari" of Jensaen and Malbihn was moving, forcing its way rapidly toward the west, with a dozen natives guarding the rear from the attack they momentarily expected.

Ruthlessly Slain by Heavy Blow and Tossed Out of Speeding Car Infant's Body Found by Negroes

MATTED BLONDE HAIR, SHREDS OF CLOTHING TRAGICALLY IDENTIFY CORPSE

Famous Flier and Wife Bear Blow Bravely as Authorities Launch Greatest Man-Hunt in History of United States; Newsmen Summoned to Hopewell For Announcement.

Hopewell, N. J., May 13.—The body of Baby Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., murdered by his abductors, was found yesterday concealed beneath a brush pile on Mount Rose Hill, within sight of the home from which he was stolen 73 days ago.

Scraps of tattered clothing near the body were identified by Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh as identical with the little sleeping suit worn by her child when he was put to bed on the evening of March 1. Identification was completed at an autopsy in Trenton.

The baby had been killed at least two months ago, according to Coroner Charles H. Mitchell, who said death was caused either by a blow on the head or by the kidnappers' brutality in throwing the child from an automobile. The baby's skull was fractured, and a hole the size of a 25-cent piece was above the right ear.

Manhunt Organizing

The tragic discovery, announced to the world at a sudden press conference called this afternoon, set in motion what promises to be the greatest manhunt in the history of the country.

It came after weeks of frantic, futile efforts to obtain the child's return by bargaining at any price. It came after Col. Lindbergh himself pitifully deluded by false promises, had given $50,000 to bring his baby back—the baby that was then lying dead in the dessolate Sourlands Mountains, only a few miles from his home. It came after the criminal investigation department of every civilized nation had strained every effort to track down the phantom kidnappers.

The unspoken conviction is that the abductors stole the child from his bed, drove him five miles, stripped off his little, distinctive sleeping-suit, leaving only his shirt and flannel band; that they then killed him with a blow upon the head, threw him from the car, later to use part of the sleeping suit as the "identification" to lure Colonel Lindbergh into paying $50,000 to the murderers. It will be recalled that the official announcement touching the "Jafsie" payment was that the money had been handed over to "the kidnappers properly identified as such."

Orville Wilson and William Allen, negroes, made the discovery of the body by chance—in a district that had been crossed and recrossed by squads of tramping state police and within 75 feet of the emergency telephone lines that had been strung along the ground to assist in tracking the fugitives.

Tiny Foot Seen

At 3.15 p.m. Thursday the two men were riding up the lonely Mount Rose Hill road towards Hopewell. A foot, uncovered from beneath the concealment of brush, attracted Allen's attention. He investigated and called Wilson.

Horrified, the two men informed Hopewell police, who in turn notified the state police of New Jersey. A squad of detectives hurried to the scene.

Face downward in a depression, as though the murderers had attempted to give it hasty burial, was the skeleton of the child. His curly blond hair, matted and caked by rain, gave the first mute evidence of his identity.

The police removed the covering of brush that had hidden him from view. Pieces of clothing were wrapped around him. These were removed, and the detectives, positive in their own minds that they had come to the end of a long trail, carried them to Hopewell—to Mrs. Lindbergh.

Mother Sees Clothing

The mother of the dead child took the remnants of his garments. She compared them bravely, without a word, with the clothing she knew was his. There was no doubt left now. She did not shudder. She did not faint nor become hysterical. She merely confirmed the identification.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, his youth shattered by an unbelievable tragedy, then came on word. But it was reported that he, too, was "bearing up" as he has borne up through the long and dreadful days from the night of March 1 when the echo of his cry was discovered—empty.

Rain and low-hanging clouds closed in around and isolated Hopewell tonight, as police, for the family in the mountains, as though to form a curtain to hide their grief.

Police Investigation

Back at Mount Rose Hill, the state officers went through the formalities required by law. They summoned the coroner, Dr. Mitchel, and ordered the body taken to Trent for an official autopsy. They knew, even before Dr. Mitchel made his formal report, hours afterward that it was a case of murder—of brutal, fiendish murder. And in the baby's skull told them...the story.

There was a conference in the Lindbergh home. Officials who for more than ten weeks have been torn between the desire to see the baby return, unharmed and their duty to capture and punish the criminals, determined upon the procedure of notifying the world.

Telephone messages clogged the wires between Hopewell and Trenton. At 5 p.m., the newspapermen who have maintained a contact, lately grown more and more tenuous, between the Lindberghs and the world, were summoned to a conference at the Lindbergh home.

The End of the Story

The sudden summons galvanized them to action. Over muddy roads, slippery and soaked by the downpour, they hurried by automobile to the gates of the Lindbergh estate. They knew, without questioning, that the "end of the story" was at hand. They speculated only on what that end might be and what it might spell to the Lindberghs. Happiness? Or the most poignant grief that could come to parents?

For more than an hour they were to know the answer. The faces of the state troopers who examined their credentials and escorted them into the Lindbergh garage—headquarters of the police activities for ten weeks—told them nothing. Nor was there the slightest revealing expression on Col. Schwartzkopf's face as he ranged the men before him and waited until the wave of the correspondents were all present.

"Lock the doors," he said grimly as the big rooms in the garage quieted to silence. Then, without preliminary, he began reading, in crisp and soldierly tones, the brief announcement of the discovery of the body and its identification.

With Col. Swartzkopf's statement vouched in that unconditional words of an official police report, came the shocking realization that while the last hideous detail of the terrific civilized world had been seeking to find child and kidnappers, the answer to the mystery lay close at home.

With it came the terrible truth that all the gigantic endeavors to make contact with phantom, faking kidnappers, had been in vain. With it came the knowledge that all the investigation that had covered two continents and the seas, that had aroused sympathies and the aid of millions, that had filled the mails with thousands of dollars, and had aroused Hopewell in the last days to get samples of the undershirt the baby wore in the flannel band the baby had on the night of the kidnapping.

"This flannel shirt had an embroidered scallop edge on it. These articles were taken back to the scene and compared with the clothing found on the body and were matched closely enough to afford an identification of the body as that of the Lindbergh baby.

Hole in the Skull

"The statement of William Allen and Orville Wilson, that the body was pretty well concealed by leaves, dirt and brush. The skull had a hole in it about the size of a quarter just above the forehead.

"The body was lying in a depression as though an attempt had been made to bury it face down. The body was in a very bad state of decomposition.

"Mercer County physician, Dr. Charles H. Mitchell, and the county coroner, Walter Swayze, were immediately called.

Colonel Schwartzkopf added that the coroner had taken charge of the body and had taken it to Trenton, where a post-mortem was being performed by Dr. Mitchell.

"Later Schwartzkopf issued the following supplementary statement:

"As long as there was a possibility of the baby being alive the police have been acting with a certain amount of reticence, but in order not to interfere with any negotiations that might result in the safe return of the baby.

"Now that the body of the baby has been found, every effort and effort will be used and all men necessary will immediately be placed on every possible effort to accomplish the arrest of the kidnappers and murderers. We have had under suspicion a group of persons suspected of having the kidnappers and immediate steps will be taken and are being taken to accomplish their arrest.

"Emergency telephone lines for this case are lying on the ground where they were placed. Use telephone men within 75 feet of where the body was found."

Truck Rider Straying in Woods Strikes End of Kidnapping Trail

FOOT UNCOVERED

Text of Official Police Statement Dictated to Press

Hopewell, N.J., May 13—Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, in announcing the finding of the body of the Lindbergh baby said:

"We have to announce that apparently the body of the Lindbergh baby was found in the woods yesterday by William Allen, colored, of Trenton, who was riding on the Mount Rose Road toward Hopewell.

"He was riding with Orville Wilson on a truckload of timber. They stopped the truck and found the body of a baby.

"Going into the woods," Schwartzkopf's statement continued, "and going under a bush, he (Allen) observed his head and as he raised his head he saw the body lying on the ground.

"He says in his statement that what he had a person's foot on it.

He called back to Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson ran into the woods, saw what it was, and decided to go to Hopewell and get the police.

Skull Fractured

"He notified Chief Wolf, who notified these headquarters. Inspector Walsh of Jersey City, Sergeant Moffatt of the Newark Police, Lt. Keaton of the Trenton State police and a number of other detectives immediately went to the scene.

"They reported finding the body of a child estimated to be between a year and a half and two years old in a state of decomposition, but having blond hair and wearing an undershirt, a pair of stockings and a flannel band around the body.

"Not satisfied with this as identification, men were sent into the woods on the Lindbergh estate to get samples of the undershirt the baby wore in the flannel band the baby had on the night of the kidnapping.

"This flannel shirt had an embroidered scallop edge on it. These articles were taken back to the scene and compared with the clothing found on the body and were matched closely enough to afford an identification of the body as that of the Lindbergh baby.

HEAD OF CHILD HAMMERED TO END LIFE

Autopsist Says Adult Held Body Tightly Giving Blows

FRACTURE DOUBLE

Body in Ghastly Condition—Burial Place is Undisturbed

Trenton, N.J., May 13.—(AP)—Two tremendous blows on the head ended the life of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., the official autopsy by Dr. Charles A. Mitchell, county physician, disclosed last night.

The autopsy showed that the skull had been fractured on the left side, this fracture extending from the top to just behind the left ear. The second blow was dealt on the right ear, and left a hole one-half inch in diameter.

It was as if some adult person had held the baby tightly in his arms and deliberately hammered the head with the purpose of causing instant death.

The diagnosis was:

"The cause of death is a fractured skull due to external violence."

Dr. Mitchell's report confirmed that decomposition of the body had progressed to the point where it could be surmised that the child had been killed almost immediately after the kidnapping, depending on climatic and other conditions that might have influenced such results.

The autopsy also indicated that the body had been disturbed probably since it had been buried, although this point was not covered definitely.

Teeth, cranial and other bone formations were used to confirm the identification of the child, although Dr. Mitchell pursued technical and itself did not try to establish identity.

Dr. Mitchell said there was evidence of a hemorrhage on the inner membrane of the skull at the point of fracture. This would indicate that the blow on the left side of the head might have been the one that actually caused death.

The scalp was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to find any contusions or hemorrhages conditions which Dr. Mitchell said.

The autopsy reports did not speculate as to blows and such, but left the diagnosis at "external violence." Physicians usually pronounce such fractures, however, as due to blows delivered on the head rather than accidental fractures.

NEGRO TELLS OF FINDING BODY

Head Still Covered With Curly Locks—Remains in Ghastly Condition

HOPEWELL, N.J., May 13—(UP)—Orville Wilson, one of the men who found the body of the Lindbergh baby, disclosed last night in an interview with the United Press the circumstances surrounding the discovery in the woods at Mount Rose Hill.

"William Allen, who was with me on a truck, went into the woods about 75 feet from the road," Wilson said. "In a minute she came running back and shouted: 'My God! I think I've found the Lindbergh baby!'"

Wilson jumped from the truck and leaped over the fence and ran down a little gully and up the side of the hill. Then I saw the body.

"When I saw the body it was lying face downward and badly decomposed. A few curly locks still stuck to the back of the skull. Some hair was a couple of feet from the child.

"I turned back and looked at the body, only to shudder again. The flesh had fallen away from the hands.

"It made me feel terrible and sad for Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

"When we examined the body more closely, it appeared as if the baby had been thrown under the bushes and a hurried attempt had been made to cover the body with leaves and grass.

Small Piece of Clothing

"There was a small piece of clothing—dirty and rain-soaked —resting in the small of the back, at a spot where the body lay was such a distance from the road that it appeared unlikely we were to find it unless they happened to go within a few feet of the body.

"A thicket of laurel was within a few feet of the body and it appeared the person who put the body there had tried to hide it behind the thicket.

"There was no evidence of a band around the child's stomach, such as he was supposed to have worn when kidnapped.

"We stayed at the spot but a few minutes. Then we ran down the hill and drove back to Hopewell, where I reported to Charley Williamson, a newspaper man I met there. The police and Allen went back with them and they took the body away."

"About five o'clock they called me to the Lindbergh House to tell how we had found the body. I have a little grandson just a few months older than the Lindbergh baby was when kidnapped. I know how sad the Lindberghs feel."

The interview was in Wilson's home in Woodville about three miles from Hopewell in the Sourland hills. Mrs. Wilson and their married daughter sat nearby.

Bagasse, the fibrous material that remains after juice is extracted from sugar cane, was once thrown away by the ton in Hawaii but is now made into insulating wallboard and other fibre products.

KIDNAPPERS ABOARD SHIP ON OCEAN IS REPORT

Rumor Lindberghs May Spend Summer at Chateau in Europe

Lindberghs May Sail for Europe and Reside Abroad for Some Time

Grief-Stricken Parents Have Been Offered Chateau in South of France For Summer, Rumor States

GENERAL PLANS UNCERTAIN

Will Never Return to Sourland Mountain Home Whence Child Was Kidnapped on March 1st

New York, May 14—The New York World-Telegram today states there is a report current that Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh will sail for Europe on June 4 there to remain in the chateau of a friend until their second baby is born.

The World-Telegram does not say where the chateau is, but another report is that they have been offered the chateau of a friend in the South of France.

It is generally believed that they will never return to live in the house on Sourland Mountain, which had just been finished and not yet completely furnished when their baby was kidnapped.

By H. Allen Smith

Trenton, N.J., May 14—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, a gaunt, silent man from whom the spirit of youth seemed to have departed, passed courageously through the Valley of Death yesterday with his little son.

He stood rigid and unblinking, in an undertaking parlor here, when, for the sake of identification, it must have caused him exc. crucialating torture, he was forced to look upon the mutilated form of his boy.

Again he stood, his hands clenched until they became bloodless, and watched the consuming fire of the Linden crematory as it obliterated the last body of his murdered son.

Then he went home.

There were no sobs. There was no hysteria. His spirit, torn and battered by the assaults during the night, refused to crack.

He stood alone—although friends were with him. He stood alone, for he had flown into fatal and into the hearts of the world.

Refused to Be Afraid.

Lindbergh might have been spared this ordeal. It was his nature that refused to spare himself—to become afraid, not of closet.

He strode into the undertaking rooms, a little ahead of his closest companions, Colonel Breckenridge, and ignored orders. He was told to go into a little chapel and he waited, not uncertainly nor hesitantly, but firmly, in a cabinet maker, the scene of the awful spectacle awaited him.

His face was ashen but his face was drawn into weary lines and he was pale. There was silence for a moment.

A covering obscured all but the head and face of the child.

An attendant complied.

"Col. Lindbergh," the voice of Prosecutor Erwin Marshall broke the silence, "Col. Lindbergh, are you convinced this body is that of your infant?"

The colonel bent over the small form. He looked at the curly lock of hair and the little face. He seemed to be examining them—or to be pondering. Then he straightened up.

"Yes," he said, "It is."

Three Minutes Alone.

Colonel Lindbergh turned away. If he had reached the breaking point there was no indication. But he entered another room—alone—and closed the door. Three minutes later he reappeared and took his place beside Col. Breckenridge.

Outside the funeral chapel thousands of men and women and children had gathered in respectful silence. They were driven away by police.

Ten minutes later, Lindbergh was riding along the sorrowful road to Linden, where cremation of the body had been arranged.

The hearse containing the little casket in which the body lay arrived at the Rose Hill crematory in Linden about 2 p.m., followed closely by the automobile containing Lindbergh, Breckenridge and Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf.

Two of the hearse's assistants stepped from the hearse and lifted out the casket—a light burden.

Then the casket was borne into the crematory chapel, followed by the father—walking a little in advance of the others. Lindbergh stood, bareheaded, and watched his burden slowly moved on an elevator to the floor below. His head was bowed and his hands were gripped convulsively behind his back.

As the casket disappeared, the colonel turned and went downstairs, still leading this silent funeral party. A short flight of stairs that led—to oblivion.

The Final Ordeal.

He watched as the casket rolled into the burning chamber of fire clay. He continued to watch as attendants closed the doors and sealed them. He looked, with straining eyes, through the fearful viewing ows that were set in the walled chamber—until the white heat became blinding.

In silence Colonel Lindbergh turned to Superintendent H. L. Howard of Rose Hill, shook hand and said:

"I thank you."

The ordeal was over. As one determined to bear his grief alone, the silent Lindbergh turned away and walked to his automobile. Then he returned to Hopewell, to Anne Morrow Lindbergh, who was waiting for him.

Broken Sheaf.

Hopewell, N.J., May 14. — The metal accop of a broken shovel was found in the undergrowth today close to the spot where the Lindbergh baby was discovered Thursday.

A detective searching in the tangled bushes, stooped, thrust the arm into the dense underbrush dirt clinging to the metal which police believed to indicate that recent use had been made of the instrument.

MYSTERIOUS CRAFT AT SEA STARTS HUNT

Intensive Ocean Hunt is Launched For Kidnappers

CLUE IS SLIGHT

Washington Starts Search —Description of Boat Meagre

New York, May 14—A mysterious vessel believed to carry persons who may be the Lindbergh kidnappers was sought today somewhere between Boston and Cape May in one of the most intensive ocean hunts ever organized.

For more than 24 hours 25 U.S. coast guard craffs have been darting to and fro on the Atlantic watching for the vessel, with which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is understood to have made contact Wednesday.

Coast Guards Busy.

Wireless messages from Washington started the hunt.

They described the meagre description of the mysterious boat, but this was withheld.

There was not a major vessel at the Staten Island base of the coast guard last night. Fourteen, including six of the new 165-foot patrol boats, had left under sealed orders. Others were sent from Boston and New London.

Coast guard officers were not permitted to discuss the search.

BURGOO KING IS FAVORED TO WIN

Expect 11 Will Start in Preakness Over Good Track

(By Orie Robertson, AP Sports Writer)

Baltimore, Md., May 14—Burgoo King, ruler of the three-year-old turf division in United States by reason of his victory in the Kentucky Derby, and 11 crack eastern thoroughbreds were the magnet, which attracted a record crowd to the 40,000 head to historic Pimlico for the 42nd running of the Preakness today.

Although the field lacks a Mate, a Jamestown Boy, or a Twenty Grand, Pimlico officials expected the same tremendous wagering crowd as the famous old "billion" course when starter James Mapflon sets the barrier open standard apart on a shoot 3 p.m. (E.S.T.) in Baltimore, the second leg in the Triple Crown of the spring racing season and, like the derby in Louisville, attracts a cross section of the city's population.

SCREAMS OF NURSE SCARE KIDNAPPER

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 14.—Screams of a housemaid frightened an intruder from a roof last night as he attempted to enter a home and was an attempt to kidnap and hold for $100,000 ransom the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer.

Explorers' Marker Dated 1792 is Found Upon Alabama Tree

Petersburgh, Ala., May 24—A marker, believed to have been placed in 1792 during an exploration voyage by British ships into this region, was found on a tree at Chatham Bay yesterday by Richard Hubbard, a Petersburgh farming fisherman.

Inscribed on the marker was: "Captain G. O. Vancouver. R.N.H.M. ships Discovery and Chatham."

The vessels Discovery and Chatham under Vancouver's command wintered in Conclusion Bay at the end of the expedition, which cruised along the Alaskan coast just prior to the 19th century.

NEW-ZEALAND TREATY READY

Approval is Placed on Agreement Although Liberals Complain

Ottawa, May 14—(By The Canadian Press)—The seal of parliamentary approval was placed on the Canada-New Zealand treaty yesterday when it was passed by the Senate and received royal assent from Chief Justice Duff presided by the Deputy Governor-General. It will come into force upon joint proclamation by the two governments. Its progress through the Upper House was marked by comments and attacks from opposition members. Who charged New Zealand had been Given a better bargain than Canada.

At the end of the parliamentary trail was reached also by the government's unemployment relief bill. In connection with which it conferred on the ministry to negotiate agreements with the provinces to conduct relief, to bonus the products of primary industries, safeguard a Canadian credit and loan or guarantee money to public or private industries.

The House of Commons grappled all day with estimates of the department of Agriculture, only two items passing. Discussion of C. S. Letting board to direct the export sales of farm products was delayed from all sides as an immediate necessity.

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, former Minister of Agriculture, opposed the call for a political armistice. "I think we have reached the stage in our history when agriculture is simply appealing to its fate and we can afford to ease up a little in our extreme political alignments on behalf of agriculture," he declared. He criticized a decrease of thirty-three per cent in the estimates of the department and suggested to Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Finance Minister, more money be provided in supplementary appropriations.

Trenton, May 14 (Special)—Dogs allowed to run at large should be muzzled. While the dog is generally accepted as man's best friend at all times when, due to fear or just natural cussedness he takes a notion to nip at a person. Such was the case yesterday when a large police dog owned by Mr. Art Dickinson slipped a young girl, aged eleven. The girl was taken to Dr. A. V. It is understood that some steps will be taken by the town in regards to the muzzling of our pets.

THEFT WINE, BEER SUBJECT OF TRIAL

Two Young Men Held in Trenton Incident

Trenton, May 14 (Special)—Beer and wine seem to have a great hold on some of the boys, so much that it is alleged Gordon Coughlin and Percy Downs broke into the home of Mr Herb Allison on Front Street, Trenton, last night. They gained entrance through the cellar window and stole one bottle of wine and three bottles of beer. A complaint was made to the police and the two young men were arrested and are held pending trial on Monday.

TWO ALLEGED REDS ARRESTED

Names of Those Brought to Halifax Withheld For Present

Halifax, May 14—Guarded by Royal Canadian Mounted Police plainclothesmen, two more alleged Communists were brought to Halifax last night for deportation hearings and added to the list of aliens held in the Immigration shed on charges of "conspiring to overthrow the government of Canada by force."

They were met at the train from Montreal by Sergeant John Leopold, noted R.C.M.P. detective, and representative of the Department of Immigration.

While official confirmation is lacking, it is stated 13 men, arrested in Canadian cities from Montreal to Montreal, are imprisoned here.

Among those held here are at least nine alleged Communists have been landed by R. B. BARRIE, May 14.—Mrs. Mary Cook aged 83, Tecumseth pioneer, was killed in front of her home about 7 o'clock last night, three miles south of here, today, when she was knocked down and dragged fifty feet by a motor car driven by automobile driven by A. PREPARATIONS FOR FAR EAST TROUBLE MADE

Russia Works With Feverish Haste on Railroad

MANY EMPLOYED

Will Be Able To Send Greater Number of Reinforcements

Washington, May 14—Russia is working with feverish activity to complete the trans-Siberian railway as support for troop reinforcements she is sending to the Siberian Manchurian border, according to authentic advices received here. The extent of the work is not known, but it is said to be proceeding along the entire line, with the most difficult of the road in twelve years.

Russia now has close to 100,000 men in the two Eastern provinces of Siberia. Before the completion of reinforcements began last fall, the strength of the Russian forces there was 40,000 men, consisting of two army corps of two division each. There are now in the Far East five corps, including five cavalry divisions each. She is moving troops with the greatest speedy over the trans-Siberian at the rate of 300 or more cars a day, or a division a month. At the present rate, it would require well over a year to complete this movement, but is relatively small amount of work on the railway, in expert opinion here, would make possible doubling the present rate. Three more divisions sent over the road.

All indications received here are that neither Russia nor Japan desires trouble with each other, but both sides, in addition to wary of each other, have a deep mistrust of Russian concentration along the Manchurian border, while intended only as a precaution, lay Japan to send reinforcements to Manchuria as a precaution and contributed in large part to the decision of the Tokio Government to conclude the armistice with China at Shanghai, which troops from that area are and send them to Manchuria.

Feet Rotting With Humidity, Men Forced to Walk 18 Miles

Asuncion, Paraguay, May 14—A story of excruciating suffering in the Paraguay jungle, including being almost eaten alive by ants nearly an inch long, was told here today by Donald S. Weiss, explorer, who has just returned to civilization.

Weiss, who spent three months in scientific work in the wilds of northeastern Paraguay, in the 'grand desert' to on his way from the United States by way of Buenos Aires.

Battle With Floods.

Besides the encounter with the ants, he told of battling floods in the Acaray River with a make-shift canoe hewed from a log and a struggle in chopping his way with a machete through a jungle thick with cortaderas, plants which have knife-like leaves capable of inflicting very severe wounds.

Faced Starvation.

Early in March, after a month after the expedition left the headwaters of the Yguan River for the Brazilian border, his companions sickened and faced starvation. In spite of the fact that his feet were rotting from humidity we walked 18 miles until we found some Indians with whom we were able to barter fish, fish hooks and soap for some beans, corn and mandioca root to feed the party.

Deer Die by Thousands from Disease Spread by Birds

Tice today declared his satisfaction with the co-operation shown by merchants of the city in regard to the parking situation which had been for some time under consideration by himself and city council. During the past week the cars which have been parked on Front St. have been closely watched and tabs have been kept on the owners. In very few instances only was it found that merchants were to blame for exceeding the reasonable limit set. "There has been good co-operation shown by almost all of them, with of course a few exceptions," declared the mayor, "and it should again be warned if necessary," declared Mayor Tice. It was found that the parallel parking of cars at the curb was mainly responsible for the week day congestion on Front street which has been apparent.

Why Fowl is High Though Egg Prices Strike Bottom

Bred-to-Lay Fowl Not So Good For Table

PRODUCTION COST

Eggs are low . . . . dressed chickens still remain pretty high for the casual buyer . . . . chickens lay eggs . . . if there weren't so many chickens there wouldn't be so many eggs. Less eggs — more demand. More demand — higher prices. Kill the chickens and get higher prices for the eggs. Yet, week after week, farmers tote eggs to town, sometimes sell them for ridiculous prices . . . and sometimes carry them back home unsold. The market has been glutted with them . . . yet the dressed chicken still commands a high price. Why not take some of these fowl who are laying the less expensive eggs and sell them instead at lower prices? That was the question which interested the reporter on his rounds of the market this morning. He sought enlightenment. He approached one farmer who had a case or two laid out on the side walk before him. New, clean fresh eggs reflected back the strong sunlight.

"Eggs are pretty cheap this morning?" "Yes, they still don't pay cheap. Hardly worth bringing to town." Then to Mr. Moon of the Marshall Road, speaking. He operates one of the largest chicken farms in this district. Yet his case is typical of the smaller farmer with the odd dozen hens.

Why Not Sell Fowl?

"Then why do you bring them to town. Why not kill a few chickens and bring them in. They still are pretty high, and yet with eggs the price they are farmers hang onto their laying hens. Why not sell them instead of the eggs?"

"I suppose a lot of people think that way, too," was the answer. "Yet anyone who had much to do with chickens would know the answer right away. In the first place the hen which is bred to lay is not a good fowl to eat. The food she gets makes her lea palatable. There is a vast difference in eating a chicken which is reared only for eggs and purposes than one which has been bred to lay and fed to lay. Special food containing oils and meals are fed the hens which are laying. If you killed one of those hens you would find the flesh with a very fishy taste. That is because they receive that food to make the rich eggs which they lay. Then also the flesh is generally stringy and thin, nearly all their energy is expended in making eggs. For generations they have been carefully weeded out and only the best layer's eggs have been used for purposes producing the chicks which in turn generally have the ability of laying fowl. To eat one of those fowl would be like eating a starved cow or a very thin and stringy bacon hog. They are merely bred to lay and do not make good eating.

Cost of Egg Production.

"Now we come down to prices. At the present time it costs me about one half a cent per day more than I am getting out of her with the eggs to keep her. I have a heavy and expensive flock which costs a pretty fair sum each week to keep up. Even though I am going behind on expenses it would not pay me to kill any of them and offer them for sale. To the first place I would have to spend a lot of money fattening them up with different feed, and even then they would not be good fowl to sell. As it is I must accept conditions as they are and wait until eggs go up a little in price. There was never a great profit in selling eggs, but later on we can expect to break even anyhow. Consider too though that while I am selling for these prices to go up that my flock is depreciating all the time. A hen after she is three years old, I am told in the neighborhood of seven to nine hundred eggs is about done for, counting in insurance, labor and fifty other items of upkeep, you'll see that the chicken ranch is a very risky proposition.

Cost of Feeding.

"But how is it that the table fowl still sell at such a good price as they do?" the reporter asked. "That is easily explained, too. While I never sell any of them myself I know about what it costs to raise a fowl for eating purposes. If they are fed right it will cost about one half a cent to feed and care for the average hen. That makes a one pound old hen worth over fifty dollars, and it's not counting the incubation period and care as a baby chick . . . they're not much good to eat until they are about a year old . . . Do you think that they are getting too much for their dressed fowl, now? "Never looked at it that way," the reporter admitted. "So you've stated both ways. If you raise a fowl for eating it costs quite a bit to care for and then fatten them — if "you raise them for egg laying the expense will be greater. You have a better flock and you're stuck with it. Meanwhile these ladies here on the market are reaping the benefit of the farmer's hard luck. You can't break even!"

"Exactly. We are holding the bag and the busy housewife is filling it. And yet," a slight sigh escapeh him, "they're still saying that eggs and fowl are too high. Can you beat it!"

Peach, Plum, Cherry Trees Are Blooming

Peach trees, plum and cherry trees are bursting into bloom in all sections of the city. Tardy buds needed only the warmth of the past forty-eight hours to bring them to full bloom. In the vicinity of Bloomsbury tree the drone of bees, and the hum of insects is audible, as they scurry about feasting on their first sampling of summer nectar. A fine peach tree is in flower at 35 Victoria Ave, planted during the war, and at the Dalton residence on Queen St. another peach tree is attracting the attention of the passerbys with its lovely display of deep pink buds and blossoms.

Police Believed to be On Trail of Those Who Caused Sorrow in Home

Detroit "Purple Gang" is Under Further Probe, Cryptic Statement

SAW MURDERERS

Jafsie, Curtis Exonerated —Start Officers on Trail of Fields

BY BATES RANEY

Hopewell, N.J., May 14—Clues to the identity of the kidnappers and slayers of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., were obtained by police yesterday from the two men who led negotiations for the baby's recovery during the time he was believed to be alive.

After a day of questioning it developed that both Dr. John F. Condon of New York, and Colvin Hughes Curtis or Norfolk, Va., had been in touch with either the murderers or their personal agents, and last night the state police of New Jersey were prosecuting their search with every hope of apprehending the criminals.

What in the way of names and descriptions Condon and Curtis were able to supply, remained a secret, but the information was enough to revitalize the hunt for those who stole the 21 months old infant from his crib on Sourland Mountain last March 1, and left his battered body beneath a clump of bushes within four and a half miles of the Lindbergh home.

Dr. Condon is known to have been face to face with one of the kidnappers when he paid over the $50,000 in ransom money in a Bronx cemetery, and Curtis had such lengthy negotiations with the abductors or their agents, that his information also is considered to be of utmost importance.

Curtis Investigation

While Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was accompanying his son's body to a crematory last night, police were taking Curtis over a part of the trail that he followed in his negotiations with men he believed were in possession of the child. Their first trip was understood to be to Southern New Jersey, near where Curtis and Col. Lindbergh's were reached Thursday night to be informed that the baby had been found dead.

President Hoover's order directing all federal detective agencies to assist in finding the abductors met an immediate response now that the finding of the body had released the official restraint imposed on police of the country while there was still a chance of recovering the baby alive.

In addition to the executive order from the President, police were spurred by the demands of a horrified world.

A rapid inquisition into the activities of all persons who have had contact or attempted to have contact with the kidnappers was instigated when Morris Reamer, once an investigator for the Department of Justice, was questioned at the Hopewell headquarters of the state police.

Reamer, a self-nominated "negotiator," at one stage of the investigation had announced that he expected to be able to effect a return of the baby, and was engaged for several weeks on a number of mysterious missions.

Reamer Questioned

A police bulletin issued last night by Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf made the simple announcement that Reamer was still being questioned "on important and far-reaching authorities."

The bulletin said that investigation of the Detroit Purple Gang was being continued, but that "further information on this point would hinder progress."

The investigation of Curtis' activities was also being continued Schwartzkopf said.

The state police head insisted that no further information would be given out regarding the ransom notes, and that he would abide by the orders of the prosecuting attorney and attorney general to keep the details of these secret.

He added, however:

"In previous bulletins, it has been stated that the ransom notes received offered positive identification. There is no change in this statement."

Schwartzkopf denied that "any hospital equipment" had been taken into the Lindbergh home, discounting reports that a hospital cot had been moved into the house yesterday afternoon.

The theory, according to two official sources, that the murderers having murdered the baby the subject of the kidnapping, used Condon and Curtis as innocent tools, to attempt extortion, was a possible family. And in Condon's case, they were tempted successful, for they took $50,000 from him —and fled.

Through the darkness of the early hours of today and well through the morning, these two men were the subjects of an intensive questioning, that Curtis' secret, the secret code, the signals, the "identification" they possessed that led Col. Lindbergh to believe they held the key to a solution of the 54 miles off the Virginia Capes, January 24, 1929.

At that time Captain Fried was in command of the liner American Legion. Notified by wireless, she sped to the aid of the helpless Italian freighter.

FLIER SAVED AFTER PLANE LIGHTS IN SEA

Plucky Rescue of Lou Reichers Attempting N. Y.-Paris Flight

FLIER INJURED

Liner Unable to Salvage Airplane or its Lifeboat

BY CAPTAIN GEORGE FRIED
Commander of the Liner President

Copyright, 1932 by Associated Press
S.S. President Roosevelt, May 14 —Lou Reichers, the transoceanic flier, was rescued from the turbulent Atlantic off the southern tip of Ireland last night by a lifeboat crew from the President Roosevelt.

The New Jersey speed flier was forced to drop his wind-buffeted monoplane into the ocean near the liner because of a cracking wing, damaged landing gear and fuel shortage. He suffered a broken nose and lacerated face in the alighting.

The lookout on the bridge sighted the plane fluttering to the surface at 8:10 p.m., Greenwich Mean Time (4.10 p.m., Eastern Standard Time), and the officer Harry Manning immediately prepared to take aboard the occupant of the ship despite high seas and a dangerous southwest wind.

The liner was manoeuvred as near to the monoplane as possible and lifeboat No. 10, with Chief Officer Manning in command, was lowered.

The lifeboat made for the monoplane and after dangerous circling made fast long enough to lift out the exhausted Reichers from the pilot seat.

The Roosevelt meanwhile was lowering her ship's ladder and preparing to take the rescued to the lifeboat.

Chief Manning and his crew caught the ladder and the flier was carried aboard. The ship was running too high to salvage either the lifeboat or the plane.

Captain George Fried and Harry Manning have been often involved in Atlantic rescue operations, and probably their most noteworthy effort was the rescue of the entire crew of the steamer Antinoe, 140 miles off the Virginia Capes, January 24, 1929.

The May meeting of the Moira W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School room of the church on Wednesday, May 4th at 3 p.m. with a large number present. The president, Mrs. C. Hagerman presided. The Scripture lesson followed, given by Mrs. W. Barlow; roll call was answered by each member giving a Scripture text containing the key-word "light."

A pleasing solo was given by Mrs. George Hollinger entitled "A Little Talk with Jesus, how it smooths the rugged road." Mrs. Chas. Ketcheson being the accompanist. Then followed a number of short readings on prayer given by the following ladies, Mrs. Ed. Cannon, Mrs. W. McInroy, Mrs. C. Ketcheson and Mrs. T. Barlow. Another hymn was sung "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me". The meeting was brought to a close with prayer by Mrs. G. Hollinger.

BELIEVE KILLERS ARE IN HIDING IN BRONX

New York, May 14—District Attorney Dodge's daughter in the Bronx announced yesterday afternoon that, as a result of the enquiry on evidence which leads him to believe that the money turned over by Dr. John F. Condon, to the kidnappers of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was paid to Bronx men now hiding in that borough.

Payment of the futile ransom was made by Condon in the Bronx by tossing a money bag over a cemetery hedge while Colonel Lindbergh waited impatiently nearby for return of his son.

TRAPPED 22 HRS IN A MINE HOLE

Youth Finally Rescued After Slide Carries Him Down

Tamaqua, Pa., May 14—Patience won freedom and safety last night for Milton Pranzo, 20, Tamaqua youth trapped in a stifling gas prison in a narrow mine hole for 22 hours.

A slide of earth carried Pranzo to the bottom of the hole, 25 feet below the surface, when the sides weakened by rain collapsed. A plate of cast iron lodged in the slide just above him and kept him from being buried and suffocated.

Rescue work started immediately but a hole so narrow only one man could work in it and so cramped it was often impossible to do more than scoop the dirt by the handful. Acetylene torches cut through the iron plate and permitted an air pipe to be pushed toward Pranzo who was helpless except to sit and wait. When sufficient earth had been scooped away, he was given food and restoratives.

After many hours Pranzo was carried from the pit in a semi-conscious condition and was taken to Coaldale hospital where physicians announced he had suffered no ill effects.

Greco's commercial fleet now comprises 539 vessels.

"A LOT OF BLAH"

Friends:—

Recently a fellow said something to me that made me quit cold—he said these letters of Garn Dobbs are simply a lot of bosh. My friend grabbed a taxi and came right over to tell me about it. What the fellow really said was that Dobbs was a swelled-head, and his letters are "A LOT OF BLAH" and that is the ever talked about was myself — that I had never mentioned him even once.

He said nobody ever read my letters, and he would bet twenty people had spoken to him about a fool mistake I had made in the last one. He said I gave him a pain in the neck; and, as his neck is the biggest part of his head, it must have been pretty painful.

So I dodged the letter. Then I began to GET SOME. One man wrote: "What's the big idea? Or have you run out of them?" Another: "You must be getting stuck on yourself—too big to write those letters any more, I suppose?" I got so many kicks I had to pay a pollow.

And the worst of it was the way I felt myself. To me, those letters I had been printing were like writing to a personal friend—whether he was or not. So I decided to do something besides just sell them plumbing work and fixtures and try to BE SOMEBODY.

If all I wanted in this life was a big bank roll and not the friendship, then I would feel that I was a failure, even though I did the best work in the world—and I do. Begging the undertaker's pardon and to put it plainly, give me your money-and-to-hell-with-you is not the policy of

SPRING DAYS

Spring will visit every door,
Rich and poor alike will see;
Old and young alike may see
Tree and lawn; stream and hill
Change beneath Spring's magic will.
Then and there, thro' sun and rain,
Slowly don their green again.

Are you rich? Are you poor?
Spring is knocking at your door.
Rich or poor, great or small,
Spring is free to one and all.
Are you young? Are you old?
Spring is yours and wealth untold.

Are you poor? In the sun
Learn that hope is never done.
As you sit and sigh or sing
Yours the wealth, the joy of Spring.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERIES

From Cambridge, England, the Associated Press carries a copyrighted story by Philip H. Myring on industrial production of the four vitamins, A B C, and D believed to be brought much nearer today by the announcement of a series of discoveries made by two young British scientists, Drs. F. B. Bowden and C. P. Snow of Cambridge University.

The discoveries of the two young men were described by Sir Frederick Hopkins, President of the Royal Society, and worldfamous authority of vitamins, as of "major importance."

In making the announcement Drs. Bowden and Snow said they had evidence indicating they had produced Vitamin A from a substance called carotene by heating it with ultra-violet rays of a certain wave-length.

Should they have evidence, they said, that they have succeeded in identifying that part of the molecule of Vitamin B which is responsible for its biological effects.

They said they discovered a method of distinguishing between two rival theories regarding the nature of Vitamin C—whether this vitamin is hexuronic acid or whether it is produced from narcotine by the action of light.

Besides these findings, they said they were able now to suggest improvements which will increase the efficiency of the present methods of manufacturing Vitamin D, which is known commercially as calciferol.

Their discoveries, they said, were made through the development of precise methods of spectroscopic analysis, using rays of light of one precise color which they isolated with a powerful apparatus involving the use of large crystals of natural quartz.

QUEST OF GOLD

The lure of gold continues in the present age though perhaps in a form less attractive than that which spurred the adventurers across the Spanish Main to dig into the bowels of the earth and bring forth the fabulous riches of the mines of Central and South America. Today the lure of gold except in the quest among the rocks is less attractive and more enervating than in the olden days. Today gold's lure works through large bank accounts, schemes to get rich quick and other ways of getting something for money you never have the lure of that yellow metal.

Since the days of Columbus it is estimated that gold to the amount of a column 223 feet high in a diameter of eighteen feet has been dug. But half of this has been lost or hidden away so safely that it has been lost. This reduces the available gold in the world to a column one hundred and fifteen feet high and eighteen feet in diameter. A column which September the United States possessed fifty feet, France twenty-five feet, Great Britain a little less, and Italy and Belgium each over three feet. But Britain is today enticing gold away from its hiding places and where it has rested in the form of world of art and also from the mines within the Empire.

Eleven and a half billion dollars in gold is the present world's wealth of which $363,020,359 in bullion is in circulation, with a billion in gold certificates.

BROADCASTING SITUATION

Opponents of the broadcasting policy of the Government are putting up a strenuous fight over the air in an effort to delay action on the report presented to the House some days ago. Their plan is to urge listeners over the radio broadcast to write in protests to Ottawa to the representatives of their constituencies opposing the government bill which has been introduced to implement the findings of th Morand Committee.

As this protest is belated and as the views which they urge have all been heard before the radio broadcast committee it is believed that their chance of success is very slight.

Those who advocate the change from the present unsatisfactory conditions of broadcasting are more than ever convinced that public ownership of broadcasting is in the best interest of Canada. Today outside of Toronto, listeners have to depend almost entirely on one station in Canada and that one which depends at a large amount of U. S. programs. But if Canadians stations outside of this one are weak, U.S. stations are not and continue to pour in upon Canadian listeners, thus affecting the spirit of the people by the constant reiteration and presentation of material and ideals which are not Canadian. A system of broadcasting would undoubtedly give hearers in Canada more than one station and programs eminently satisfactory to Canadians. Besides if Canadians want U.S. programs when Canada has a national system nothing can prevent them hearing them.

IF YOU COULD COME AGAIN . . . .

By M. Pardoe

If you could come again—and you—and you—

I wonder, would you tell

Of the immeasurable "Now" in which you dwell?

Nay rather—so I think—we'd talk together

Of little things, the wind, the rain, the weather!

Of furred and feathered friends we'd talk as well

I think, if you could come, and you.

So if departing breath must bring rebirth into some other strange and lonely earth Beyond this "Where" and "Whence" and "When" speak first—speak first of little things,

The little trivial dear remembrings,

That the lost soul of me may know you there,

And you—and you.

THE BELLEVILLE FREE PRESS, published weekly at Economy Printing House, price 50c a year, invariably in advance. McCullough & Co., proprietors. Such is the caption of several old newspapers, well preserved, and loaned to this corner for personal comment. Four pages of five short columns each constitute The Free Press of 1878, consisting of three columns of news and two columns and two columns of advertising to a page. In the issue of March 30, 1878, mention is made of the death of Dr. James Lister, formerly physician of his day and father of Miss Lister who resides on Victoria Avenue. The obituary was brief but eulogistic and stated "A sketch of the deceased gentlemen's life has already appeared in the daily papers: it is ours merely to offer humble tribute to his memory. Peace be with him and we offer it the more willingly because, in these days the words of Tennyson can but rarely be applied with truth, as they can be to him.

"And still he bore without abuse

The grand old name of gentleman."

The remains were taken to the cemetery by the steamer Prince Edward and buried with military honors.

Attention is called to the statement that the daily papers having already given a account of the gentleman's life history, repetition was unnecessary. The Free Press was at least not given to "vain repetitions."

ABOVE THE EDITORIAL COLUMN in preferred space, top column, next to reading matter appeared the advertisement of Mr. Thomas Greenwood, agent for the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company. S. B. Burdett, LL.B. (Sam), whose name and fame persists even until this day and Henry Bleecker, Thomas Holden and J. Parker Thomas, barristers. Belleville Shirt Factory, with "shirts of all kinds made to measure and fitted to perfection." Jacques E. Fish, also occupied space in the advertising columns. Two doctors had cards and one dentist. Grand Trunk Railway time table following trains, No. 4 Express, No. 2 Express, No. 8 Mixed, and No. 6. Mixed, going West; while Nos. 1 and 3 Expresses, and 7 and 5 Mixed passed daily. Letters from rural centres arrived in Belleville "about noon daily."

EDITORIALLY the Free Press was strong, with opinions, not parochial, but worldwide, for instance one editorial is caused by the action of Russia in showing a desire to capture Constantinople, thus becoming the first nation in the world, and destroying the balance of power in Europe created by Napoleon. As that little thing has not happened yet it is evident that there was a whole lot of unnecessary worrying in that day, even as there is in this. Another editorial discusses the statement of a colored preacher that the notion of the earth going round the sun is blasphemous and unscriptural. In the news columns Edward Hanlan; oarsman, of Toronto, is featured as having arranged sculling matches, two miles, with Fred Plaisted, of New York, Ephraim Morris, of Pittsburg, five miles; and a match with Wallace Ross on the Kenne . . . ia, at St. John, New Brunswick.

THE FREE PRESS also carried a serial story, considerable condensed foreign news, poetry, and letters to the editor.

Other Papers' Opinions

A WORD TO THE IGNORAMUS

One of the disturbing manifestations of the times is a growing predilection on the part of many to indulge in the diversion of wreckbusting. The idea, of course, is a certain age, delights in nothing so much as breaking things. Up to no perchance has ever yet been able to tell us precisely why. But then the intelligent part of the world is adopted by the youth growing into maturity, applied to such institutions instead of toys, it becomes a matter of grave concern. No longer be regarded with an indulgent smile.—Montreal Star.

EXPECTING TOO MUCH

So much is being said of the possibilities of the world economic conditions as a result of the coming Imperial Economic Conference that it is well that people should not be led to expect too much. There are those who would like to believe that Utopia lies immediately behind the conference, that as soon as the conference has been reached by it, conditions will be all right. While it is true that favorable results of the Imperial Economic Conference should have, eventually, a most beneficial influence on Canadian trade and commerce, it is foolish to expect too much.—Oshawa Times.

TROUBLESOME DOUKHOBORS

The presence of the Doukhobors has been costly to the government. Periodically the Royal Mounted report large numbers in jail as is the case now, and there is always trouble with the nude parade in British Columbia. Then the compulsory sending schools in Saskatchewan during the last few years has been particularly costly. At present a young Doukhobor is awaiting trial in the Province Albert in Northern Saskatchewan, girl teacher, who was found guilty for the attempted murder of a public pupil by cutting off her hair, rid itself of these people. They have been a problem in the Dominion and there is no prospect that they will ever become assimilated with us unless some success is achieved in changing their fanatical religious theories and principles that are opposed to the general conception of individual and social conduct in this country.—Galt Reporter.

PRESERVING OUR FORESTS

While it is of course impossible to trace an accurate history of Canada's forest fires, it has been established, by general and careful observation, that the majority are caused by the carelessness of sportsmen or holiday-makers in the public property and completely extinguishing fires, or in throwing lighted matches away into the undergrowth. The danger lies chiefly in the forest that may smoulder and burn underground for days before there is the slightest indication the ever vigilant protection service can detect is additional reason for the adoption of scrupulous care by all who spend their holidays in the forest lands. That the permit system is efficacious in impressing that fact upon those to whom fortunately, been proved beyond any reasonable doubt.— Montreal Star.

DEFINITIONS UP-TO-DATE

It is interesting to see what American wisecracking is doing to the English. John O'Londo's "Review of Reviews" has a number of the liberties taken with the language by Oliver Herford in his "Libba Dictionary." Here are a few of all his definitions "Sacrilege—A Speech on the Income Tax."

Americans might prefer such a double-barrelled definition as the one for X-ray—"A device enabling doctors to see just what they want to see."

Like most of the dictionaries of taking which exist, this one has its compiling, the Herford book abounds in sidelights on modern life and many ephemeral definitions. But there are some of which should be good for as long as some of the Dickens' Dr. Johnsonian ones. Johnson's description of Oats as a grain eaten by many Americans today: "A hateful kind of pulse commonly cruiser planted and adjudged not by the common judges of land but by the scholars who are hired by those to whom Excise is paid."—New York Times.

ACTORS ON SHIPS

Ordinarily, Summer is a bad time for actors. Summer stock companies pay salaries earned during the Winter in transatlantic travel. Such a man months spent trudging from offices with little looking for work or, more happily, in rehearsal after. They have books dan engagement. Thousands of them have left for Europe in many months, but the coming Summer does not appear as dreary as even in better years.

An agent specializing in providing entertainers on shipboard has announced that about 600 performers, both concert singers and members of bands, have been engaged already for the transatlantic travel planned this year. Last year several steamship companies offered a total of thirty trips to Bermuda, Halifax and other not-too-distant ports. This year there will be fewer cruises because of the continued falling off in transatlantic travel. Seventy have already been advertised, the first tour starting the middle of the month.

The voyagers must be amused during the four to nine days they are at sea, and actors who can sing, dance and give gay skits are in demand.—New York Times.

African Dappers are using lipstick.

TWITCHING IS SIGN NOT TO BE NEGLECTED

Too Frequent Muscle Impulses Sent to Muscles

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

It is not unusual for one muscle or group of muscles to twitch. This may occur in the arm, leg, anywhere. This occasional twitching is something quite different from the frequent and violent twitching which some become a great source of annoyance to the sufferer. Usually due to a nervous disorder known as chorea, often more popularly as St. Vitus' Dance.

When a muscle contracts it is because nerve energy, like an electric current, is sent along the nerve to the muscle. No muscle can contract unless it receives such a message. And no muscle, no matter how small, is without its nerve supply.

Muscles are divided into three great groups. One comprises the muscles which respond to the act of the will—a nerve impulse originating in the brain, controlled by the brain proper. These are known as voluntary muscles.

The second group embraces those muscles which respond to work without the intervention of the will—the so-called involuntary muscles.

Examples of the former are the muscles in the arms, legs and other limbs; of the latter, the muscle forming the heart, the blood vessels and intestines may be mentioned.

The third group of muscle tissue is really the link between the two, and this is the heart muscle.

It is in this particular twitchings it is usually the voluntary muscles which are involved. The trouble is that they contract without the individual wishing them to do anything. They contract despite effort on the part of the individual to prevent contraction. Chorea, mentioned above, affects children more than adults, although adult forms of the disease are known. Usually the affected child has twitching, gulping and suddenly. The arms or legs twitch. Sometimes the twitchings may affect practically the whole body. Often the patient is able to control the muscle spasms for a few minutes, but then he succumbs, perhaps—but the twitchings and jerkings always start again, despite every effort he may make to do.

Twitchings of muscles of the same group constitute what is known as a tic. Tic differs from spasms are not confined to certain groups of muscles, but a person may have a tic in the face, neck or an eyelid, and that alone, although it may disappear and reappear again and again.

A habit spasm is similar to a tic, only here the muscular contraction at first had a purpose. Now, the habit spasm is the result of the contractions continue nevertheless. The habit may be of one time, had an irritation of the nose, which has led to the habit of rubbing the muscles of the upper lip. Later on the habit, although no irritation of the nose exists.

Treatment for such disorders therefore must be directed to the nervous system. Rest in bed may help. Sedatives usually help, but not all. Certain types of tonic medication are advisable. The psychoanalyst will also be called in severe, stubborn cases even psychological analysis of mental processes is sometimes indicated.

Muscular twitchings should never be neglected. Always try to effect a cure, even if it requires a long time.

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Exposure of the face to a draught when driving in an automobile, or when riding in an automobile, may cause a partial loss of muscular tone, or paralysis of the muscles of one side of the face. The non-paralyzed side is always the distorted side.

A GOOD BEGINNING

There has been an immense amount of talk and advertising about what is to be done to get people to have a successful city—but the old bread-lines and become at least individually self-supporting—if not economically viable! Important on the farm. Perhaps the best news that has come out of the whole movement so far is the report that out of 2,000 people actually placed on Quebec land last year, none gave up the venture and made their way back to the cities. Three whole lot of them are still there.—Montreal Star.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 14, 1912.

At the meeting of the city council it was decided to expend $50.00 in the purchase of flowers, etc., from the Horticultural Society to be placed in the city parks. A vote of thanks was made to the Belleville Baseball League and the usual grant of $300.00 was authorized to be paid to the Agricultural Society.

At a meeting of the Women's Institute the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Howard; first vice-president, Mrs. Armstrong; second vice-president, Mrs. (Dr.) Yeomans; third vice-president, Mrs. D. A. Sinclair; secretary treasurer, Mrs. W. B. Deacon; directors, Mrs. Hagar, Mrs. Tompkins, Mrs. Marston, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Bateman, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Caldwell. Miss Ibby read a very interesting paper at the meeting in which she urged the great necessity of purchasing good pictures into the hands of children.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

HIS SECRETARY WRITES A FEW WORDS:—

Dear J. D.—

Speaking of trout fishing, as you are, constantly, whenever the Colonel comes in, how do those little words sound right now? You've been getting back at Ygnacio Peixotto, Wm. Armstrong, around the pulling out of the Trent River, near Campbellford. Later in the year Carl Johnston took a seat by their side on the train and for the entire day with his trusty pole and spinner—"to lay out the flies? Just south of the town he got off the train and the unlucky fish, as long, swirled two pounds exactly and weighed the same in pounds of money, before he was landed. And Carl Johnston is now the proud owner of forty United Churches, nine Anglicans, one Presbyterian, one Roman Catholic, two Friends, two Salvation Army, one Baptist, one Methodist, one Pentecostal and one Seventh Day Adventist. That makes a total of 60 churches..... And you know how many churches there are in the city? Four. Is the population of the Picton Gazette for that information.....

Speaking of that article about how to preserve children.....It was clipped from a Toronto bulletin, it says; Take one large grassy field, one half dozen children, two or three small dogs, a pinch of brook and some pebbles. Mix the children and dogs well together and put them in the field, stirring constantly. Pour the pebbles into a brook and sprinkle the field with flowers. Bake in the sun and when the dogs are baked in the hot sun. When brown, remove and place in a bath tub to cool.

When you told the folks the other day about your visit to Ottawa and this town keeping albums of this and that, you overlooked one lady who has an original way of using the local paper and by the rest of them get through with it. When they have all read it, she takes a pair of shears and goes through it clipping out little interesting bits of news concerning the city, and pastes it in a book. At the end of the year she sends the book to her sister who now lives in California .....The other day when you were about three times over, you told

2 MILLION BUS. VIA CHURCHILL

Wheat Shipment Thru' Hudson Early This Season

Winnipeg, May 14—Two million bushels of Canadian wheat will be shipped early this season for Europe, via Churchill and the Hudson Bay route. It was announced by F. N. McLaren, manager of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, here today. Up to date has been set for shipping of the grain to Churchill on July 15.

The Northern Manitoba port was opened for navigation August last September, when the steamers Minnedosa and Nipigon sailed over the bay with 477,000 bushels of Saskatchewan grain. Slightly more than this elevator at the Hudson Bay Railway terminus is capable of handling. Besides bushels of grain, its bins were cleaned out entirely for the twin test shipments last fall.

Queer Pranks of Diet Are Discussed

New Orleans, May 14—Sixty five headaches caused by food were described in a report to the Medical Association, which closed its annual session here last night.

These queer pranks of diet were reported by Drs. Harry Salzer, M.D. and Herbert J. Rinkel, M.D., of Oklahoma City. Rinkel's contribution to the conference were so devious, that two lords of the sufferers might not know their own. Recently developed methods of testing unconvered the secret.

BLACK CAT FRIDAY 13

Indianapolis, Ind., May 14— A black cat on Friday the 13th nearly killed Ralph Hepburn during a race on the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Chester Miller, Detroit, driving his car from behind, swerved to the straightaway during a practice spin to avoid the animal's path. Another race, saw the cat cross his path, but no harm.

Neither Miller nor the cat was hurt.

I who have lain without a sound
Through the cold ground,
Now hear the stirring roots of trees,
And earth's warm blood to her knees.
Untettered now the spinning sap
Runs from the pulsing cold the clod
Reaches to that forgotten blue—
A soaring flight that I share, too—
Now I am free.
Now know the miracle of birth.

FRIDAY 13TH UNLUCKY DAY FOR 2 TEAMS

Reading Breaks 12-Game Losing Streak and Royals Win

LEAFS WIN

Nose Out Skeeters in 9th on Single By Michaels

(By the Associated Press)

Friday the 13th saw the end of two long streaks in the International League, much to the satisfaction of the Reading Keys and, conversely, to the sorrow of the Montreal Royals.

The Keys had dropped 12 games in a row until they ended turned on their tormentors yesterday and walloped the Buffalo Bisons 7-4. Montreal, on the other hand, had run up a string of 11 successive triumphs until Baltimore ended the streak with a 3-2 victory at Montreal.

Fred Bennett, chief figure in a baseball scandal only a few years ago, was the hero of Reading's triumph. He came up with a home run, accounting for five runs in the first three innings. Kress, which also poled out a homer for the keys. Clayt Van Slalyne in the meantime held the Bisons to six hits, home runs by Winsett and Carnegie accounting for all four Buffalo tallies.

Ken Holloway, Baltimore veteran, stopped Montreal with nine scattered hits, although he took some effective pitching and fast fielding to check the Royals in the eighth and ninth innings, when they did most of their threatening. Boze Arnold and Jim Stroud, with two hits apiece, led the Baltimore attack on Brown and Pidcock.

Tighten Race

Rochester's Charley Red Wingo tightened up the race by beating Newark at Jersey City, 4-3. Wingo out outpitched Bob Nekola by a slight margin. It was Nekola's first defeat after three straight victories. He was touched for eight hits, all singles, by Wingo and Bill Hall and a home run by Dixie Walker were also Red hits. Base hits among the six Newark garnered off Yeachon, Hall and Wingo were all right ankle sliding into second base in the fourth inning.

Toronto nosed out Jersey City, 3-2, in a tight pitcher's battle in which Glenn Liebhardt had slightly the better of an argument with Curly Ogden. Toronto scored the winning run in the ninth with two out when Ralph Miller singled with the bases filled.

As a result of the defeat of both Newark and Montreal, only two games separate these two leading clubs from Baltimore in fifth place.

WALL STREET LEAGUE

Two games were played in the Wall Street Softball League last evening when the Hydro nine beat the Delaney Bearcats by the score of 9 to 1 and the YMCA team won their first game of the season by trimming the Belleville Vulcanizing to the tune of 5 to 3.

All of the teams in the loop have broke into the win column now and the league standing is all bunched up as to speak. Wm. Whitty on the mound for the "Y" lads was in rare form last night, when he stood the "Rubber Menders" on their ears and romped home with Association's first win.

In the second game played Clunk' Bartlage again proved his worth by literally romping home to victory unaided by the usual work of his Hydro lads when they took the Delaney Bearcats into camp.

Score by innings:—

Hydro—	0	0	0	3	2	0	—	5	run
Delaney—	1	0	0	1	0	0	—	2	run
Y. M. C. A. —	1	0	3	2	0	3	—	9	run

INFIELD PAIR MAKE REDS REGRET DEAL

Etupp and Cucciinello Playing Smart Ball For Dodgers

LOSE IN 9TH

Braves Could Have Been Within One Game of Cubs

BY GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Joe Stripp and Tony Cucciinello are having the time of their young lives making the Cincinnati Reds regret the deal that sent them to Brooklyn this year.

For two days the crack pair of infielders who have played some of the most brilliant ball of their careers in helping the Dodgers bolster the Reds' first division hopes. As on the previous day, batting and fielding was a potent factor in Brooklyn's second straight triumph yesterday, 5 to 3.

Not only did Stripp bang two out two doubles and Cucciinello the same number of singles, but Tony further distinguished himself by acting as middleman in the season's first triple play. The whole killing which went from Glenn Wright to Stripp to Lon Cheney to Kelly stopped the Reds in the third inning after the first two batters had got on.

Given that kind of encouragement Dazzy Vance had little difficulty holding the five run lead he had piled up for the Reds' mates into Larry Benton the first three innings. Vance allowed but eight hits, one of which was a home run by his old Brooklyn mate, Babe Herman.

Braves Lost Chance

The Dodgers' victory cut the opportunity to climb within a game of the National League top when the Chicago Cubs rallied to score twice in the 9th and defeat the Braves 3 to 2. Guy Bush was his own game when he drove the winning run home with a single to left.

The St. Louis Cardinals jumped on Ed Brandt's Phillie recruit, for five runs in the seventh inning to tie the score after they went out to win in the 10th, 8 to 7. Harvey Hendrick's double featured the seventh inning outburst. The Giants were again rained out at Pittsburgh.

American League

Alvin Crowder set the Detroit Tigers down with two singles, struck out six and did not issue a single pass first base as the Washington Senators won 7 to 0, and boosted their lead in the American League. Crowder helped his own cause with a triple and a single.

The Athletics walloped St. Louis 9 to 4 in the only other American League tilt. The Mackmen collected 17 hits off Blaeholder and Coffman, while George Earnshaw was scattering six. Jimmy Foxx hit four singles.

CANADIAN CHAMPION TO MEET MAN MOUNTAIN

On May 30th the Canadian and British heavyweight champion, Larry Gains, takes on Primo Carnera, the huge Italian, in a ten-round bout at White City, England, and the genial Canadian negro is confident of trimming the Italian that he has put $5000 on the side. This is the first side stake challenge ever flung at Carnera and backs up lengthy Gains' long held view that Primo can be put out like any other boxer with a light, and to the jaw. More than passing interest is attached to the forthcoming event, as Gains is immensely popular in the Old Country and has been working hard to have the color bar lifted. Moreover, he is monarch of all he surveys in the English Celtic world. And he contends, as ever that he is only an easy mark in the game, including Max Schmeling, the champion. There are those who agree, Carnera, by no means a "push-over" won on a foul from George Godfrey, the colored Chicago giant, who, in Jack Dempsey's opinion we until a time, year or so, at least the best in the world. Gains was always a good match for Godfrey. Now Gains has the chance at Carnera. He ought to trounce him. Gains points to the fact that it took Carnera ten rounds to finish the Frenchman, Maurice Griselle, at Paris the other day, while Gains quickly stopped Griselle at Leicester. Incidentally Carnera was a distressing figure after the bout with Griselle, taking a bad jab on the chin from a 195 pound document in Earl Carroll's Vanities after the fight was over. The dancer declared she didn't like the way Primo fought the Frenchman and backed it up by landing in the face with a level-headed flat "I never argue with a woman," replied Carnera, burying his jaw in an overstuffed hanky. If Gains can trim the big boy, who stands 6 feet, 7 inches, it will probably be the virtual end of Primo's ring career, though, to be sure, critics have generally declined to take him over seriously at any time.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

How many old time sport fans remember Napoleon's great harness horse Golden Prince? It was best 21 years ago this month, or in May 1911, that this, then famous, race horse was sold to a prominent Montreal man in Montreal for $700.00.

It was also in the spring of 1911 that George Sullivan was notified to report to the Toronto Baseball Club then members of the Eastern Baseball League. Sullivan was a pitcher of no mean ability in those days but present day baseball fans know him better as an umpire of excellent judgment and unapproachable honesty. George Sullivan retired from active life of umpire in the O.S.L. some two years ago while the fans and players of this city regretted his retirement much more than he will ever know.

For local old timers we found that an indoor league of note was in operation in Belleville during the spring of 1901. We found the account of a game played between the students of the Belleville Business College and the members of the 15th Regiment. The "soldier boys" came down to victory by the score of 21 to 15. The players to perform for the 15th regiment were Sharpe, Hyland, Gilbert, Lancombe, Parks Hanna, Wilder, Hart, Sprague and Foley. The students' lineup was composed of Brady, Newton, McDougall, Wallace, Dignam, Demorest, Gillespie, Johnson and McLeod. Who the umpire was we could not seem to ascertain.

It was in the spring of 1901 that the National Baseball League introduced the rule whereby the catcher was called upon to stand directly behind the plate. Considerable controversy was heard in the press during the period of spring training as to the possibilities of this new fangled rule. "Ring" Gaffney then one of the best known umpires in the business, was of the opinion that the new rule would never be a success. Play has since been considerable by baseball during the past 29 years.

We notice that arrangements have been completed for a 10-round heavyweight bout between Mickey Walker and Paulino Uzcudun, of Spain, at Madison Square Garden, May 20. Jimmy Johnston, director of boxing at Madison Square Garden, was to appear before the Boxing Commission today and ask for postponement of the Jack Sharkey-Max Schmeling title bout from June 16 to June 21. This change would give the contractors five more days to complete their work on the new light stadium on Long Island.

Twenty nine young aspiring ball players turned out at the initial practice of the Belleville Nationals on Friday night. Four pitchers were on the job and limbered their arms up in pre-season fashion. Hardy Trenton, Casey lite of Sulphide, Tommy Poynter and Alex Weir were the boys on the job for Herbie Morris and Archie Langford have not made an appearance as yet.

Manager Grow put the boys through their paces and by chasing activities last night because the infield was quite wet and soggy under foot. He expects to be able to put his infielders to work on Monday night when the first out and practice game is staged.

Of the 29 players out last night only three were of last year's team. Manager Grow was over-whelmingly pleased with the turn-out of young players that he have staked, before, the Belleville Nationals will see many new faces this season.

"Frenzy" Mills was on the job last night and was on the receiving end of the batters' workings. After casting a careful eye over the Intermediate Mills we are firmly convinced that he is in for one of his best seasons. He was quite jubilant of the fact that there were so many young pitchers on the list. The "Frenz" will boast of at least five experienced hurlers before the season opens.

Manager Grow will again push his team at top speed on Monday evening when he has called another practice. He will have his proteges out every night next week.

TEAM FAILS TO SHOW UP

Trenton Softball League is Somewhat in a Muddle

Trenton, May 14 (Special) —The league will have to get straightened out promptly if they are to run on schedule. Rain prevented two games this week and Thursday night, while's team, who were to play the Continental Life did not put in an appearance. Each team has had as much chance to organize and should be ready to play when called upon. Some action on the part of any team should be taken by the league officials committee and if no good reason is given they should be expelled from the league. A good many people were on hand to see the game and have come to look for the sportsmanship of the C.P.R. team in coming forward and volunteering to play an exhibition game rather than disappoint the spectators, it would have been a big disappointment. The game was evenly fought with Continentals winning out by a score of 9 to 8.

The line-up:—

C. P. R.—Steenburg, c; Burtt, p; Long, 1s.; Bernard, 2nd; Willis, 3rd; Begin, ss.; Toll, rf; Smith, cf; Edmonds, lf.

Continental Life—K. Chambers, c; B. Culverson, p; Jordan, 1s; Kidd, c; Bawden, 3rd; Larry, ss; Johnson, lf; Cook, cf; Heaney, rf.

Umpires—Jas. Baker; Anderson, bases.

"YOU TAKE CORN" said Mr. Picobac

"You take corn—and by corn I mean the hard flint corn of commerce—only two counties in Canada can ripen flint corn. Essex, Ontario is one of 'em. And her neighbor, the county of Kent, is the other."

Mr. Picobac slowly and carefully placed the straight stem of his briar pipe between his teeth.

"Something different about the soil . . . something different about the climate," continued he, thoughtfully, "Not only corn. Look at beans . . . Look at melons . . . Look at peaches . . . Look at tobacco—Burley Tobacco. Look at Burley. The seed came from Kentucky in the first place, but Kentucky hasn't got anything on Essex and Kent for Burley tobacco now."

• • •

Picobac Tobacco is the sun-ripened, graded product of select Ontario Burley, as grown in Essex and Kent counties on the Lake Erie front, "the tropic belt of Canada." It gives you a mild . . . cool . . . sweet . . . smoke. Try it. And don't forget, you get more tobacco for your money . . . Good for making cigarettes, too.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your column is the first I turn to in the paper, and I always find something of interest in it.

Will you please give me a word of advice?

1. A friend (who or whom?) has enjoyed a vacation in Europe [i France and Italy] told of things she did on the continent. In England one speaks of the continent, but is it correct when one is in the United States?

2. Also, is it correct to mail a card of greeting to a friend and say "Compliments from Mary?"

Thank you for your kind words and welcome to the column.

1. (A friend who has enjoyed a vacation is the correct form, the relative pronoun who being the subject of the clause, and therefore in the nominative case.)

Since it has become so much the custom to speak of "the continent," one may do this with propriety, since it is perfectly clear what one means — France, Italy, Germany and so forth. In distinction to England, Ireland, Scotland.

2. Yes, this is correct. It is a bit stilted, I think, but on the other hand it has an old-fashioned flavor that is very attractive. We probably would not use this form when we send a message on a card in close friend, but if, say, a country person would send such a card to it would probably carry the flavor of that courtliness and gallantry.

Monogram.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if monogrammed silverware is still in good taste? I just bought a large bowl—silver, but the design is too plain and there seems to be a lovely place for a monogram on it.

Doubtful.

Yes, monogrammed silver is always in good taste — as a matter of fact that is the only kind that has long to have. And when the design is plain we have the opportunity of choosing and planning a more interesting monogram. Large beautiful script letters are charming, or heavier letters if the design is of the heavy kind that needs "setting."

Finger Bowls.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please be kind enough to settle a question that has caused much confusion in my mind. When finger bowls are served is it obligatory to use them?

Constant Reader of Your Column.

No. It is not at all obligatory to use finger bowls. Use them only if you wish, or if you need to.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I have noticed in the paper that the Lindbergh baby is called "the world's most famous baby." Can you tell me if the word famous is used properly there, or would you say popular baby?

2. Is it correct to address a letter to an aunt as, "Dear Aunt Celia" or would "Dear Celia" be sufficient?

1. Famous would, I think, be the better word here, since this world would connote the fact that the baby is known about the world over, while "popular" carries with it more the suggestion of actually being known.

2. Dear Aunt Celia should be used, when this is the relationship, unless in some cases when the aunt and the niece or nephew are of such a near age that they agree to drop the "aunt".

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Treat Nail Cuticle Tenderly and Gently

Women will go miles for a haircut, to be given by a snipping barber who knows exactly what they want, how they want it. They have him trained. Just sit back and let him go about his shearing. They will also follow a facial operator from shop to shop, if she's the kind that is always quitting the old job for a new one. But when it comes to manicuring, most customers are pretty much on the move, trying out prospects. Except that the manicuring is the fussiest, most painstaking work that is done in the beauty marts. Alas! It is not always done superbly.

The manicurist who is never satisfied unless great strings of cuticle are cut away will eventually run into trouble. No matter how sharp the nether point scissors, no matter how steady the hand, it is impossible to scale away skin that overlaps on the nail without making an abrasion. The well-trained operator will refuse to do this butchering. She realizes the danger of infection-bacteria will creep into an open wound — and understands that she may be held responsible. But it is the rushing, badly-taught operator who does too good a job of scissoring.

Manicure must be snipped away. They are dead tissue and will continue to tear if they are not removed. They must first be worked away from the nail with the orange wood stick which has been dipped in peroxide and removed pumice stone. They must be removed neatly with no damage done to the live skin. Nothing else should end.

Besides the danger of infection, there is another reason why cuticle at the base of the nail should not be cut; it will grow thick and tough. There is no need of cutting; there are better ways of getting rid of it. After the cuticle softens give her hands a good soapy scrubbing at night, soaking them for a few minutes in warm water. By careful manipulation of the orange wood stick, the cuticle is detached. Oil is applied — olive oil or cold cream. Rub it well into the nails for this purpose. Next morning, repeat the scrubbing, dip the nails in cold, pat after the cuticle again. The towel will rub away small particles.

The operator who knows is on the day's schedule, Matilda or Irene, her best results. Matilda appears to her finger-nail editor will do the work in half the usual time with the better results.

Filing off hangnails is a habit responsible for many a bad infection. For some reason germs particularly love the edges of the V. LIBRARY CORNER

May 14, 1932

A book of adventurous travel by Mr. Ronald Strasser, an Austrian artist with a passion for wandering is among the Carter Library's new books this week. "The Mongolian Horde" contains his record of five years drifting through Tibet, Mongolia and China. He tells of the daily life of the nomadic people who live in the Himalayan mountain and Gobi desert regions. He was continually surrounded by many dangers. Caravans narrowly escaped wars when he was suspected as a spy and imprisoned by the Mongols and his pictures and notes were looked by Chinese soldiers. The book is illustrated with Strasser's drawings of Mongolian types. Sir Michael Sadler in his introduction to the volume says: "About Mongolia, I suppose, no book as good as this has ever been written. It has immediate interest and will have historic value. Especially from its records with the insight of a trained eye, the incoming tide of a rather superficial Westernism which undermines the dark cliff of terrifying and demon-worshipping Lamaism."

The essential features of Plato's philosophy are presented in a manner that makes the dialogue readable in "Plato and His Dialogues," by O. J. Todd. Originally delivered as lectures they were originally delivered as broadcast talks and give accounts of Plato's views on politics, religion, ethics and love. The author believes that Plato has never been quite out of our own as the age of ancient Greece. He says: "The object here is to discuss our own problems with the illuminating reasoning by our being embedded in them."

The adventures of a British subject who viewed the United States scene from a new angle are told in "Mistress Kerr in the Pullman Door Guest." The author was an Englishman in New York who spent his days and night in rescue missions and on docks. Freight handlers who saw the United States from the back door instead of the front. His life as a tramp is revealed with humour, but the facts take away most of the humor and it is usually associated with a life of "Wanderlust."

Fashion Flashes

BY ALICE ALDEN

Right ahead of us is Summer and the stores are already gathering warm weather frocks from the various collections. A charming model in dusk blue with monotone de soie, embroidered in red zings. There is a wide red linen belt done in tailored linen and one shoulder has flaring short sleeves. There is a white taffeta foundation.

Dress up the camel's hair coat with harmonious details. A model in eggshell has diagonal seams and one shaped pockets. The scarf is of red and eggshell crepe.

You are certain to have at least one short velvet jacket this season. A most useful model is done in black transparent velvet with wide sleeves and a self scarf lined in white satin.

At night one sees much sheer fabric with fur trimming. A new evening frock of pale blue tulle embroidered all over with silver thread. The armholes are banded with dark brown fur.

Mix your own costumes now that separate sweaters, skirts and coats have become so popular. It allows for so many more changes of costume with a smaller wardrobe.

BUB popular is the felt hat tie-pin and the latest fashion in the smart hat of light blue felt has an effective trimming in the form of a scarf done in three shades of blue silk. The scarf is applique on the crown and brim.

COBOURG — Joseph Fox, two, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mecson, Park street, escaped death by only a few seconds when his grandfather crawled into a culvert near the house, in which Mrs. Mecson found the toy lying face downward, and dragged the unconscious child out.

Mrs. Mecson investigated when she saw Joseph's wagon, with which he had been going out to play on the street, standing alone.

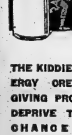
Real relief from CONSTIPATION

WHENEVER digestive distress follows a meal—time, you have an acid condition.

Acidity affects the appetite. What food you do eat sours in the stomach. Gas forms, becomes cooled. The breath is bad. Sick headaches become frequent. You are constipated.



These are danger signals which should never be unheeded. Your system is fairly shouting its need of help; something to help remove the acid waste and restore alkaline balance. An anti-acid to offset the effect of too rich a diet, nervousness, worry, etc.

Men and women who meet this need promptly with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia do not suffer. They eat well, and their food doesn't ferment and cause bloat—they don't know what over-acidity soon disappears. All your gas is dispelled. Stomach, liver and bowels have a better chance to function.

If there is the least hint of too much acid, just take a spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Relief and for several days. Feel this wonderful way. Soon your appetite improves. And elimination. You will wonder how anything so pleasant-tasting can be so prompt-ly effective. 50c bottles at drug stores everywhere in the dominion.

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

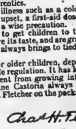
If you've ever taken Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine Aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Aspirin tablets do not depress the heart. They do not upset the stomach. They do nothing but stop the pain.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Aspirin will always save the day. A throat so sore that you can hardly swallow is made comfortable by a gargle made from Aspirin with one good gargle made from these tablets. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little pains after that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day, or a sleepless night.

Genuine Aspirin tablets cost so very little that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

KEEPS little AILMENTS from growing into BIG ONES!



It may be just a coated tongue toilet-with dull eyes, bad odor and bad breath. Or the little one may be cross and peevish. Nature is telling you that you may have a sick child tomorrow. Help tonight to avoid it. Tomorrow it may be harder. A single simple dose of Castoria is usually all that is needed to relieve it. Nine times out of ten it is all that is needed—often keeps a serious illness from developing.

Castoria, you know, is the children's own remedy—made specially to give the gentle help their delicate organs must have. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

In any starting illness such as a cold, a little fever, a food upset, a touch of colic, Castoria is always a wise precaution.

It's never hard to get children to take Castoria. They love its fine taste, and regretful for the relief it always brings to tod-up systems.

For babies or for older children, depend on Castoria's gentle regulation. It has kept many a little ailment from growing into a serious one! Genuine Castoria always has the name Chas. H. Fletcher on the package.

LARGE MARKET IN EVIDENCE

Price of Eggs Remain Stationary From 11 to 13 Cents Dozen

Under the spell of a bright warm May sun, Belleville's Saturday market was one of the largest, in attendance, of the season. Plenty of reasonable garden products were in evidence and sold freely during the early morning.

The price of eggs, at the lumber market, remained quite stationary when they retailed from 11 to 13 cents a dozen. Butter also remained firm at from 20 to 23 cents a pound. Plenty of chickens were offered to the buyers at the prevailing prices of the season. Fine young birds were sold at from 70 cents to $1.25 apiece according to their size and weight thereof. Plenty of home cooking was also in evidence and was soon purchased by the ever-increasing crowd of the market present.

The outside market was the busier part of the two stalls on Saturday. Plenty of young plants for transplanting were offered to the citizens and sold at the usual, seasonable prices. Boxes of young plants brought 25 cents apiece, while other varieties were also offered for sale. The rise in price of potatoes from 50 to 60 cents a bag was noticed and plenty of fresh Ontarios were offered at the increased price. Reasonable quantities of rhubarb were in evidence and sold at the prevailing prices which were fair for the season.

Rustic garden furniture was also offered for sale, while cord wood, cut into stove lengths, was sold from a truck at the roadside before going to its size. Beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips all brought 5 cents a peek, while fresh asparagus sold for 10 cents a bunch. Hot house green onions and lettuce brought 5 cents a bunch and fresh rhubarb retailed at 10 cents a bunch.

ROSLIN W. I. REVIEWS YEAR

Branch Annual Meeting Addressed By Miss B. Jones

The Roslin Women's Institute held their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Stanley Carter on Wednesday afternoon, May 11th. There were eighteen present.

The president, Mrs. Donald Leslie, presided. The meeting opened by singing the Opening Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was responded to by Month-ly cleaning Hints.

The minutes of the previous meeting and those of the last annual meeting were read and adopted.

A letter from the District Secretary stating that District Annual Meeting will be held at Phillipston on June 2nd was read.

Collection was taken for the flower fund.

President—Mrs. J. M. Chisholm.

1st Vice President—Mrs. A. Bateman.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. A. Bateman.

Secretary Treasurer—Miss Letilliar Willson.

Pianist—Mrs. M. Fargey and Mrs. A. Bates.

Auditors—Mrs. H. Chisholm and Mrs. W. White.

Dist. Directors—Mrs. W. Clapsaddle and Mrs. Glen Jah.

Branch Directors—Mrs. D. Leslie, Mrs. M. Fargey, Mrs. H. Sills.

The District President, Mrs. Garbutt was present and addressed the meeting.

She spoke of the need of a School Committee to visit the schools in the community and report on any improvements needed. She also advocated a lady on the school board.

The donation of flowers, flower seeds, trees and shrubs for the beautification of the school grounds was suggested by Mrs. Garbutt.

Mrs. Garbutt said she thought it was a good idea to entertain other branches and in this way become acquainted with the members.

In closing the president said she was proud to belong to the Women's Institute, and any woman might be proud to be able to keep her house clean and tidy and furnish wholesome and nourishing meals for her family. If these conditions prevail the children will feel free to invite their friends to their home, and will not look for recreation and enjoyment elsewhere.

Miss Beatrice Jones who accompanied the president, spoke also.

She said it was a pleasure for her to visit the Roslin Branch. It is only a few years since she became interested in Institute work.

Speaking of the difficulty of procuring leaders the speaker said, each feels the other can do better, and reminded her of the text "And they all with one accord began to make excuses." Others don't want to both-er with community work.

Miss Jones said she always found people willing to help if they were invited to do so, some are lonely and timid and especially the women in rural districts and the social intercourse and entertainment provided by the Women's Institute is a great help.

The people of an earlier generation had more real happiness, than we do today when everything is brought to our doors.

The speaker felt that the day would come when women's example would make the laws, if as much progress is made in the next fifty years as has been made in the last fifty.

We should realize we are God made, God given and God ruled. The power of prayer, family worship, showing God we are thankful. May God help us to get back to the faith of our grandmothers, who had no cars for their conveniences but who lived simply happy lives.

The Farmer's must realize the presence of God for no matter how carefully they prepared the land and planted the right grain. If the rain did not shine, or the rain fall nothing would come of it.

The speaker asked all to remember the goodness of God and reminded all that it took the sending of Jesus to reveal what Sunday was for in the old days the commandments were followed to the letter, and the person was taken sick on Sunday they would not even get a doctor.

When Christ went through the corn fields on Sunday and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, they were going to arrest him, and also when he healed the sick on the Sabbath day, but he showed them the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath.

In concluding Miss Jones asked all to be thankful for the Women's Institute which is doing such good work and make every effort to be in your place at every meeting with sufficient enthusiasm.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

DROPS DEAD LAST DAY OF WORK

London, Ont., May 14—William Eldridge Chatterson, 111 John St., dropped dead Friday afternoon, barely two hours before he was to go to Toronto to receive a 25-year watches carshope, a superannuated employee.

Over-excitement at leaving his work and bidding farewell to his fellow employees is said to have been responsible for the seizure. Mr. Chatterson was born at Whitby, where he resided for 20 years. He first entered the employ of the Michigan Central Railway and later the Canadian National. He had resided here for fifteen years.

Heavy taxation has caused the closing of Rofford abbey, near Worksop, seat of former resident of Lord Saville.

REICHERS OUT ON ATLANTIC

Delayed on Trip to Paris by Damage to Plane in Landing

Harbor Grace, Nfld., May 13 (CP)—Lou Reichers, New Jersey aged pilot, was out over the Atlantic this morning, bound for Dublin, Ireland.

Arriving here at 6.36 (Atlantic Standard time) on a projected two-stop flight from Newark, New Jersey, to Paris, France, he made a perfect landing but a flying stone damaged the left stabilizer of his plane, causing him two hours' delay.

The stone was kicked by the wild as the machine taxied down the field. It tore through the fuselage but Reichers did not think the damage was serious.

He was bitterly disappointed, however, because repairs necessitated the delay. He had planned stopping here only a few minutes for fuel.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop was smoking and thinking and I was just thinking and pop said, Why so pensive? What mity cogitations are racking that small box of cerebral brane? he said.

Meaning what was I thinking of, and I said, I was thinking about what I was going to be when I grow up and half to be something.

You may be a lotty young to be looking seriously so far ahead, and yet many a great ambition, fulfilled in later life, sprang up from seeds planted in early infancy, pop said. In other words a human bean is probently never too young to give free chase to his ultimate purpose in life and the chosen field of his endeavor, he said.

Yes sir I said, and pop said. There are many fertile fields for honorable work. The vote printed pat is not to work selfishly merely for his own comfort and ease but to strive to help others while you are helping yourself; if the whole world was run on that principal it would be a happy and prosperous world at last. The ideal life work for a man would make the world better and more pleasant for others to live in and at the same time improve his own mind so that he would always be learning something new no matter how old he became, pop said.

Yes sir, G'shy, that's just what I was thinking of, I bleeve I will I said.

Will what? pop said and I said, Be a nile watchman, I saw one this morning jog and a rod lamp sitting on a box keeping people from stealing piled up boards and bricks and things, and he was improving his mind and learning something at the same time by reading a magazine while he smoked his pipe, I said.

That's a point that has distorted the best minds since the dawn of history, but it's a well established fact that you dont need a wooden leg to do your homework, so get busy pop said.

Which I did feeling against it.

Miss Mary Nevon

The funeral took place in St. Mary Magdalene Church of Miss Mary A.' Moxon, whose death occured at the home of Mrs James McCarthy, Mary Street after an illness of some months. Miss Moxon was a life-long member of the Anglican Church and a great worker in the Sunday school and women's societies.

Born in Kingston, a daughter of John Moxon, deceased came here when a young girl and with the exception of a few years in Michigan State, U.S.A., spent all her life in Prince Edward County. For some years she conducted a flower shop as part of her brother's hardware store and continued until the business was disposed of.

Surviving is her brother, Mr. H. Moxon, the only family of any. Rev. Enforce Wood etc.

A meeting of Weed Inspectors for the different townships of Prince Edward County was held at the office of the local department of Agriculture with Mr. McLeod, district weed inspector, in attendance. Mr. McLeod gave an instructive talk illustrated by slides. The Weed Control Act will be rigidly enforced in Prince Edward County again this year. It is realized that noxious thistle menace especially is engaging the attention of the inspectors. Farmers, stated Mr. McLeod, are co-operating in the work of getting weeds under control, said Mr. McLeod. Much has been done. He urged local inspectors to take their task seriously and appealed for the co-operation of all.

Mr. C. J. Clapp has presented to Mr. Manning Canada the handsome sum of $1,000 for use in the Parish Hall during the two years conditions hold their meetings.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Mrs. Sheldon never left anything to the imagination. Her every assessment crescendoed; docketed and labelled Elizabeth, Lennox now were there. He was sensitive at very little speculation about the girl. Elsewhere it came, she would take up her residence, she would probably trade that beguiling and impromptu ecstasy as that fixed institution, Henrietta. She was occupied with few friends, with his shy, growing curiosity above life and the world and the firmament above it. It might, every possibly, be amusing to have a girl around the house for his mother. For himself, he did not know. A stranger at his own quarters. Well, had get used to it. If he wondered about anything it was: he wondered in black, inquisitive dark lashes.

After the eyes he noticed her hair. It was very blonde, ashen, as fine and silky as a baby's. For the eyes that Isabel Sheldon's son described, rad bedton of a mouth, a slender, small figure. She was too little and too straight for the prevailing fashion, too much of dressing and fastening could ever Gibsonize her.

She was obviously afraid of him, he saw that. She put a very cold hand into his. He thought it bones: too, it was so soft. so without strength, and her grasp was tremulous, almost under her breath Louisa watched her, having done her duty by her as far as a welcome went, a smooth cheek, presented calmly, a clear, "I hope your trip was not fatiguing, my dear— and this, of course, is Lennox."

It was tea time. Mrs. Sheldon had adhered to the English custom. Elizabeth dropped a biscuit, almost broke a cup, was in agonies of strangeness, shyness, wished herself home. Oh, the dear, shabby house and the girls coming in from school, complaining, laughing, teasing—and Mother there, friendly about them all, a little grey fan of a woman.

Why had she come? She hated the red brick house. Big and dark and sedate, the servers passed out with stiff grunge of clean, washed statuary, the chairs looking as if they had taken root in the green sod of the carpet.

The trip, she thought, had been exciting. She'd never been so far. Cousin Emma's maid had been unsisting right at her elbow. She'd been so antiquated, had such purzled, twitching lips, had produced so many things from her knitted retinue — tickets, peppermints, coins, smelling salts. The country had gone flying by—and then New York —and a brougham —and Cousin Louisa.

Somehow Elizabeth had not remembered Cousin Louisa as so tall and so cadet. She was kind, she was thoughtful she rose one.

Everything was dim to the girl that first evening. Lying in the strange bed, in the strange room, she clung to the thought of Lennox. He was a young man. She had not known many young men, only her sisters' callers, and they, of course, did not count. But Lennox was only a little more than a year her senior. She liked the way his hair grew—that funny, won't-lie-down crest. She liked his sure hands and his smile. He was nervous with her and she thought, and that comforted and amused her and she laughed aloud, and then shrank from the echoes, from the unfamiliar shapes of the furniture bulking blackly solid in the room.

Lennox. Somehow he seemed the only real thing in the house. Henrietta Van Duzen wasn't real, the servants were not except, perhaps, the round-faced one Lennox called Nanna. And Cousin Louisa was not. Not actually.

She fell asleep and dreamed herself home and was afraid to wake. And woke, not knowing whether to be glad or sorry that it had been after all, a dream.

Before many months had passed Lennox was dating things in his mind—before Elizabeth came—the time Elizabeth had the grippe—the week Elizabeth and I were— or did —or saw—

She flicked to into the general scheme of things, it seemed to him, that she had always been there. She was part of the hushed life of the old house, and yet there were blinding moments in which he saw her as detached from that background—standing out, fragile as a paper doll, against and apart from the darkness of it all. the sun catching in the ash blonde hair, weaving little gilt threads through it, warming stars in her eyes.

Elizabeth liked to read poetry, old romances. She could cry and laugh at the limping of his own verses; she would sit and listen and gave them wings, until they forgot his inarticulateness and lame, until "they soared. Elizabeth loved music, she could sit quietly beside him at the concert, the opera, he would surprise tears upon her cheeks

Such a child! When they skated together how she laughed how rosy she grew, how her voice tangled in her throat, and her breath smoked in the frosty air!

Two years, and the seasons swinging, and day by day the boy and girl growing into one another's consciousness. First, the girl, shy, a little fearful; then they had their friends, planned, compared; now they were shy again.

Louisa watched them grimly. She said to herself: "It will be as I thought." Almost she despised the children for blundering, but old blind nature for making her triumph so easy. Day by day she had brought them together, giving them as much judicious freedom as mid-century permitted, weaving her plans, binding them together in the invisible and nodding in her angry satisfaction.

Two years. And now one of them was twenty and the other twenty-two.

The awareness of love is not inevitably a thunderclap. It can be of slow, imperceptible growth, a growth from need, habit, and suppressed flowering into the full perfection of abiding beauty and unexpected time.

Louisa had provided the soil, the right conditions. She watched as the gardener does but without tenderness.

Lennox had graduated from Columbia in June. He had not done creditably enough Directly afterwards, his mother had taken Elizabeth abroad. It was Elizabeth's first trip, she was palpitant with a gentle excitement, Lennox with Hyde Park was no more than Central, found himself bored at conventional portions of Europe through new, enchanted eyes. Her eyes. He had been so often, since his childhood, he had not thought to find wonder in familiar things. But he did.

The previous summer had been spent a staid hotel in the Adirondacks. That had been adventure enough for her, Elizabethe thought. Now she knew that adventure was only beginning.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Louisa let the gilde books go, this time. She permitted them to guide each other, in Venice, in Paris, through the Black Forest, with a long stay in England to end it all. Elizabeth and Lennox were in each others company almost constantly.

Now they were cooling home again with their memories. They were walking along the while decks together, they were lying in their steamer chairs, watching the ship rock swell of the water, they were saying, "Do you remember?"

Lennox turned his eyes from the horizonless ocean to the girl. She was slender and trim in a Peter-Thomson skirt and blouse, the sides on ends of her sailor-knotted tie flying. It was an unseasonably cold day in early October. Under the stiff brim of her sailor hat her fine hair curled and coiled, little moving shadows on the cheeks that were warm, rosy brown from sun and fog and salt winds. She smiled at him, happily, and spoke—

To the blank astonishment he did not understand a word she was saying. He was looking at her, he was hearing her voice, yet words had not for him, instantly, no meaning.

This was Elizabeth . For two years his friend, his sister. This was Elizabeth. His amazing memory—

"Are you deaf or day-dreaming?" she asked, laughing.

"Did you say something? I—didn't hear."

She raised her eyes to his then. For a moment they stared, rapt. Was it revelation, or was it knowledge of something that they had always known and had never until this moment interpreted?

Elizabeth went red, went white. Stumbling she came to her feet, dropping the plaid rug.

"I—"

She never made the frantic escape. She fled along the deck and he made no move to follow her. He sat there, straightly, his hands clasped, hard, on his knees, and pursued with his bewildered eyes the advancing line of the waves.

Two years—and he had not known! Had she not?

Elizabeth went to her cabin and threw herself, face downward, on the narrow berth. For the moment, she had no hold on reality, she had no sense of being herself, a person, an entity. She was as fluid as the water beneath the straining decks, she was as molten as the light which the moon would spill presently, across the sea, she was as tremulous as the newest star in strange heavens.

Two years—and she had not known! But had she not?

There was a step in the passage, halting at her door. A knock. She sat up, pushing the tumbled hair from her eyes, said—and wondered that her voice was still her voice— "Come in."

Mrs. Sheldon entered, closed the door behind her, stood with her hand on the knob, very erect. Her eyes rested a moment, with disapproval, upon the sailor hat, rolling across the floor where Elizabeth had flung it, spinning, almost hoop-like, to the motion of the boat.

Louisa released her hold on the knob, picked up the hat, laid it carefully away without comment. As she did so, she asked, "You are not well, Elizabeth?"

"Oh, oh, yes."

Well! She had never been as well in her life, as strong, as buoyant. And yet she was ill—ill with sudden fevers, with uncontrollable shivering, with the evanescent aching of an old wound that had been dealt her long ago and which now troubled her for the first time.

Mrs. Sheldon asked evenly: "You and Lennox have had a delightful days you?"

"Yes, I—" the girl stammered sitting upright now, supporting herself on palms laid flatly on the berth, "why no—what makes you ask?"

"Nothing." Louisa assured her, yet wondered, that is all. I found him alone on deck; he answered me rather brusquely when I asked him where you were."

Elizabeth lay down again. It was bearing tea time, she knew. But her limbs were leaden, abruptly, she turned her face to the wall and began to cry. She felt alone. She was lost, lost in the world she had known, lost to herself. She had no one to whom she might turn, of whom she might ask why? and again what does it mean?

MR. AND MRS. — JOE PUTS A LITTLE MAKE-UP ON

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 24.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

His first night in the jungle was one which the son of Tarzan held longest in his memory. No savage beasts menaced him; there was no sign of hideous barbarians. But crouched close to the great ape in the crotch of the tree, the boy shivered through a sleepless night. Fear had thrust him into the jungle, a fugitive, and because of the murder by the ape he thought he could never return to his parents to bring shame upon their honored name. Self-blame plunged him into deep misery. Through the night he longed to die, but with the rising sun his spirits rose. He would return to civilization by another way, avoiding the little trading place where even now the body of the stranger so mysteriously slain was being discovered. He shook Akut into wakefulness. "Come," he said, "I am cold and hungry. We, must search for food out there."

He pointed to the open plain and slid to the ground. The ape looked carefully about first, sniffing the morning air. Then, satisfied that no danger lurked near, he descended slowly to the boy's side. "Numa and Sabor, his mate, feast upon those who descend first and look, afterward," said the old ape, giving the son of Tarzan his first lesson in jungle lore. Side by side they set off across the rough plain running until the boy was warm.

Some eggs they found and these he sucked raw, as also he ate the roots and tubers which Akut unearthed. The ape contented himself with some rodents and worms he dug up. Beyond the plain across a low bluff they found a shallow water hole. A herd of zebra galloped away as they approached to drink. Akut now took the lead, the boy following close upon its heels, his every sense alert, his nerves keyed to a high pitch of excitement. This was life!

At The Belle

TWO FEATURE PROGRAM AT BELLE TODAY AND MONDAY

"The Crowd Roars," starring James Cagney and Joan Blondell will head the Belleville premiere on its two feature program at the Belle today and Monday, matinee daily.

The new film brings Cagney to the screen in the role of an auto racing champion, who, in his utter devotion to his younger brother, gives up not only the girl he loves but his title as king of the tracks as well. From advance reports it is learned that this picture is breathtaking in its description of the dangers and thrills encountered by the speeding drivers. A feature is the sequence which occurs when the gas tanks of one of the racing cars explodes, leaving a flaming trail in its wake and sending its driver to a fiery death.

In addition to Cagney and Blondell, the cast includes Ann Dvorak, Eric Linden, Guy Hilker and Frank McHugh. Bill Arnold, Lee Nomis, Harry Hertz and Fred Frame are four of the fourteen racing drivers who took part in the production of "The Crowd Roars."

Kay Francis Stunning.

Kay Francis is stunning in "Man Wanted," her first starring picture for Warner Brothers, which is the second feature starting on the same program. Miss Francis is supported by a large cast including David Manners, Andy Devine, Una Merkel, Kennedy Thomson, Claire Dodd and Charlotte Merriam.

The story involves the infidelities of the star's husband, played by Kenneth Thomson, her resulting unhappiness and the separation which drives man and wife to other arms. David Manners appears in the role of the secretary who became indispensable to Miss Francis in business and love affairs. Claire Dodd appears as the siren who charms Thomson into another infidelity.

"The plot presents several new angles hitherto not seen on the screen. The action is rapid, moving from one beautiful setting to another, reflecting the fast pace and speedy life of modern fashionables in business and society.

Miss Francis displays a complete wardrobe during the various sequences of the picture, her costumes ranging from bandoir and beach pajamas to the smartest possible evening gowns.

"Man Wanted" will be screened twice daily at 2.45 and 8.30 p.m. The last complete double-show in the evening commencing at 8.30 p.m.

"DEVIL'S LOTTERY" WITH ELISSA LANDI

Dinnerware Monday Night

Her ardent literary ambition proved the stepping stone to fame for Elissa Landi, sensational screen artiste whose latest picture, "Devil's Lottery," opens a two day run at the Capitol on Monday. During early in her career to become a playwright she joined a small repertoire company in England to obtain first hand knowledge of the stage.

As an actress she was an instant success and producers made her all kinds of flattering offers. Finally she was induced to play the leading role in "Storm." After the initial performance critics declared her a star and again offers began to pour in. But Miss Landi only turned a deaf ear and returned to stock for three years, during which period she wrote "The Hussy" and "Nellson."

Deciding that she had absorbed all she could from the small stock company, Miss Landi accepted the leading role in "Lavender Ladies," and "The Constant Nymph." Next she played the feminine lead in two silent Elinor Glyn pictures and opposite Adolphe Menjou in a French movie.

Her first American appearance was in the Broadway stage success "A Farewell To Arms," and her performance entered the Hollywood moguls into some spirited bidding for her services. It was with Fox Films that she finally signed and her first talking picture was "Body and Soul." "Always Goodbye," "Wicked," and "The Yellow Ticket" followed in rapid succession and after a short visit to England she made her present vehicle, "Devils Lottery."

Miss Landi's histrionic success has not dimmed her literary ambition. Her latest book "House For Sale," was recently published by an American publisher.

In "Devil's Lottery" Miss Landi plays a woman of the world whose glamour brings shame to one man, death to another, understanding to a third and love to a fourth. She is supported by a sterling cast that includes Victor McLaglen, Alexander Kirkland, Paul Cavanagh, Barbara Weeks and Beryl Mercer. The production, directed by Ben Hecht, was adapted from Halbro Barry's successful novel.

Dinnerware

Monday night is Dinnerware Gift Night when another article from the beautiful Kingswood Richelieu set will be given to each lady.

Tonight

Tonight "All Quiet on the Western Front" makes its final appearances at the Capitol Theatre.

SWEEPSTAKES PROVE DEVIL'S LOTTERIES

Half a million, won from a lottery ticket that cost four dollars, would seem to be the exact definition of paradise on earth. In most cases it proves to be the complete definition of hell. The experience of a number of the great Sweepstakes winners of recent years certifies it. The craze that drives to easy money brings death, dishonor and despair—misery that is the lovely from which it momentarily releases its victims.

The perils that attend this particularly reckless form of speculation and its effect on character are shown in "Devil's Lottery," soon to appear in Belleville. Elissa Landi, Paul Cavanagh and Victor McLaglen are featured in it, all English players, familiar with the traditions of the British turf where great lottery races are run. The picture is based on facts as sensational as those submitted herewith.

The unfortunate winner of a Sweepstakes prize finds overnight that thousands who never heard of him before know him and want his money. They will marry, murder or sue him for it. Only this year, Clarence C. Nook, a motor mechanic of Buffalo, New York, won $885,000, the second largest in the Irish Sweepstakes. The Overseers of the Poor of New York City, handling the money under a law one hundred years old, have had scarcely a penny of it. He was dismissed from his job. To avoid the Overseers, he fled to Canada. His money is still in an Irish bank.

Another motor mechanic, Robert Whittaker of Bristol, England, won $415,000 in 1400 and lost it in Calcutta Turf Club Sweepstakes. Proposals of marriage from sisters all over the world turned the young man's head. He jilted his fiancee, and his friends, learning that a round of the night-life capitals, Paris, Monte Carlo, Vienna, made ball entertainer acquired him. A former lover of hers found them together and shot Whittaker dead. Barely $20,000 was found to be left of his quarter millions.

Mrs. Selina Thompson ,who kept The Shadow Inn at Yorkston, a quiet English village ,won $100,000 third prize in last year's Manchester November Handicap Irish Sweepstakes. While she was answering the telephone message that told her of her luck, a neighbor announced that her brother-in-law had been killed by a street car. Next day Mrs. Thompson received 1,800 begging and threatening letters, and proposals of marriage. The shock shattered her nerves and she was compelled to sail for Nova Scotia to escape her worries.

Emilio Scala, a London cafe owner and two friends, Apicella and Constantino went thirds on a book of tickets last year in the Irish Sweepstakes. They won the first prize, $1,750,000. They had agreed to divide any possible winnings equally, but the lucky ticket had been the complimentary one that accompanies each book—hoho Quarrels began over the purse. Attorneys are now fattening on the prize money for one of England's most sensational lawsuits.

GOOD REASONS FOR CHANGING SPARK PLUGS

Champion Chief Engineer Rohde Tells Benefits of early Refitting New Plugs in Car

Champion National Change Week, May 9 to 16, is the week when motorists install new sets of spark plugs in their car motors to obtain the better performance which experience has taught them will result.

Change week was established after prolonged research and thousands of experimental proved certain facts about spark plugs.

One of the facts thus revealed was that when spark plugs have been used in 10,000 miles of driving they have deteriorated to such an extent that new sets secure more power and speed, faster acceleration and all around better performance and economy for another 10,000 miles

The reason is explained by C. O. Rohde, Champion's Chief Engineer and a recognized authority on ignition problems of internal combustion engines.

"The intense heat, the ravages of chemical reactions and the tremendous mechanical shocks to which spark plugs are exposed inevitably take their toll, no matter how well made the plugs may be," says Mr. Rohde.

"The insulator becomes incrusted with bits of carbon and dirt, and with the aid of extreme temperatures these carbon particles break down the glazed insulator surfaces. The result is a diffusion of current through spots thus created, a decline in the spark's intensity and a consequent loss in the engine's efficiency.

"Electrodes share with insulators in the destructive effects of the demoralizing forces at work. In the modern spark plug electrodes are of special analysis, specially treated alloys. They last much longer than those in spark plugs of a few years ago, but there still remains an inferno of heat and electricity through which they must function.

"After 10,000 miles of service the results of this harsh treatment are readily observed in the electrodes of all spark plugs.

"The centre electrode is pitted and burned away. The ground electrode is likewise pitted and burned so that it no longer presents a parallel surface to the centre electrode. In consequence the sparks from one electrode to the other is small, of no great intensity, and the gap adjustment becomes too great for the spark to jump under load conditions, thirsty pulls and rapid revolutions.

"It is a proved fact that new spark plugs every 10,000 miles represent an actual economy in gas and oil, and, furthermore, they restore in large measure new car power, speed and acceleration.

"New spark plugs every driving season pay for themselves in improved performance and in addition they yield welcome extra dividends in driver satisfaction."

You should know this about oil, says mechanic

The proper oiling of household devices presents a problem different from any other form of lubrication. Sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, the electric refrigerator, electric clocks, washing machines and similar devices have a mechanism to collect dirt and rust when not in service. Consequently these should be cleaned and oiled as one should clean and protect as well as lubricate.

3-in-One Oil will do these three things. For, unlike ordinary oil, it is not a straight oil. 3-in-One oil is one—animal, mineral and vegetable. It penetrates quickly, cleans the metal surfaces, "stays put," reduces wear and saves power. It also prevents rust and tarnish.

Don't make the mistake of thinking "any kind of oil will do." Play safe; insist on 3-in-One Oil. Sold everywhere, by good grocery, hardware, drug and general stores. For your protection look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

At that, one cannot exactly be blamed for occasionally heaving a sigh for the good old days when the smartest trick in riding generation knew was to whip a mouth-organ out of the pistol pocket, slap the thing against his trouser leg to knock the dirt out and play all the new tunes from Home Sweet Home to Turkey in the Straw.— Border Cities Star.

Diary Thrown Out Into Garbage Aird Swears At Hydro Probe Today

MARKET SLIPPING

Information Says Aird Was of Value to Mr. Sweezey

Toronto, May 16 (By The Canadian Press) — Denial that he had ever received more than the $50,000 under investigation from the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario was made by John Aird jr., central figure in the Royal Commission Enquiry on Hydro, today. Mr. Aird's former partner, R. W. Millard of Toronto, had suggested last week "there was a possibility" his former partner had received more than the original $50,000.

Aird himself was taken to task shortly before the luncheon adjournment for his "fathog meter" by W. Tilley, K.C., Commission Counsel, was quizzing him as to whether he had received payment of $125,000 from the Beauharnois Company on bonds at the first meeting with R. C. Sweezey, then head of the Beauharnois Company, and Aird had stated he could not recall when payment had been made of the bonds.

Misinterpretation

The Beauharnois matter was taken up when Mr. Tilley concluded the Mackenzie-Mann matter, in which Mr. Aird was paid the $50,000.

Fred Roberts, Toronto lawyer, taking the stand before Aird, explained that evidence he had given with regard to himself and Paul Reine, manager, had been misinterpreted. He and Reine were reported as acting for the Toronto interests of Minneapolis in attempting to gain control of the bonds, but that the Foshaya were in no way concerned, he said.

No Attempt to Conceal

Aird's diary which Millard claimed he had seen several times—was "thrown out in the garbage" with other papers when the two dissolved partnership, Aird stated today.

There had been no attempt by Hydro or by him to conceal any payment by not including it in income tax returns, witness said. He himself had spoken to "the man who gave him the cheque," and Sweezey was entering it as an "expenses." The man had then told him the Hydro commission was entering the payment as "commission."

Market Slipping

He had learned the Beauharnois Corporation was having difficulty in obtaining a Hydro contract for 250,000 horsepower, he said, through "common gossip" in Montreal. Time was required to have Beauharnois' since bonds had to be floated and the "money markets had slipped." The Hydro contract was the keystone in the Beauharnois development, and he did not see Sweezey and asked "how he was getting along with the Hydro Commission."

Sweezey had told him of difficulties encountered, and that he had outlined his success in the Madawaska project.

Information of Value

"He seemed to think this easy and realize it had information of benefit to him," Aird said. Eventually, they came to an agreement whereby Aird would assist the Beauharnois to raise the 60 cents per horsepower if the company was successful in obtaining the contract.

Aird will return to the stand this afternoon.

Missing File

"The missing file" reached the commission's hands after Kenneth McLeod, Toronto, had offered it for sale to members of the government, opposition and newspapers.

Roberts testified Friday that Aird had negotiated with Hydro while he (Roberts) had been negotiating with Reine.

Correspondence showed this was correct, and Mr. Tilley said he couldn't understand it. Aird maintained he was anxious to dispose of the property.

No Agreement

There had been no definite arrangement between Aird and Hydro whereby Aird was to get $25,000 fee and $50,000 for expenses. There had been no actual expenses, he admitted, although considerable work was done. In any event, he finally received $50,000 from Hydro and nothing extra for expenses. There had been no actual expenses, he admitted, although considerable work was done. In any event, he finally received $50,000 from Hydro and nothing extra for expenses.

Cablegram Denied

His father, Sir John Aird, had seen J. A. O'Brien, former of the power tights, in Ottawa, but had not made a trip for that purpose solely. No definite arrangement had been made for the purchase of development of Madawaska at this meeting, he said.

Aird denied having received a cablegram from his father when the Montreal was sailing for England. Sir John did not see anyone on his own behalf prior to sailing so far as witness could recall, with the exception of Mr. O'Brien.

When pressed by Mr. Tilley as to how he had received the cablegram, Aird said he did not remember having received it.

Memory Falters

"Well your memory is not of the best—that is shown by your examination for discovery," commented Mr. Tilley.

"Was more than $50,000 paid to Mr. Aird by the Hydro," counsel asked point blank.

"Never," said Aird. "How it can be suggested that Mr. Magrath (C. A. Magrath), then Hydro chairman, would do such a thing is ridiculous."

Witness was emphatic that there had been no further payment for services than the $50,000. He did not know, he said, that at one time it was suggested by Hydro that $100,000 for expenses Aird had received only the one payment.

Informed of Steps

Millard had been kept fully informed of every step taken by Aird in the negotiations with Hydro, although Aird could not recall having told O. C. Starry, consulting engineer for Millard, of their progress.

When Hydro finally dealt directly with the O'Brien interest, all the information that Aird had given and compiled was turned over to Hydro, Aird said, and he had helped both sides further when necessary. He could not recall whether Magrath had ever discussed the price O'Brien was asking for the property.

Speeding up Negotiations

Magrath's interest was in speeding out of the negotiations was merely for the purpose of speeding them up, witness said.

"We were not being rushed out. The only reason for bringing Magrath and O'Brien together was merely to speed up negotiations," Aird said.

INTERCHANGE OF PULPITS

Rev. A. E. Jones and Choir of Trenton at Holloway St.

"Seeing the unseen" was the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. A. E. Jones, pastor of Trenton King Street United Church last evening. The Rev. R. B. Neal and the choir of the Holloway Street Church conducted the services at the King Street United Church in Trenton while Rev. Jones and the King Street choir conducted the evening services at Holloway Street Church. The King Street choir twenty-four strong rendered several anthems and solos, which were highly appreciated by the members of Holloway Street Church last evening.

In the Holloway Street Church pulpit Rev. Jones took part of the 17th verse of the 6th chapter of 2nd Kings for his text; "And Elisha prayed, and said Lord, I pray thee open His eyes, that he may see.' Mr. Jones opened his sermon by explaining the position in which the young man quoted in this passage of Scripture could only see the material things in life, but, when the Lord opened his eyes he was able to see, discern the spiritual or Godly side of life. Rev. Jones was of the opinion that we, to-day have a little too much that way inclined and therefore did not see the world beneath the spiritual side of life. The speaker pointed out, that a person could not know God if he ever wishes to accomplish anything important or big in this world. He cited the case of the fall of Napoleon due to his lack of not being able to see anything but the material things in this world.

"Pisces' and "Isaac Hull," that vision of seeing the unseen?" asked the speaker and he explained, that only through faith, a keen sense of accepting Him would one ever see the fine things existing in this life of life. He quoted three rules whereby we may see the unseen; "first, conscientious prayer; second obedience and lastly a pure heart. Jones assured that all that was needed to know God. In conclusion the speaker assured us that the great result of all this 'knowing God' would eventually cure our fears and soothe our afflictions. "Have courage and do the things that you know God ought to be done in you and you will then See the Unseen", said Rev. Jones in closing.

During the evening Mr. L. Hearts, organist of the Holloway Street church, presided at the organ while the choir "sang two anthems, "Lead Me Lord" and "I Hark My Soul" with Mrs. J. F. Monroe and Mrs. A. Eyestad taking the solo parts. Mrs. J. F. Monroe and Mr. Mr. Comeau both sang solos during the service.

CONFER DEGREE ON STIRLING MEN

Great Rally of Oddfellows Held in Community Hall

Stirling—The High School football team of town and the Marmora H. S. team played on the school ground, Saturday afternoon, the former winning by a number of runs.

Wednesday was the first half holiday and a large number of prominent citizens were disappointed owing to lack of memory evident-ly.

The local Lodge of the I.O.O.F. met in the Community Hall on Wednesday evening, May 11th when approximately 250 members assembled to see the First Degree conferred upon three candidates by the Kingston Lodge. Some seventy members came from Kingston in two large busses. Members were present from Trenton United, Stirling, Madoc, Belleville Springbrook, Campbellford, Frankford, Tweed, Napanee, Oshawa, Thomasburg. The Kingston band was very busy playing in the conferring of the Degree.

Bro. Geo. Carlisle, N.G., of the local lodge performed the duties of Noble Grand, and Bro. Wm. Hall, of Gananoque and Bro. Howard of Napanee.

An interesting feature of the evening was the proposal to form a Ramcliffe Travelling Gavel by the members present. This gavel started in Ottawa about a year ago and has travelled over 300 miles and visited the Odessa Eureka Lodge to receive from the Westboro Lodge No. 428, the gavel. It is to be presented before it is sent on to another lodge, preferably one in Belleville to stimulate interest in the Order. The members were unanimous in favor of the proceedings of the evening.

PRINCE EDWARD MAN TAKEN BY GYPSIES

Defrauded in Some Way of a Sum of $14.00

Gypsies are again travelling the highways and byways.

There are a few of them in Prince Edward county and as a result of their visit one farmer of that county is lamenting the loss of $14.00, which he claims to have been defrauded of by a gypsy woman.

The affair was not reported to the Belleville office of the Ontario Provincial Police until Monday morning and when Constable Hall of the force was made this morning by Provincial Police in the county of Hastings where to be found. It is thought that they decided it would be wise for them to pitch their camp elsewhere. No doubt they will be located later.

Police Court

Four convictions were registered in the local Police Court, for the breach of the Highway Traffic Act, held this Magistrate's Court this morning. Following the convictions a warning was pointed to all local motorists to the effect that the Highway Traffic Act Amendment has been issued orders to check up, fully, any violations of the Highway Traffic Act in Belleville. Especially mentioned was the use of muffler cut-outs. Many have been observing at stop streets throughout the city, which laws has been previously warned about the breaking of these laws but it seemingly does no good with the result that the police department have started to clean-up the situation by summoning offenders of these minor breaches. The four convictions registered in today's police court are but a forerunner of what is to follow if the practice is continued by the local motorists.

William Powers age 26, appeared before His Worship on a charge of vagrancy. The accused told the court, that he was on his way home and upon ascertaining that he came from Prince Edward Island the judge was given an hour to get out of the city.

John Johnson, a Swede, from Montreal, did not answer his name when it was called in court and his bail, which he had previously ten-dered, was called and was duly estreated. As Johanson was only arrested for intoxication no effort will be made to ascertain his whereabouts due to the fact, that the set bail which he left behind him was sufficient to pay his fine.

The last case to be heard was a charge against a local grocer for selling fresh meat without obtaining a license. After hearing the evidence His Worship fined the accused $1.00 and costs and instructed him to procure a license at once.

Neighborhood Mourns Bobtail, Feeds Young with Eyedropper

Last autumn among the black squirrel stories that appeared in these pages was one concerning two of these little animals that were making their home on Burnham Street, and had become then, the pets of the neighborhood.

All winter and spring they have been in and out of the homes in the vicinity, and "Bobtail," who is of the gentler sex, has been the favorite, the squirrel having especially have loved her, in houses and on the street she would play with them, and hardly a home there-abouts but not one snapshot of her posed with some youngsters.

This spring "Bobtail" when she believed in race suicide, made her home in a tree in front of Mr. Fred White's on Burnham Street, and it was known later that a little family of black squirrels had been ushered into this world of strife and turmoil. Sunday afternoon "Bobtail" was found dead near her apartment whether she had deceased from eating some poisoned food or from natural causes will not be known. The folk, both old, middle-aged, youthful, young and very young along Burnham Street are mourning her loss.

Knowing that there was a very young squirrel family unable to care for themselves in the nest in the tree, Sidney, White yesterday worked hard and managed to eventually get them out of the nest. They, four of them, now are housed in a cosy box in the White yard and the White family are kept busy feeding them by means of eye dropers, their first day motherless has been filled with no casualties. The baby squirrels were, Sunday, the centre of youthful attention and solicitude, old and young along Burnham Street are hoping they will survive the vicissitudes of childhood and become as great favorites as their deceased mother had made herself.

TRUCKING ON SUNDAYS

A few days ago at a meeting of the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario, held in Toronto, Mr. W. R. McCreary, M.P., in this city, urged co-operation of all truckowners in keeping their trucks off the highways on Sunday, use of the roads on that day being all right only in case of emergency.

Everyone will endorse the outspoken attitude of Mr. McCreary. Bellevilleites have endured long enough the irritation from trucks which pound over the streets on Sunday, day and night, making the Sabbath quiet hideous with the thump and pounding of their engines. Belleville is not the only community to suffer as every city and town and village on the highways have a similar story to tell of this annoyance on Sunday for business purposes. But Belleville like older centres along the line does feel the influence of more trucks and truck owners because the highway is through a settled part of the city, not as in Toronto where noise would not make so much difference.

Sunday evening while a huge truck was climbing Bridge Street East hill, the noise of the motor from the Bridge Street United Church was practically drowned and his words were at least lost in the puttering of a was climbing hill. The annoyance was so great that many protests were voiced after the service.

There is no reason for these disturbances on Sunday. For many a truck driver and the owners of his load are few as compared with the hundreds and thousands who are annoyed by these noisy monsters. Other accommodation can surely be made for the transportation of certain freight which would not cause the annoyance these have caused.

Anyway highways are too crowded with passenger motors on Sunday to admit the trucks and vans of freight and express agencies. Rather than the number of trucks on the road would seem to warrant.

It is stated that there is a regulation which is framed to prevent such annoyances on Sunday and if so it ought to be called in to prevent such disturbances that of last evening and those of any hour on any Sunday.

If there is no law to cover this movement of trucks, efforts should be made to secure legislation to meet it. The people as a whole desire Sunday observance and they are those who should be considered and the few who are interested financially or otherwise on Sunday. Mr. McCreary must be thanked for his bold protest at Sunday trucking.

Apropos of this, it might be noted that motorcar owners when passing churches on Sunday should make the least possible noise as this will appeal to people in such consideration at their hands.

In the particular annoyance noted on Sunday evening the truck was using a Diesel oil engine which is not on the highway through the city and on which is a still more steep than that on Dundas Street, and, since the highways runs, Mayor Tice has written a letter of protest to the company whose truck is said to have been that causing the disturbance asking that residential streets be not used for trucking.

CHERRY ORCHARDS

Cherry-treed Prince Edward County is a flower-lovers' paradise. Other parts of Ontario may boast their peach bloom but the vision of cherry orchards is one that is unchallenged. Indeed it is one of the most sees and the imagination behind the eye.

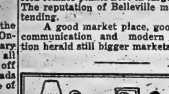
Hundreds of motoring parties drove through the cherry orchard area Sunday and thrilled to the emotions to which the beauty of the scene gave birth.

This section has a lot to be loveliest in the whole province, it has attractions which cannot fail to attract at any season but it has that one special appeal on a day in middle May—the cherry orchards.

MASEFIELD'S TRIBUTE

Commenting upon the Masefield tributes to Shakespeare at the opening of the New Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, a writer in the Montreal Gazette states it is a decent fragment of prose with a certain rhythmic swing—but that was nothing more because laureates are not always at their best under command.

Poetry cannot be spontaneous or lose its force, written under the free stimulus of the imagination. Why do poets write? As well ask why the sun shines. The Gazette says: "There is no mechanical thanking up of the poetic faculty." Shelley said "When my brain gets heated with thought, it sets bells and throws off sparks and words faster than I can skim them off." That is poetry.



Masefield however has written under the inspiration some of the finest poetry of the language.

THE MARKET

What is a market worth? More than the place of barter, more than a place of meeting and recreation. It means publicity for trade—growth.

Good roads today mean much to markets in cities of the size of Belleville could mean more to the producer and the consumer. Saturday brought an instance of this in the attraction to Belleville market of a gardener from beyond Napanee, who sold tomato plants here in large quantities. The reputation of Belleville market is exciting.

A good market place, good means of communication and modern transportation herald still bigger markets.

THE INTELLIGENCER EXTRA — AFTERNOON EDITION — Belleville — Sunday, June 3, 1866—6 p.m.—Second Edition 2 p.m.—Third Edition 6 p.m. Sounds like a war, and it was. The Intelligencer Extra quoted above consisted of a sheet, five by ten inches printed on one side only, and told of incidents in the Fenian invasion. One stated to be the location of Fort Erie and the retreat of the invaders across the border, closely pressed by Canadian troops. Several casualties were reported among the Fenians, and treated at emergency hospitals at Buffalo. All of this was reported at length in the "Second Edition, 2 p.m." while in the "Third Edition, 6 p.m.," on the same sheet was a despatch from the Toronto Leader's correspondent at the front describing the Battle of Ridgeway commenting that the action was a stupendous and terrible blunder, the infantry rushing to the attack on entrenched position without the support of artillery. A despatch "By Grand Trunk Line, 8 p.m." said that "The train with the 22nd Battalion arrived at Port Hope safely at 6 o'clock. It is reported that the Fenians are still gathering at Potadam Junction, and also that there are 20 of Malone."

SHE FOUND A MOUSE in a can of chili con carne, and her susceptibilities were injured to the extent of demanding thousand dollars ($15,000)—at least that is the claim in court of Miss Grace King, of Mound City, Illinois, who has begun action for that sum from a local grocer. Defence states it did not put the mouse in the chili con carne, did not know that there was anything untoward in any of their stock, and after the aforesaid mouse was placed therein as a form of premium, or whether he ate some of the chili con carne and died of wonder that there could be anything so delicious, or—and so on far into the night. Miss King bases her hopes upon securing thousand dollars upon a dead mouse found in a fair state of disrepair, and if even faith and optimism deserved to be rewarded she's takes the top layer of the frosted cake.

THAR'S GOLD IN THEM THAR HILLS has been a popular saying these many years, back where the West begins—Bret Harte may have originated it; then again Mark Twain may have coined the saying from his gregarious western vocabulary—anyway what we started out to say was that advices from the far west state that the bleak and arid hills of Colorado and New Mexico are witnessing the, return of the grizzled prospector, moving slowly along mountain trails with a pack-burro dogging his footsteps. But now, according to a western newspaper, he is looking only for something of interest to the eye and left on which man may make a dollar. It is the last pin left standing in the bowling alley of industry." Old camps are being revived and new ones may be developed in both placer and lode mining. In Canada prospectors are now more interested in platinum, as the price has risen. Some prospects away out beyond Sundown at Great Bear Lake in the Canadian northwest, but there are still some that tramp distant hills and look for signs of cobalt, the color of the greatest silver camp in the world, and the tiny specks which led to the creation of the Porcupine gold camp. Over the hills and far away, fighting the flies from day to day, with a past that's murky, a present that's dull but a future gilded with rainbows of silver and gold, tinted with radium —the foot of the rainbow just ahead where the pot of gold lies. Oh, it's great to be a prospector with the great vault of heaven for a roof and the soft pine needles for a couch, a little flour, a little bacon, coffee perhaps, and a frying pan, besides the little prospector's pick which may tap that treasure house of millions and lead to purple and fine linen, when the night time shall be full of real romance. And the one that pestered another day shall fold their wings like the buzzards and silently steal away.

OLD DOC DOBBIN

Old Doc Dobbin was a horse whose work was very much out of the ordinary. He did not draw cows or trucks or milk wagons. He had a little odd assortment. He was the helper calling: to supply the needs of the medical fraternity for antitoxin. During his lifetime his blood is said to have produced enough of the serum to furnish treatment for 41,000 children.

They probably never knew their benefactor. He certainly was not aware of his benefactions though he must have thought his life a little odd sometimes. It was too strange to science, however, which has grown accustomed to the role animals play as the friend of man the Unknown Soldiers of the laboratory.

In New Brunswick, where his death this week brought grief to many human friends, there is fortunately no anxiety about Dr. Dobbin's place will be filled by Mickey, a 12-year-old boy.—New York Times.

"CIVILIZED" DIVORCE

Anne Harding, motion picture actress of considerable prominence, secured a divorce in Reno, Nevada, from Harry Bannister, also of the Harry Bannister, "because she loved him." Now there's a civilized divorce for you. Believe-it-or-not-Ripley to put in his little book. Miss Harding rightly or wrongly, is considered a stickler in the profession. Her husband has not, and so the end of the word of his dutiful wife that the only reason for divorcing him was been adequately recognized is that he was known not as Harry Bannister, but as Anne Harding's husband. "To divorce Harry was the civilized thing to do," the actress is reported to have said. It was a quiet, discreet affair. Just how that was arranged and one is told that after the decree had been granted, Miss Harding, Bannister and their counsel adjourned to a speakeasy and that the three of them let couple finally parted with a tearclouded kiss of affection. This amazing pair may be genuinely sincere in their declarations of respect for each other, but what is to be said of a divorce system that accepts such evidence? Reno should be sorry reason for dissolution of the marriage tie.—Hamilton Spectator.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Many of your readers were pleased to welcome the first robin described in your paper some weeks ago. Several persons visited the intersection of Victoria and Chatham streets where the Albino was to be seen and invited their friends to join them. I have for the unusual.

Belleville can claim the distinction of having still another robin which is unique, and it is that with an interest all amateur ornithologists.

Yesterday, Saturday, at the usual hour I heard singing every evening near the north C. N. R. tracks, a song peculiar with respect to its color, but it is quite musical enough for making use of two notes which the writer has never heard before from the throat of a robin. The notes used by this bird resembled its song, (and it sings incessantly) are notes taken from the usual call of the Canadian warbler and the writer had to attract the attention of one who is accustomed to giving close attention to the bird calls by these feathered songsters.

Hoping that Belleville will, 1932, made a friend of a robin which made use of two notes not common to the song of robins but which are therefore worthy of special attention.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself and me was drawing pictures in my book when he says I declare, that Sally Jarvin is the most self centred, self seeking, self satisfied girl I know. I tell that ever encumbered the surface of the earth. I met her this afternoon just after I'd left the dentist's and I'll tell you little Ben still in his throws of misery, but and she says I'm glad you've got to go to tell her about it when she flatly interrupted me with a long boring recital of how she'd got a new cawt her finger in a door and almost had to have the nail taken off some such rubbish, me said.

Then she went on a long history of Dungs Swibb? pop said.

Who was he? me said, and pop said, He was a low cast Hindoo and he had plenty of troubles. In fact his only question was that he thought that he was the most miserble man in the world, and he was never won any kind of a prize for either athletics or brains because this feeling of supremacy was the only thing he had. He was always bragging about it. But one day he met Agra Baba, another Hindoo at the cattle show and cast and realized that his troubles were blessings compared to Agra Baba's troubles. Agra Baba had 14 children and they were all impatient to him so in desperation he married a widow and discovered that she was the adopted dawter of the 14 children, so that he now had 3 mother in laws, all hale and hairy, and he had a defective knee and his two sisters, so that he now had 3 mother in laws, all hale and hairy, and he had a defective knee and his two sisters, so that he now has had his arms full of bundle, he was pursued by a family of fleas that refused to take the hint and persisted in biting him endless, his left ear itched continuously and he had an incurable stinging and buzzing in his ear and he took either to have his tonsils removed or to have his mind made more open minded and removed his backbone instead. Well, Dungs Swibb realized that at last he had met a man more miserble than himself, and the thawi so preyed on him that he really did become the most miserble man in the world, pop said.

Well for land sakes that's all that got to do with me? me said, and pop said, Nothing.

And he got back to the sporting page and stayed there.

THOUGHTS ARE GREAT FACTOR IN MAN'S LIFE

Flow of Thoughts Governed By Two Main Factors

By Leslie E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LESLIE E. BISCH

Thought is a mighty powerful factor in your life. Indeed, the influence which thoughts have upon your life is almost unbelievable.

I am not speaking merely of the kind of thought which happens to be in your mind at the moment—which is usually of a rather obvious thinking. As an referring now more particularly to that storehouse of thought, your unconscious, which exerts a great influence in swaying your conscious thoughts one way or another.

The flow of your thoughts or if you will, the flow of your consciousness at any moment is conditioned by two main factors. One is the kind of mind we have already mentioned; the other the environment in which your mind is to be at the time.

So if you are talking to a man, what he says is registered in your consciousness, but what you actually think, as a result of what he says, depends upon the thoughts coming from the unconscious, which will enable you to make such modification and changes essential to the new ideas presented. It does not occur, you would accept everything more or less literally and the conversation be on tariff legislation, let us say, what you actually think is not to say the subject and the degree to which you are swayed by the ideas presented depend upon the memories, the ideas on the same subject which you have stored away in the unconscious in the passage of the years, and which now will be at the consciousness at just the right moment.

Therefore it is plain to see that your daily conscious thinking is influenced largely by what you have put away in your unconscious in the past. Where you are, what you do, what you read, and so hear—all these factors are likewise essentials in fashioning your thoughts. In summary, then, one may say that if you want to think the best thoughts possible, you must be sure to store your mind with the best thoughts possible, and place yourself in an environment where the best possible thoughts are likely to be engendered.

And why, perhaps you ask, is it necessary to be so fussy about our thoughts? Well, as I have tried to explain, the way you think makes all the difference in the world in gaining for you the joy of life and happiness, or for failure and misery.

The right kind of thinking means mental health, self-confidence and the will to overcome obstacles. It even has a favorable influence on bodily states.

Thought processes of the wrong kind—destructive, in other words—are responsible for nervousness, feelings, guilt and other obsessing mental torments. They often turn out to cause palpitation, digestive disturbances and a host of other physical ailments.

People often pay little attention to their thought processes which are natural and unavoidable. Yet the fact is that you can direct your thoughts to such an extent that it makes just the necessary difference between getting out of life what you want, and not getting it.

Never at any one thoughts frighten you. Never try to run away from your thoughts. Only get a perspective on your thinking, observe the trend of your thoughts, direct their tendencies, then try to discover why they are running that way. Substitute things instead of constructive and optimistic ones. To do this, you must search your unconscious, your memories of the past, for one thing. You must also figure out the environment in which you pass, your habits and its influence on your mental activity.

Always try to think straight; to a definite purpose. Keep your whole mind what others think. Let more important than your own. Study your thoughts; for, after all, what a life anyway but a point of view?

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Be careful never to neglect infections of the fingers and toes. Always treat them promptly, preferably with an antiseptic lotion and apply a loose dressing. When the nail is beginning to heal another protective dressing is indicated.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay, Dee.)

VERSE AND WERSE—

Heard that summer's coming For I hear the bees all humming. And it shall be the source of hobocs on Victoria Park.

Add the lawnmower's raspy grating To the morning's dull awakening And the paint man's demonstrating through the town.

To the ping of the mosquito As it flies through the window For the bare toe sticking out beneath the sheet.

And you'll find that spring has parted With all thats than when she started.

In the suburbs they are wailing Over the chickens natural failing For the garden that has been planted in the ground,

And the stones have begun to rattle As the lawn mower's battle Between the fowl and gardener has been found.

Then the Segonaska River Has so soon begun to quiver Over bare rocks sticking through the foam.

But soon the smell will be atrocious And the language most ferocious As the dog days of June and scum form on the top.

Now the calling of the loon, By a lonely lake shore Is heard On the surface of the waters of the bay.

Breaks in strangely with the sputtering Of the motor boats which putter, Down to Massassaga Point and back again.

But the strangest sound of all, Is the thin and reedy call Of the mosquito and bee's songs in the marsh.

When you hear this gentle piping Then you know that things are ripening,

And that the stores on Front street will close at noon.

OLD SOLDIERS NEVER DIE—

"Hardly a week passes that I don't get some reminder of the fact that I am slipping by so fast that we hardly notice them," can do this, I'm sure.

Relates one feminine reader who had an experience the other day. "It used to be that I could keep track of the years fairly well when my children were at school due to public school. Every year there was new books to buy, larger or smaller shirts and stockings and so on, so that you knew pretty well when the season rolled around. But she added regretfully, "since they have grown up and are living families of their own, everything seems to be going so smoothly that I hardly notice the time. A day or so ago Mrs. Frost, however, had a sad reminder. I was walking down the street and ahead of me I noticed an old man. He was quite feeble and gave the appearance of being very old. When I passed him I saw though I noticed that he wore a soldier's button in the lapel of his coat. That set me thinking—after I got over the start I received. The fact has been with us for many years. Some of those soldiers who went over were only high school boys then, and now they are middle-aged men. Some of the men are really very old. But I had boys almost old enough to join up then, so you can see how many years I have added since then. It hardly seems possible. I guess that old saying about old soldiers never dying away is true. I guess it is.

THIS AND THAT—

A woman's favorite sport is shopping for things she knows she can't afford—A man's doing things he suspects he ought not to do—When a gold digger starts after a man he usually gets a run for her money.....When the meek inherit the earth there'll be nothing left for them to collect the rent from the not so meek.....Every now and then you run across a man who used to house salesman who is so rude that you don't know whether to open the door in his face, or steam his face with the door.....Leap year does not signify that the girls should jump at conclusions.....Flattering a man is like after-dinner speaking—the whole thing depends on knowing when to stop.....A musician is defined as one who can hear a new piece of music and then tell you what old composition it was stolen from.....And even some of us who are not musicians

"Able to Go to All the Dances"

"When I was 16 I was so ill my friends were going to die." writes Mrs. Alfred Wilson, Quebec, Toronto. "I had scarcely any blood, and was so weak I could hardly walk. Had no appetite and I lost ground every day for a long time, until a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got them, and before I had finished the first box I was feeling much better. I continued taking the Pills until I was completely well. I was able to all the dances and had the time of my life again. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any one who is anaemic or has a run in any way, for they certainly rebuilt my health."

Don't let anaemia rob your growing daughter of health and vigor. Give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They banish the condition by creating new blood which imparts health, vigour and vitality. Equally good for all run-down or nervous conditions. Sold by druggists. 50c a package.

Senators Lose and Yanks Climb to Within Game and Half

BY HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Steve Sweetnic, a home-town boy who made good fast in becoming the pitching sensation of the National League.

The crack righthander of the Pittsburgh Pirates pitched his third shutout of the season yesterday, halting the Brooklyn Dodgers with two hits for a 3-0 victory.

Previously he had blanked the Cardinals and the Cubs with three hits apiece. All told this season he has permitted only 11 hits in 26 innings and won three games and lost one.

Get Both Hits

Tony Cuccinello got both of Brooklyn's hits but failed to double in the fifth was a gift pure and simple. Kiwi Kampouris, young Pirate shortstop, backed up for Tony's Texas League pal suddenly decided not to take it and it fell safely behind him.

Pirate single, steal of second and third and an infield out gave the Pirates one run in the fifth off Jim Shaute and the other came across in the sixth on Rufus Gerard and Vaughan's single.

The Bosox leaves moved up to within one game of first place by walloping the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3, while the league leading Chicago Cubs were losing to the Phillies, 6-5.

The Cardinals found themselves in adverse batting form in the championship fag. Neither Bruce Cunningham nor Paul Derringer, starting pitchers lasted long, but the Braves uncovered an attack that relied heavily on young Bob Brown, who blanked the Cards with two hits in the five innings he was allowed four.

The Phillies gave Lon Warneke his first drubbing, pounding him for 13 hits including home runs by Klein, Hurst and Virgil Davis. A triple by Hurst and double by Klein, Watkins and Virgil Davis.

American League

In the American League, Charley Ruffing held the Cleveland Indians to four hits and struck out 13 men in a 5-0 victory that put the Yankees within a game and a half of the league leading Washington Senators.

The Senators were beaten by the St. Louis Browns as Walter Stewart allowed only four hits. Jimmie Gehringer's seventh home run marked a five run fifth inning rally that gave the Detroit Tigers a 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics. The Chicago White Sox pounded Wiley Moore for nine hits and eight runs in the first two innings to beat the Boston Red Sox easily, 9-4.

Saturday's Games

Saturday's games in the National League provided different opponents but Saturday's scores were then were in a winning mood, defeating Chicago 7-6, Brooklyn bowed to Cincinnati, 5-3 and St. Louis scampered out a 7-6 win over the Phillies. Rain kept the Giants and Pirates idle.

The Yankees in the American League wound up their series with the Chicago White Sox with a 4-0 victory on George Pipgras' four hit pitching. Shawn of the Cleveland Indians was just a stinger and struck out the Boston Red Sox by the same score. Lefty Grove, the Athletics' ace, kept in step in the smart pitching performances, and another four hit game let the St. Louis Browns on the short end of the third whitewash of the day 3-0.

Yesterday's Stars

Steve Sweitonic, Pirates — Held Brooklyn to two hits, both by Cuccinello, for third shutout victory.

Charley Gehringer, Tigers—Batted in four runs with a homer and two singles, and stole two bases against Athletics.

Charley Ruffing, Yankees—Shutout Cleveland with four hits and struck out 12 to win 5-0.

Wes. Schulmerich, Browns—Drove out a homer, two doubles and a single against Cardinals.

Waller Stewart and Goose Goslin, Browns—Former blanked Senators with four hits between them, singled in ninth and scored only run of the game.

Carl Hubbell, Giants—Held Reds to six hits for a 9-1 victory.

FRIDAY 13TH IS UNLUCKY

Wooler Takes Fliers Into Camp By 13 to 0 Score

Trenton, May 13 (Special) — Friday the 13th, is an unlucky day for the R.C.A.F. baseball team. Friday night and were beaten by a score of 13 to 0. Everything connected with 13 should be taboo to trenton from now on. Those boys from the soil certainly take their softball seriously and show evidence of much practise in the cow pasture. Skeezy their pitcher has a delivery like Joe E. Brown but can get them over. The game was very one sided and consequently not as interesting as it might be.

Line-up:

Wooler—C. Rutlan 3b; L. Whitney 1b; L. Darry rf; F. Storey p; L. Redcliffe ss; L. Tree 2b; G. Fitzhan cf; W. Reid lf; P. Fox c.

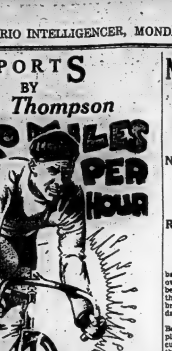
R.C.A.F.—Wing, f; Hartley as; Morrison 1b; Brudes rf; Divine cf; Colbeli 2b; Wood lf; Marshall 3b; Reeves c.

Comments

Wooler brought in quite a load of spectators to the game and how they rooted. One of them after one of the R.C.A.F. boys had knocked about nine foul balls popped up with "by gum that fellow musta been around they has roost, he sure knows his fowls."

Potatoes according to Eddie Cantor are cheaper but seed potatoes must be a special brand as they seem to be the choice offering to some of the lads.

First time we were aware of an 8-day town clock in Wooler but it must be as no comments regarding the clock was frequent.



The outfielders are going to be requested to wear bathing suits in order to lose no time in recovering balls knocked into the bay. One of the boys believes in keeping his eye on the ball as he followed one right into the bay and emerged looking like the original of the drowned rat but holding the ball. He calmly sat down, removed his shirt, wrung it out, dumped his shoes and proceeded to forget about it. A handy bunch those lads Messiah of the R.C.A.F. seems to go by the name of Messiah as the boys called upon him to save the day whenever he came to bat.

76 MILES AN HOUR ON A BICYCLE

"Torchy" Peden of Vancouver, covered a measured mile on a bicycle on a United States highway at a speed of 76 miles per hour, riding behind an automobile driven by Bill Spencer, which carried a specially constructed wind screen. The reason why he could set such a record is that he is one of those fellows who comes along about once in every 20 years, who has a powerful enough in the legs to ride a 24-year bicycle unpaced. Other riders on the race tracks use 92-year machines, which means that they cover 92 inches for every turn of the pedals. In his record mile, Torchy used a 130-gear outfit, and that's where he has a big edge over anybody who thinks he would like to shoot at the mark. Anybody who goes in for raising it, including the present holder, will be in a mighty poor risk for insurance companies. It took three trial to set the record. He started with a machine which was tuned up to the highest possible out wouldn't be healthy.

pitch, and after two runs, which did not break a mile a minute, loosed a worthless bicycle into the ditch. He made the third trial with another machine, more carefully tuned up, and finished with two wheelfuls (spelling optional) of spokes that could be twisted about like picture wire. And he wants to try again. He guards against blowouts on these high speed tests by wrapping the tire completely with tape, and he says that you have to keep pedding full out, in spite of the car's suction, because the minute you let up to coast you will go without your bicycle, which might prove awkward and embarrassing indeed, stopping is quite a trick too. To do this, the first thing he did was to turn out into the fresh air, where he got wind resistance. He also wore two pairs of leather gloves, so that he could brake his irons when with his hands, for not long at a time, because at that speed the friction would burn through the tape and cause a blowout in no time at all, and a blow-

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Nightly practises will be in order for the Nationals every evening this week. The opening game is scheduled for one week from Tuesday and Manager Gerow will have to drive his players at top speed in order to get in as much pre-season training as possible. The "Nats" (if) they enter the Intermediate O.B.A. league will be known by that name. Weir was only being moved to Brighton by the C.N.R. Alf intends retaining his home in Belleville and will advertise as he hopes to play for the "Nats" this summer. Bob Scott will be sent to the Nationals, however, as he is being moved to Lansdowne by his employers.

Manager Gerow has three capable third basemen in Gil Scott's shoes, however, "Shad" Ridler who played baseball ball after the Moose Juniors, Art Scarlett of Trenton and "Shiner" Johnston, late of Peterboro and now living in Sidney, will all battle it out for the third cornerpost position. There seems to be plenty of material for the initial sack when Wilf Crestney, Jimmy Dunn and Lionel Blaker are all crying for the first bag position. Vern Wright had not been out yet while Harry Morgan and Dusty Rhodes are said to be ready but Manager Gerow had fifteen candidates out at practise on Friday night and he expects more young talent out tonight. All are welcome.

It is more than likely that the "Nats" will carry an understudy to Capt. "Frenzy" Mills in the person of Jimmie McGuire, who turned in an excellent season with the Moose juniors while catching for the R.S.A.A. Juniors last season. Jimmie has everything that a young receiver needs and will be delighted at the coaching of the best catcher in this province when he joins "Frenzy" around for a season.

Only four Juniors were out on Friday night but this number will be added to when Harrie Morris and another pitcher from Trenton put in their appearance this week. The ball tossers will have their first taste of batting practise tonight and the rail birds will soon be able to form their own opinions as to the possibilities of the Nationals for 1932.

The Moose Juniors will get out to practise on Wednesday Thursday and Saturday nights of this week and all young players desirous of trying out are asked to attend these workouts. The Moose Juniors are the champions of the Juniors open the current baseball season on the morning of May 24th and nothing has been heard of the activities of the Moose Juniors to date. (?)

The champion Kingston Frontenacs opened the season on Saturday when they played host to the Calcium N.Y. baseball team, which reminds us of the fact that the Frontenacs have the services of eight pitchers, or one should say seven pitchers, "ers," viz. "Gaumy" Jamieson, Hewitt Smith, Tommy Godfrey, Hooley Smith, Goodfriend, "Stoney" Ross, Steel and Loney Purvis. After looking over that outfit, we can safely say that Hewitt Smith will be the only Pony hurler to give the Central Canada bakers any particular trouble. Some of the other leaders in the O.B.A. should fatten their batting averages when some of those Kingston pitchers go to the bill tap.

We understand from good authority that Hamilton-Peterboro's veteran hurler, Ingersoll trying a come-back to the fullest nature this season. We know of no reason why the big right hander should not be able to take his turn in the box due to the fact that he has always been excellent care of his health and physical condition therefore should be able to come-back easily. It is our humble opinion that "Heck" in his day, was the best right hander ever to grace the O.B.A.

Only six umpire's applications were received at the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball meeting on Saturday night, it was the duty of the executive that more officials will be needed and therefore the time limit on umpire's applications has been extended to May 21st. All umpire's applications must be in the hands of Secretary W. B. Vandervoort by next Saturday, May 21st.

The Oshawa "Dukes" lost their opening game of the season when the Toronto Tygres took them into camp by the score of 3 to 2, in 11 innings. Our old friend "Matty" Mathews twirled a two hit game and lost. (Tough luck Matty.) It looks as though the Dukes are pretty weak with the willow this year.

NEWARK AND ROYALS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

New Attendance Record Set Up in Scrap For First Place

BUFFALO THIRD

Redwings Win a Close Game From Reading Keys

As a very bright spot in a baseball season, which has seen club owners far and wide complaining because the fans failed to turn out, the International League had a brand new attendance record today.

The Montreal Royals and Newark Bears, starting a scrap for first place, played before 21,500 paying customers yesterday as they traded them to an even break in a bitterly contested double header. Newark also held the old record of 19,338 paid admissions, made when they played Jersey City on their last Sunday of the 1931 season. The best previous crowd at Montreal was on the opening day four years ago when the Royal's return to the league was seen by over 20,000, of whom 17,000 paid.

Montreal won yesterday's first game when Bill Swift kept the Bears under control despite their 19 hits, and won 4 to 3. Ray Rowell batted Johnny Welch from the hill with three runs in the fifth. Big Jim Weaver relieved Swift after allowing only five hits in the seven-inning second game. He also contributed a homer in his 7-3 victory.

Buffalo climbed into first place in the tight race by shading out Jersey City 4 to 3 while the Baltimore Orioles had a day of idleness at Toronto. A sizable crowd of about 10,000 witnessed the proceedings. Each team made seven hits but Fred Fussell spread the Jersey blows over seven innings, while the Bisons hit for distance. Their blows included Ollie Carnegie's fifth home run of the days, a four-bagger by Bill Werber and a long triple by Jack Winsett.

Hack Wilson, who led the league in hitting with Newark last year, joined the Jerseys, coming down from Brooklyn. He couldn't get a hit off Fussell.

The fifth place Rochester Red Wings dropped into a notch only a half game behind Baltimore by taking a close decision from the Reading Keys, 3 to 2. It wasn't until the ninth inning that George Puccinelli could get his daily hit off Milstead to make it 36 games in a row, but he converted it into the winning run with the aid of a sacrifice by Wilson and a pinch single by Bud Teachout.

Saturday's scene in the International ended a series before the teams faced few opponents restful day.

Montreal Royals were nosed out 5-4 in a 10 inning battle, the only single game of the day. Three double headers found the Newark Bears pounding out a double victory over Rochester 7-3, and 4-0, with Holshlaw and Brennan gathering the hurling laurels; Jersey City and Toronto splitting, 5-4 and 2-0, and the Reading Keys and Buffalo Bisons dividing a twin act by the same scores, 4-3.

Beer Parade in N.Y. Created No Interest

New York, May 16—To the haunting tune of 'Sweet Adeline' and 'How Dry I Am' thousands of New Yorkers marched themselves almost to a frazzle during a broiling sun Saturday to show their support of Mayor J. Hoffman's 'beer for taxation' plea.

Police Commissioner Mulroney had estimated 100,000 persons would be in line, but when the parade finally ended after eight hours of marching the estimates of the city's strength ranged all the way down to 30,000.

82 BABIES AT WEEKLY CLINIC

All previous records of attendance as the weekly Well Baby Clinic sponsored by the Victorian Order of Nurses were definitely set aside when on Friday afternoon eighty-two babies were brought to the clinic. The average number of small visitors is usually about forty-five but the first really warm day of the season brought them out in dozens. Sixty-two of the attendants were infants, the other twenty being of pre-school age.

Earliest visitors arrive before the opening hour, two-thirty, and the biggest rush was about three o'clock. All the children were weighed, the nurses, Miss Grover and Miss Dumais, being assisted during the afternoon by Miss Mary Webster. Tea was served the mothers.

Well Baby Clinics are held in the City Hall weekly sponsored by the Victorian Order of Nurses and have a very large registration, two hundred attending the clinic during the season.

"It is rather warm, David, you might lower a window," she told him.

"Why not drop the collar of your coat?" reaching out a hand.

But she drew away, and David lowered the window, singing a gay little song he had learned when a boy.

"David, I never heard you sing that before," she said, looking over the top of the silver fox collar.

"I didn't know that I remembered it," he acknowledged.

"Home at last," Anne said, opening the door before he had a chance. "Good night, David."

He chuckled at the old name; it had been a long time since Anne called him that.

David had gone to his office long before Anne woke with the scent of lilacs about her, she was surprised and pleased to find that the bowl of lilacs had been placed on the little table beside her bed. She gave a note starting the past, and it is eagerly.

"Home at last," Anne, the lilacs are in full bloom! I am coming home after the week end. Have you decided on the garden Turn down all your engagements—David."

Anne was dressed and watching at the door when the car came up the drive. She jumped to beside him.

"It was so nice of you to remember me, David."

"I saw the bunch in Blake's window yesterday and it brought up old memories," he told her.

"Aunt Sally will be surprised to see us."

"It has been a long time since you have been there," she chided.

"I never seem to have the time. I just dropped everything to come with you today, David. It is a long ride."

Aunt Sally was not at home when they arrived, so they went into the fragrant old garden to the bench under the lilacs. A pair of scissors and broken sprays of flower were scattered about, David took off his coat and climbed on the seat.

"I am going to give you a big armful to take home, Anne," he called.

Anne took them, spray by spray, and David's arms were full before his arms were full to overflowing.

"Don't drop them," he warned, as he turned and looked down at her with the old love light of the years. Aloud he said to her in fun, "Hold them tight, Anne."

Then she was in his arms with the lilacs crushed between, and David looked with wealth, power and business had built up between them, was down forever.

Just a bunch of lilacs.

CONDITIONING HAIR FOR A PERMANENT.

How many heads of straight, sleek hair do you see? Not many, it is, has been and will be a curly season. Wave and ringlet are flattering when they are nice ones, simulating the innate undulations of Mama Nature; are blinds with horror of those tight narrow marcels that projected a washboard crimp and realizes how the art of hair dressing has improved these last few years.

In warm weather the permanent is a blessing, no two ways about that. There are no frightening reports going around about burns and tortures, the various waving systems having reached such a stage of perfection that there is no discomfort, no flanning by beauty sofis, no getting the whole day in the business of kinking up locks that have been as straight as string. And the crash in charges for this style places the hard boiled undulation within the possibility of almost any purse.

The permanent takes beautiful care of hair ends. It spirals them, so that they can be moistened, brushed around the finger, appear perfect. With aides and rear locks longer than the shingle by several inches, yet not extending to the shoulder length cut, something has to be done with rag tags and bob tails, that which is attended to by the permanent in a shockingly satisfactory manner.

We aren't saying that every permanent coils itself up in ringleted ends. That's not to be expected. It is training that does it.

Hair in normal healthy condition grows one half inch a month. If a girl has a permanent a year there is no danger of drying out the shafts, because by the time six months roll by, the waved portion has pretty well extended to beat and been sheared.

But, if there is worry about a permanent, naturally dry hair seem to get considerably frazzled about that long growth hair-aid—then inaugurate a series of conditioning treatments. They're good for the scalp, they check dandruff, they give the locks luster. It's not much trouble to pour comfort upon one's head every Spring.

There are at the present time numerous offerings of scalp oils, some of which are in semi-solid form, and really applied. There are the old stand-by home remedies—olive oil, mineral oil and castor oil. Castor oil should be thinned with an equal amount of alcohol. They serve faithfully and well.

Heated oils soften flakes of dandruff better than oils that are not heated, they do all in a hot water bath. Part the hair at various places, apply the oil with a pledget of cotton. A simpler way is to use an electrically heated comb that emits the lubricant through hollow teeth, trickling it onto the scalp. There are several gadgets of this king now. They are popular.

Have an oil treatment two nights a week, with a shampoo before the next morning. Continue for one month, give eight or nine applications. The old glory mop will assume a new appearance, looking gay, as if it would like to sing and dance.

STRAW HAT WORN TO OPEN SEASON

Middle Aged Man Upsets Younger Generation By His Innovation

As far as this city is concerned, summer, or the season for straw hats, was officially opened Sunday.

While other men about town peering from beneath the brims of their favorite brown derby, cap, hat or beret, or simply let their curly locks blow to the four winds unhampered by any headgear as they strode along the main avenues of the town, one man slowly sauntered along York Street, clad in hand, red flower in buttonhole and panama hat pulled down tightly against his ears. He drew admiring nudges and stares those who saw the strange sight indulged in. He was oldish and accustomed to such trivialities.

A concentrated rush for straw hats is expected in view of the fact that the younger men around town, or any other man for that matter do not like to be behind in the post by the past generation in setting the style even in straw hats.

Dealers however are reported to be ready for any sudden invasion of their shops by the straw hat seekers; a number of them have new stocks unpacked already.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR CHILD

BY

Constance Cameron

THINKING FOR THEMSELVES

It is easy to judge an illchildnal's emotional age by merely watching the manner in which he reacts to obstacles. The most infantile form of outward manifestation of a feeling of being frustrated or thwarted is a physical one—tears, temper or violence, all clinging in no solution to the problem, but merely letting off steam regarding it. This reaction is always found in the emotionally immature person, no matter what his chronological age.

Display of Emotion

The mature person meets one obstacle with intellect, and this is what we must train each child to do, if we hope for a balanced, successful life for him.

Many a mother has stood in open-mouthed amazement mixed with horror at the violence with which her youngster has thrown, broken or otherwise demolished a toy which, wouldnt perform as he wanted it to. Many a mother has shaken her head and thought of all the vile tempers back through the family—probably on the father's side.

But such spells of emotion aren't bad temper so much as a feeling of irritation and futility, and the mother's part is to control the temper phase of it, within reason, and to help the child how he can overcome the obstacle, how, if he thinks and tries calmly, without the fireworks, he can manipulate the object as he wishes.

Help Him to Think

Quiet praise when the child has tried to think through the problem is constructive. Telling him he is right and quietly only betrays a lack of understanding as to the real reason for his emotion, which is a collision with a stumbling block. Help him to think through his obstacles rather than feel through them.

The Beauty Box

BY HELEN FOLSETT

Trying a fourteen-year-old daughter away from a hostile is a difficult job for the mama. She has to tackle the business with tact and discretion, never straining the bonds of affection, starting rivalry, keeping her head, saying exactly the right thing. It's no use scolding, nagging youth That line of conduct makes youth rebellious and secretive. And nothing is worth a scintilla issue between parent and child. "If you must use it, darling, let's put it on lightly. Thus and so." In time the lipstick will pass on into the limbo along with a lot of other beauty fads.

The beautiful, perfect foot is properly proportioned, free of pedal ills, while of akin surface and with each toe poising straight ahead instead of cluttering together in a family group. A toe should have the privilege of going into own individual way instead of being pushed and shunted up against its neighbor. The shoe that is too short, too long or too narrow will distort the natural lines of the foot, produce all manner of ills to which our little dogs are heir. It will also curdle the sweetest disposition.

Getting active many times a day with the old powder puff is not correct excessive oiliness of the complexion. That miracle comes about by changing the diet, setting down on fats, rich foods and pastries, eating more fruits and green vegetables. The skin is an elimination system and what a girl puts into her tumtum has much to do with the activities of the sebaceous glands, whose business it is to throw a film of oil over the epidermis.

Thick lips can be slenderized by the simple exercise of smiling and drawing the mouth corners backward to relax weakens the fibers around the mouth, imparts an expression of stupidity. One is known by one's mouth. It changes according to a girl's change of disposition and ideas.

Bobbed wigs are designed so clever that only the closest can discern the tinguish them from home grown hair. The parting is like real scalp. The undulating waves, each individual with soft small curls about the face. Just the thing for the woman who has dyed her hair and repented.

School Teacher is Vindicated in Court

Sudbury, Ont., May 16 — Miss Alice Crawley, teacher of Whitefish Falls, near here, was vindicated in police court Saturday for whipping 11 year old Louis LeBlanc, Jr., for talking in class.

Disclosing the charge of assault laid against her by the pupil's father, Magistrate McKissock reprimanded Mr. LeBlanc for giving his son's side and bringing the teacher to court.

Gilead W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Gilead W.M.S. was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Craig's, seven with members and two visitors present. The president, Mrs. F. Balcaquel presided. The meeting opened by singing hymn "Rescue the Perishing," followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by repeating a verse of Scripture, beginning with the letter "M." The Scripture lesson was taken from Romans, 12th chapter. The minutes from the last meeting were read and approved after which the hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus" was sung. Mrs. James Huffman gave a reading and Misses Everett and Fred York sang a duet; Mrs. Hubel gave a reading and the hymn "Holy, Holy, Holy" was sung. Collection was then taken. The meeting was closed by singing "Far and Near the Fields are Teeming", and prayer by the president. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

MORNING, AFTERNOON AND EVEN ING

Loretta Young, charming star of "Play Girl," Warner Bros. picture coming to the Capitol Theatre next Wednesday displays three of the specially styled garments she wears in the photoplay. At the left is her morning costume, a one-piece garment of gray rashanara crepe, with amusing little pointed pockets and a plaid silk collar in several shades of blue. Dolman sleeves narrowing at the wrist furnish another interesting feature.

In the centre, Loretta wears an afternoon frock featuring the soft draped neckline and full sleeves brought into lightness at the wrist. Suitable for shopping and daytime wear, this garment is a combination of green crepe in the skirt and greasy satin in the blouse. The hat is green felt with matching cluster of iridescent cocque feathers.

At the extreme right is "Play Girl's" evening gown of soft apricot chiffon with band of cranberry velvet encircling the neck and crossing in back to form the girdle.

BURGOO KING ENTERS LIST

Third Horse in Same Year to Win Both Events

(By Orlo Robertson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Baltimore, Md., May 16.—Burgoo King, royally bred son of Blue Grass, entered in the select circle of great thoroughbreds as an international Peer today with a driving triumph in the $42,500 Preakness at Pimlico.

Coming from behind to nab the decision in the closing strides, the E. P. Bradley entry added the performances of the mighty Sir Barton and the great Gallant Fox heretofore the only two horses that won both the Derby and the Preakness.

The King, meeting eight crack rivals in the mile and three-sixteenth classic, was the chestnut son of Bubbling Over, Mr. Loubet—Kaufman's Tick On, the favorite, and Walter M. Jeffords' Bostonian, an outsider, in the fourth 42½ stride. Only a head separated the King and Tick On at the finish, while a nose behind was Boatswain, a son of Man o' War, which won the race in 1920.

The victory carried with it a purse of $50,375 boosted the King's total earnings to $82,875 in 5 days to $102,890. Backers of the Bradley-Woolford white silks received $8.50, $5.00 and $4.00 across the board, as the favorite, Tick On paid $3.80 to place, while a $2 bet on Boatswain returned $6.80.

Tick On, unruly at the post in the Derby had no excuse yesterday. He was beaten by a better horse but in accepting defeat ran the greatest race of his career. Boatswain did not start as a two-year-old but has won four out of his four starts as a three-year-old previous to today.

Earl Sande, seeking his second Preakness victory with the Calumet Farm's Mad Pursuit, finished fourth, four lengths back of the three leaders. Strung out in the rear of the field were Equipoise, Max Hero, Morton L. Schwartz's Bunto, which ran coupled as an entry with Tick On, L. E. Keiffer's Dalabony, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Ourscao and J. J. Robinson's Lucky Tom.

FORMER RABBI VISITS CITADEL

Henry Bregman Tells of His Conversion to Christianity

The meetings at the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday were of unusual interest owing to the presence of an ex-Rabbi from Montreal, Superintendent of the House of Seekers, Toronto. Mrs. Bregman, the saintly Ensign Calvert in the absence of the Brigadier conducted the services and addressed the three meetings of the day. Large audiences were present at all the services and the most interesting and inspiring addresses of Mr. Bregman were listened to with marked attention.

In the morning meeting he spoke on "The House the Lord Built," and he gave a very interesting account of how he came to be Superintendent of the House of Seekers after Truth, which is an undenominational mission to the 45,000 Jews in Toronto and which is conducted entirely by faith—the support received being entirely voluntary.

In the afternoon Mr. Bregman spoke to the young people and he told them of a Christian woman, whom he met while he was a rabbi in Montreal, England, who had been a friend to the Jews, but eventually became a convert to Christianity.

Mr. Bregman referred to the kindness he had received from Christian friends. He told of meeting General Booth, the founder of the army in Exeter, when a boy, and he was kindly invited by the Army officials of this English city to occupy a seat upon the platform with the grand old General.

At the evening meeting Mr. Bregman went more fully into the story of his early studies and searched diligently for the truth and twenty-six years ago he decided that Christianity held the truth and he became a follower of and a worker for Christ.

This evening the ex-rabbi will speak at the Citadel on the Peace over as related to the Lord's Supper and in illustrating his address he will go through certain ceremonies and display articles used in his performance.

Nearly all buildings being erected in Buenos Aires, Argentina, are apartment houses.

Six Persons are Known to New Jersey Police as Actual Kidnappers

Crime Carried Out by Germans, Italian and Brazilian

WOMAN NURSE

Screams of Child Led to Murder is Belief — Arrests Soon

New York, May 15—Five men and a woman, whose identities are believed to be known, were responsible for the kidnapping of the baby son of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on the night of March 1 and the murder and afterward, according to information now in the hands of the New Jersey State Police.

The arrest of one or more members of this group is understood on good authority to be expected within the next few days.

This information has enabled the police to piece together, to construct a coherent picture of the kidnapping and to determine the manner in which the murder occurred.

The police now are understood to know that the actual kidnapping was carried out by three members of the gang of six. One of the men was a German, and there is no doubt he rode the pole in which the German was used. He was known as "good." One was said to be an Italian and one was believed to be a Brazilian. The woman was an American, as were the two other members.

The woman was brought into the conspiracy, the police believe, when the wringing of a large ransom from Colonel Lindbergh, to care for the baby while the ransom negotiations were being carried on. The child died, according to one theory of the crime on which the police are now working, presumably not the intention of the gang at the time they laid plans about when their plans began to go wrong.

The leaders—the "brain" of the gang—were not in the scene of the kidnapping, according to the information given to the police. They remained in the vicinity of Hopewell on the Sourland Mountains, where the child was to be kept until the ransom was paid.

The kidnappers, according to this account, travelled to the isolated neighborhood of the Lindbergh home in an automobile with New York license plates. The woman remained in the car with the German and one of the other men got out and took the baby.

One thing the kidnappers had forgotten to bring was clothing, according to the account given the police, was a pair of overalls to close the baby's lips. This oversight it was said, may have hastened the decision to kill the child because the baby had unusually strong lungs and his screams could be heard for some distance.

Remained Near Home

The kidnapping gang is believed to have remained in the neighborhood for some time after the kidnapping, and may have seen the police coming and going through the roads. The roll call was answered by the paying of a fee. All of last year's members are on the roll again as far as one new member.

The minutes of last year's annual meeting were then read by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Hamilton, who also gave the report of the auditor for the year, which showed that the Institute treasury showed a balance on hand of $31.

At this point, Mrs. Ernest Irwin (president) thanked the ladies for their co-operation in the year's work and for the honor of being president. She hoped that the same courtesy would be accorded her successor. It was customary for the Kylstone Society to keep their president for two years, but Mrs. Irwin felt that she was unable to take it for another year. Mrs. Irwin then acted as chairman for the election of the following officers:—

During the year the Institute held two quiltings and made four quilts, two of which were given for relief work. One was given to a young member who was married during the year. A bale of clothing was also sent to Cobalt for relief work besides the flowers and fruit given to sick members and their families. DIE IN NORTH AS SEA FLEA IS CAPSIZED

Jack Scholes Tries Rescue in Sturgeon Waters

Lindsay, May 16—Flashing across Sturgeon Lake in a fast sea flea, Sunday afternoon, two Toronto youths, apparently unskilled in handling the craft, threw over him into a sudden turn, capsized it and were drowned. The tragedy was the first this year on Sturgeon Lake.

They were William Simpson, aged 22 of 982 Dundas Street East, Toronto and Samuel Sloate, aged 20, of Woodbine Avenue, Toronto, early of Stratford.

The two, with Harry Corlett, Simpson Avenue, Toronto, had driven to Greenhurst, on Sturgeon Lake this morning in the two sea flees, which they intended trying out.

It is thought it was the first time the two young men had driven one of these. Jack Scholes, 210 Pearson Avenue, Toronto, was with Mrs. Nellie Smith, Lindsay, on-lay, having lunch on the shore when the fatality happened.

Saw it Sinking.

"We noticed the sea flea coming up the lake at terrific speed," Mrs. Smith told the police. "We saw it turn suddenly and capsize. We could see it sinking. We must have been a half mile away. Jack Scholes and I saw Mr. McKeown of Mount Pleasant on the shore.

Music Stores, Dance Halls and People All Tell One Story That Belleville Loves Old Songs

Tendency to Sniff at Some Melodies Which Are Not Melodies

LOVE OF OLD ONES

Belleville has gone back to old-time songs. A staff reporter has found this out after a tour of music shops, theatres and dance halls in this city.

Songs for countless centuries have been the mode of expression of all man's emotions. Stirring strains have called him to war. Waves of undermeen have swept over him when he sang of home and mother. He has voiced his longing for love disappointment in plaintive pleading cadences. He has sung the songs when he has been happy and "blue" songs when he was sad. Through the ages men and women have sung these songs which have mirrored their emotions.

Mother's Lullaby

The first recollection of your baby mind can remember—nothing earlier than your mother's soft arms and crooning voice as she hushed you to sleep in her lap. When you grew a little older and you started for school, your morning exercise was probably composed of carols which your teacher had taught you to sing; through your life you have remembered them and sung them sometimes gay, sometimes sad, but they have been essentially linked up with you, part of your life. To deprive a man of the power of song-ing song would be to render him less than a man.

The Cave Man's Hum

Your Cave Man ancestors hummed about their plaits of lack of meaning, as they sat around the flickering camp fire in the smoky recesses of the cave; tribal savages have worked themselves into paroxysms of rage, grief, blood lust and penitence with them. From then down they have come to the present day, almost unchanged, the same stirring rhythm, monotony played on different instruments, but with the same effect on the feelings of those who hear them as they were many centuries ago. But today they are aimed to stir the feelings, but the effect on the heart counts. Passions are appealed to; a racing melody, sobbed from a saxophone, a sentimental song from higher things to a waxed floor and a series of stamps with feet, reminiscent of a sign observed in a doorway in a Bronx dance hall in New York: "Extra Special Low Prices: Bringing Dancing Down to New Low Levels."

Tango Fox

But there has been observed lately a new change in the manner of dancing. "Tin Pan Alley" has done it. Maybe you thought that Tin Pan Alley had been a thing of the past of the boards, with their new boo-boop-a-doop, hot torch tunes. Maybe you thought that the old time songs you sang years ago were done and gone for, or that the Alley was inventing new ones and selling them so fast that the publishers had no time even to print such old timers as Annie Laurie, "In the Good Old Summertime," and so on. Perhaps you've even been harboring the delusion that people don't even sing them at home. You're wrong, buddy, or mlasis—dead wrong. The old timers you used to sing around the piano in the days of the old kerosene lamp light are selling just as fast now as they did when Alexander's Ragtime Band captured the fancy of the country, and threatened never to die.

Silly Symphonies

Silly symphonies may still be popular with the hot-cha element in the dance hall, like their music shady and weird, sobbed out of a moaning saxophone; St. Louis Blues may still have as captivating a rhythm, and the "redheaded woman" may still be having their trials and tribulations set to dancing music on the keyboard and keys of the modern orchestra, to make the youngsters get the urge to do funny things with their feet, but they have by nb means displaced the old, old favorites whose memory will never fade.

In Belleville Shops

We made a study of this thing called music right here in this city. We looked around the music shops and grind stores where they sell records, obtained from the grind and we came prepared to back up our statements with figures but off the counter. We poked here and there and did mental calisthenics trying to figure out what it was all about, and, barring a few figures which we obtained from the girls and boys who know, we are still in the dark about a good many points. But an illuminating sidelight on the habits of those who come around the family piano after the supper dishes are cleared away and join in the four hour chin and canning fight off the keys, has been obtained by the reporter who was detailed to find the answer to this pressing question. There were the orchestra, too, in the various dance halls in the city.

We waited until the man on the traps had smacked the last note on the guiro(rasp) and the last bar had finished a sort of rhumba jig that old time waltz which was composed years ago. The lights snapped out, leaving only a pale glow at the door mouth of the corner. Shuffling feet crossed and recrossed the polished floor. "Wish they'd play the blues waltzes all the time," remarked the girl who obtained from the audience of the calmer music. "Yeah—kinda nice" came the soft reply of the gallant escort.

But the blues balls were not the only places that were left to go to. A young lady bent over a phonograph in the brown store, to hear the music department. You walk in, snap a record out of a rack and hand it to the young lady, and then you get it obtained from the girls

Few Demand New Songs

A reporter hazarded a guess, but his guess was wrong. "I suspect that out of the crowd who come in here only a few want the modern tunes any more," she of the machine remarked as she straightened up and delivered the verdict, and also proved the absurdity of any reporter making guesses. "You mean they are actually going for the older songs of 'Silver Threads Among the Gold,' "The Last Rose of Summer', 'Sweet Rosie O'Grady' and so on?" And I came the languid tones of the queen of the counter as she absently patted at the back of her marcelled locks.

"I like them myself," she added as a seeming afterthought. "Don't you?" and she gazed like a judge at a prisoner who had been found guilty of some heinous crime. "Why...um...that is, er, well, my pet is I like them," "They're so soothing," she added. "Exactly," we agreed.

Oil Favorites

A theatre manager stood in the lobby of the building when the reporter entered and smiled lightly at the mention of the popular songs. "I don't think I never see one made for them. I prefer the old songs and the old music. Some of my pets are among the same idea. The song pluggers who have been around here with the apparatus in this building nowadays are a thing of the past. Occasionally we get a torrid piano sitter, who tears the unresisting keyboard to the fact that her lover turned her down and so on, but they are few and far between nowadays. They're like Willie the Weeper; they're dead, see? Oh, what's the use?"

"Old Music"

"Old music" he brightened vivily. "Sure, I like 'em. I try to please them. People always want them nowadays in preference to the new tunes. They can dance to them better. That spasm we just finished we only got an in-the-key beat we're going to give them an old waltz. Watch them go for it and then they'll want more of them all the time. All right, kids, fix it up." That followed a beautiful rendition of an old time waltz which was composed years ago. The lights snapped out, leaving only a pale glow at the door mouth of the corner. Shuffling feet crossed and recrossed the polished floor. "Wish they'd play the blues waltzes all the time," remarked the girl who obtained from the audience of the calmer music. Rail Union Heads Urge Upon President Hoover Need of Work

Suggest 25 Years Moratorium or Less Turn to Dole

Washington, May 14—In a statement directly linking the present depression to insistence upon payments of the war debts and urging a 25-year moratorium on war debts to nations encouraging trade with this country, a plan akin to that advocated by Alfred E. Smith, the Presidents of the seven leading railway unions warned President Hoover yesterday that unless immediate steps are taken to increase employment and relieve distress "we will be obliged to demand a dole."

The labor leaders said that unless some drastic steps are taken "we cannot be responsible for the orderly operation of the railroads" and that they will refuse to accept "responsibility for the disorder which is sure to arise if conditions continue."

The railway labor chiefs were received soon after the President had issued a statement opposing Democratic recommendations for a public works bond issue. He advocated instead self- liquidating construction projects, revival of the old time favorites to States, and vigorously upholding the use of emergency measures at this time.

"We used emergency powers to win the war," the President said, "we can use them to fight the depression, the misery and suffering from which are equally great."

He strongly asserted, however, his dislike of "emergency powers in time of peace" and said that when confidence is restored and the credit machinery functions normally once more "there will be no need to exercise the emergency powers reposed in any of our governmental agencies or the further extension we are proposing for the reconstruction corporation. He registered definite opposition to extension of these powers beyond "the limits I have proposed"; namely, in his statement last night offering an alternative to relief plan proposed by Senator Wagner, the Republican leader, announced that his party committee will present a bill incorporating the President's relief plan in the Senate. The Republicans he said, will leave the Democrats free to draft the bill proposed on Monday by Senator Robinson, with a bond issue which would provide employment relief, for public works.

The delegation, which was represented as voicing the opinions of one-third of the standard railroad employees, included D. B. Robinson, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers; S. N. Berry, Order of Railway Conductors; A. D. Whitney, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; T. C. Cashen, Switchmen's Union of North America; E. J. Manion, Order of Railroad Telegraphers; C. O. Lubrecn, American Train Dispatchers' Association, and D. H. Meyer, Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees.

CANINE DEVOTION

When a dog-sleigh and its occupants crashed through the ice of a Northern Ontario river recently two of the animals not submerged extricated themselves free of their harness and rushed away for help, which arrived in time to save the lives of two of the three imperilled men. Further proof of the dog's wonderful sense and his devotion to human masters.—Toronto Globe.

"The deeper currents of public opinion are those which gain their movement almost unobserved and with quiet but irresistible power sweep from their moorings of prejudice and time-worn conventions of the past."—James T. Shotwell.

The world's longest poem is said to be the great Hindu epic, the Mahabharata. It was begun 300 B.C. and finished about 1200 years later.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

Lennox. She couldn't go out again, she couldn't face him, she couldn't—she thought, childishly, desperately, that she would stay where she was, in the little room until they should land. She planned carefully. I'll say to go home at once. Hurry—warned her heart,—you might die before you reach him—he might die—any ship might be lost—Wait, Elisabeth, wait!—whispered her terror.

She would call Lennox. She went straight to the sheltered part of the deck where their chairs were, where tea would be served them. She found Louise and Lennox, her mother, not talking, she sat down between them, sedately, and precisely drank the tepid tea that from the thick cup the steward gave her, answering when she was first spoken to.

Only when Lennox took the cup from her and his hand touched hers in passing, did her flesh betray her, she shook, trembled—she could not touch him every day—his hand, his arm, his sleeve—and it has never been like this. Yet, had it not?

After dinner, which was followed by a dull concert, he came to her.

"Well walk on deck," he said.

Yes, but they walked on deck every night until bedtime. She looked fleetingly toward Louise who sat in the small saloon knitting something. Louise nodded, as she saw them. They left the lighted, crowded room together.

Louise Sheldon looked after them. She thought she knew to-ward what significant heights they had set their faces. She did not know.

She dropped a stitch, picked it up, counted, half counted. She said to herself, It's done.

She relaxed, a very little. Two years. Two years of constant, tactful waiting and planning. How easy it had been! Elisabeth was not very simple!

Her thin lips narrowed, shrank back in pain.

She thought—they think them-selves in love, they fancy it fate. Two shall meet." It is not fate, it is be-lief.

She had no feeling for Elisabeth Howland save the hard contempt one has for someone one allots to a good, volitionless instrument.

The survey with which she had cast her hand to the loom almost frightened her for a moment. It was as she had known it would be when she sat down before an old secretary and started a sheet of paper and twisted her pen to form Lennox's name. Lennox would marry. Better to marry than to burn. Lennox would beget strong, laughing children. He would think that he had first married Elisabeth. But he would not have done so. His mother would have married him to that un-important young girl.

She tried to turn her mind back to her knitting, her counting. But her thoughts were beyond her con-trol. Three, two, and on deck. They would be love-making now. The term arrested her. Make love. She had uttered it, that was what she had done.

There was silly moonlight, silly starshine over the water now. The breeze was freshening. They would come in and tell her, senti-mental and sad, of the small things they adored.

She wished that they would come. She could not endure to think of them now, to visualize. It was nothing bad, she assured herself, in conventional enough moment, the thing children called romance, the thing which was really propinquity and moonlight and a clever stage direc-tor.

But she wished it were over—ten years over.

Her lips moved. She was count-ing stitches.

They were out there together and she could not follow them.

They stood beside the rail, hav-ing forgotten her. Their part of the deck was deserted, a lifeboat cast a dark shadow. Elisabeth looked out across the waves. She thought of something, she wished to ask—Do you remember?—and she could not think what it was she had remem-bered. Her hand lay on the rail, a small hand.

Lennox touched it with his own. "Elisabeth!" he said, quite loudly.

His tone gave the name all the quality of exclamation. She turned. His hand on hers seemed a terrible thing. She twisted her own a little, let it lie quietly.

"—what is it?" she asked.

His answer startled at her. "But—you understand, don't you? I love you—I've loved you all along. Love me," he pleaded, flame-urgent. "love me, darling."

He drew the hand he held against his heart. Slowly, dreamily and with amazement, he set it to his arm.

She had a sense that she saw as never before, the sea, the moon, the water, the small waves, the great waves, the churned, white foam, the remote moon and the silver shadows or her light, the shape of the breathing ship all about them, the bulk of the tarpau-lined lifeboat.

She heard the engines, she felt the throb, the vibration under her feet. But how it was in her breast throbbing, pulsing, how it was in her limbs, now her lips were be-neath his lips.

She closed her eyes. She was like a fire that destroys itself that all remains vanished. She was dying a little death.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Lennox held Elisabeth....saying something, perhaps. He never knew. He was asking her to marry him, of course. He was telling her he would love her all the days of his life; he was saying amazedly, "How beautiful you are," and instinct, perhaps he was silent. He never knew.

What he did know was that she was here, in his arms. That she be-longed to him. That he was free—that he had escaped. Escaped what?

The dark cottage that had brooded over him so long—had they not lived? No, they had been happy in-deed, they were folded around him and the girl in his arms; they held each other together in the flame of darkness.

This information that he had fell dimly all his life, from which he had struggled, had somehow ended into him, was now a part of him-self.

A stranger approached them. They did not see him. He looked toward the embraced figures, doubted and moved away. He saw two lov-ers, a wide deck beneath a silver sky. He did not see heartbreak and beauty—tragedy and youth—and the moment that should not be held, that passes as a cloud over the moon's ageless face.

Presently, it had passed, and they were sitting in the steamer chairs, not even chairs, talking, hand-fast laughing, exclaiming. There were tears on his face and tears on hers. And they were smiling and saying, "When did you first?" and "Do you remember?"

After a time they went below, two dazzled young things, to tell Louisa.

Louisa Sheldon smiled. She told them she was pleased. She laid her cool lips on Elisabeth's cheek and shrank, affronted, from the fever she encountered there. She spoke to her son in her voice of temperate affection. She talked of a wedding. And did not mark how they drew a little apart and answered con-fusedly. They had not yet talked with her thus far.

After a time they separated, each to his dream or his agony.

Elisabeth lay smiling in the dark, her eyes on the imagined ocean, beyond the portholes. She put her arms about her own body and tried to recapture the hurt his clasp had done her. She turned her face into tender words, she closed her eyes and thought to relive the moment of the kiss. She thought—tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. She ran a finger of her right hand about the fourth finger of her left, the ring finger. She sent her little heart out into the night to knock at his cool distant door.

She slept, smiling, beside his portholes.

She slept, smiling.

Lennox sat on the canvas camp He was as weak as if he had just awakened from a long illness. He watched his hand shake, the glow-ing end of his cigarette described erratic circles as he raised it to his mouth. His body was as light as down in a great wind. He was very tired. He loosed the cigarette through the porthole and made his way to his berth—lay there, his hands behind his head.

She was so sweet, so infinitely to be cherished. She was so perfect.

He tried to re-experience that first enchanted moment; endeavor-ed to invoke the sense of escape, of terrifying release, when his body and mind had turned away in one swift upsrush of flame and left him nothing but the essence of himself; merged into that heart which beat against his own, a little heart ham-mering for admittance.

He could not. He was weak, he was tired. Tomorrow and tomor-row and tomorrow.

He slept.

In his dreams that were not quite dreams something came to pursue him. Something followed him through his sleep, something loaned over his unconsciousness, there in the dark.

He lifted his heavy lids, briefly. His mother stood there, not near him, but a dim, blurred shape against the square, pale patch of porthole, against a graying dawn.

He stirred slightly, yet it was as if he had struggled greatly. He slept again, arduously, speaking. In his dreams he, too, pursued, he was both hunted and hunter. He fled from something nameless and un-known toward a small radiance—little, luminous cloud of light which hovered on the edge of dreams. If he could come upon it swiftly and lose himself within it, he would be saved, he would escape.

The announcement of the engage-ment, made public soon after their return, plunged Elisabeth into a sea of ceremonial calls, of formal entertaining. Lennox, pressed de-lightfully shy and gratefully. "Isn't it awfully nice?" said them, trying to take so much interest? But Elisa-beth, Mrs. Sheldon soon found, was "different." They thought her cold, a little awkward. She respond-ed to their overtures politely and to-ning felicitations with an abstracted smile, she shook hands absently, she spoke when spoken to with an air of docility. In reality she heard, saw, felt very little of their prec nce. Her body moved among the sub-duing surroundings of Washington Square but her bible, startled spirit danced with the stars.

Upon their arrival home, Lennox entered his father's offices. Elisa-beth saw very little of him. He came home to dinner, she sat op-posite him at table, under the eyes of his mother—and Henrietta, who lingered to be admired, rendered conversation conducted by Mrs. Sheldon. She listened, and did not hear. She knew she had only to close her eyes from her plate to find his look upon her, conveying that secret message of perfect assur-ance. Even with her white lids downcast she could feel his gaze, heavy and warm and insistent, weighing her lids.

After dinner there might be call-ers or a play, or a long quiet sitting in the drawing room under Louisa's chaperonage.

The engagement established, Mrs. Sheldon felt it unnecessary to much absent herself from the young people. She seemed always to be with them. There was little oppor-tunity for exchange of confidence between the lovers, less for love's food and drink, touch and kiss and handclasp. At night, when Louisa was trailing her long skirts up the carpeted stairs, Elisabeth would back, kissed her deeply and long, yet not deep enough, not long enough to heal the ache of the weariness, unsatisfied day, in the morning they managed an early stolen rendezvous before he left for the office, sometimes coming home at night he would find her waiting in the hallway, restless, her eyes on the clock. But these fleeting en-counters were not sufficient. Eliza-beth saw only Lennox in the house. Almost every morning she would find a white envelope beckoning under her door, and while he was home in dinner, she sat op-posite him at table, under the eyes of his mother—and Henrietta, who lingered to be admired, rendered conversation conducted by Mrs. Sheldon. She listened, and did not hear. She knew she had only to close her eyes from her plate to find his look upon her, conveying that secret message of perfect assur-ance. Even with her white lids downcast she could feel his gaze, heavy and warm and insistent, weighing her lids.

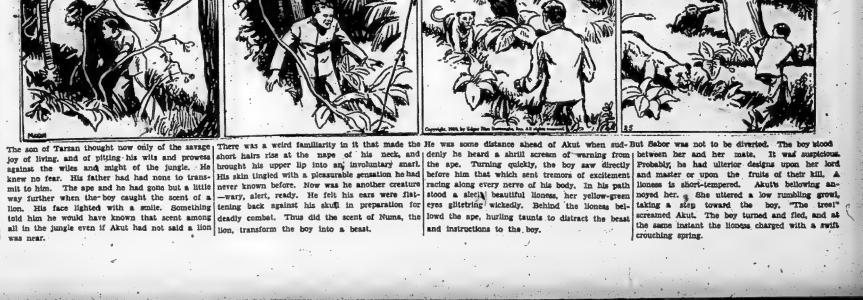
Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the affected parts. The parts become weak, flabby, al-most dead. Only an internal rem-edy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cut-ting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescrip-tion, HEM-ROID succeeds because it removes congestion, restores str-culation, brain and strengthens the diseased parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of quickly ending even piles of long standing that J. S. McKown's Drug Store says our whole stock of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.

TILLIE THE TOILER

BRINGING UP FATHER



MR. AND MRS. — BETWEEN TWO FIRES

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 25.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The son of Tarzan thought now only of the savage joy of living, and of pitting his wits and prowess against the wiles and might of the jungle. He knew no fear. His father had had none to trans-mit to him. The ape and he had gone but a little way further when the boy caught the scent of a lion. His face lighted with a smile. Something told him he would have known that scent among all in the jungle even if Akut had not said a lion was near.

There was a weird familiarity in it that made the short hairs rise at the nape of his neck, and brought his upper lip into an involuntary snarl. His skin tingled with a pleasurable sensation he had never known before. Now was he another creature—wary, alert, ready. He felt his ears were flat-tening back against his skull in preparation for deadly combat. Thus did the scent of Numa, the lion, transform the boy into a beast.

He was some distance ahead of Akut when sud-But Sabor was not to be diverted. The boy stood between her and her mate. It was suspicious. Probably, he had ulterior designs upon her lord and master or upon the fruits of their kill. A lioness is short-tempered. Akuta bellowing an-noyed her. She uttered a low rumbling growl, taking a step toward the boy. "The treo!" screamed Akut. The boy turned and fled, and at the same instant the lioness charged with a swift crouching spring.

THREE BROADWAY NOTABLES "PROVIDE FUN IN NEXT FEATURE"

DRESSERWARE GIFTS WED. Entertainment values have perhaps never wandered away from Broadway, their stronghold for years, by the converting talking pictures—as witness "This is the Night," Paramount's extravagantly funny and musical show which comes to the Belle Theatre, tomorrow and Wednesday, matinee daily.

The three leading personages in "This is the Night" are Broadway notables who have clicked in the thousands at $3 to $6 per seat in many a successful New York stage comedy or musical revue.

Lily Damita, the leading lady of "This is the Night", only recently completed a successful run in the highly entertaining "Hotel Gum." Charlie Ruggles, who seems to have hired his full time to work in the talkies, was formerly one of the leading funny men of the Great White Way, playing in such smashes as "Painting Buffalo" and many others. Roland Young, always a sure-bet for comedy entertainment, whose name appeared in lights in connection with "Rollo's Wild Oat," "Beggar on Horseback" and other theatrical works of note, is still the third member of the hilarity confectionery in "This is the Night."

Put these three together in a Broadway show—and they would have to hold back the crowds with reserves from the 45th street theatre station.

Add to these ingredients the box office name of the veteran playcrafter, Avery Hopwood, maker of "Getting Gertie's Garter," "Fair and Warmer" and many other theatrical comfactions—and you know you will have a combination that would break all current records on the "Vain Stem."

It is easy to see then, why the stageborn everywhere should consider "This is the Night" a worthwhile production even before they know anything more about it than the names of those who are connected with it.

Several songs are interspersed in the action. One of them, "This is the Night" is already labelled a hit by virtue of public approbation.

Thelma Todd was selected to star in "Corsage" with Chester Morris. She was also in "Monkey Business" with the Four Marx Brothers.

Thelma Todd and Zazu Pitts in a very funny comedy, titled "Hotel Nosse", Metrotone Newsreel, and another of those popular "Strange as it Seems" novelties will be exhibited on the same program.

At The Capitol

DEVIL'S LOTTERY" IS ADVENTUROUS

Vivid, dashing pictures of life invade the plot of "Devil's Lottery," the new production that will thrill a capacity audience at the Capitol Theatre tonight and Tuesday.

This romantic, yet powerful drama, brings to the screen the glamorous and exotic Miss Landi, whose previous picture, "The Yellow Ticket" did so much to establish her as one of the outstanding emotional actresses of the films.

Miss Landi portrays the role of a social outcast, and gives one of the most natural and glorious performances that screen has so far offered. She is convincingly human throughout and, in her love scenes with Ralph Morgan, she is especially impressive.

The robust Victor McLaglen essays the romantic male role and acquits himself with credit. He is quite at home in his character portion of the accomplished fighter.

Other characters of unusual merit in their splendid work are Alexander Kirkland, Paul Cavanagh, Barbara Weeks, Halliwell Hobbs, Beryl Mercer and Herbert Mundin. The men English Derby Mundin is a member of the cast is a guarantee of unusually good comedy.

The story, which was adapted by Guy Bolton from Naftzo Barry's widely read novel, depicts what sudden riches do to a group of people from various walks of life. The action takes place in the major prizes in the Calcutta Sweepstakes, a foreign one. The people thereby suddenly find themselves the lucky guests of Lord Chelmsford, wealthy native owner and sportsman, for a week-end at his castle. Each lord's motive being to study their reactions to wealth.

Following their assembly, many unexpected things happen. The action is always swift and offers amusing as well as thrilling events to say nothing of a tringled romance.

The settings are lavish, each one more rich than the last and Sam Taylor's direction is all that could be demanded.

DINNERWARE TONIGHT

Tonight each adult admission will be presented with an article of Wedgewood Blue Dinnerware with the management's compliments.

Twenty-Two Fires in Tweed District Now Under Control

RAIN HELPS

Worst is Over Says Tweed Office in Regard to Hazard

Twenty-two separate and distinct fires in half a dozen counties surrounding the Tweed district yesterday, which threatened for a time to move into several nearby villages and wipe them out were extinguished late last evening only after the heroic work of over five hundred volunteer firefighters had kept the angry blazes under control and stopped the larger ones from spreading.

Today all was reported quiet from office of the fire rangers patrol stations in that district. A light rain in the air of the back district has further hastened the smoke blackened and weary farmers who had worked half the night in stamping out the transient blazes which had started afresh by sparks carried on the high wind. Brush fires lit by settlers was given as the cause.

Fall of Smoke.

Yesterday a dense pall of smoke hung over the north country, smaller things fled in terror from the flames which menaced them, and whole forests were threatened with extinction. Alarm which was spread from the rangers' stations to the country around was answered as the clouds of smoke from the burning brush swept before the crackling flames and reinforcements were hurried from the nearby homes to the fire swept areas.

POLICE DENY WILD RUMOR OVER NURSE

New York, May 17.—Rumors investing Betty Gow, nurse of the murdered son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, continued to circulate today.

Today's story, denied by all official and authentic sources, was that Miss Gow had confessed to throwing the baby out the window to the kidnappers on the ground below. Police have said repeatedly that Miss Gow is in no way implicated in the kidnapping. Reports of the nurse's suicide were also denied.

QUE. VILLAGE WIPED OUT

Residents Barely Escape With Lives So Sudden is Outbreak

Quebec, Que., May 17 (CP)—The village of Valalain was today a mass of smoking ruins after a conflagration with such rapidity, that the village has barely escaped with their lives. From a forest fire which originated in the bush about a mile distant drifted fill efforts of a gang of upwards of 100 men to stem the onward rush. It swept through the village practically wiping it out.

Twenty of the houses comprising homes of the villagers, together with the Canadian Railway station and the wooden bridge over Riviere du Chene were totally destroyed. The women and children escaped from the invading flames on a Canadian National Railway train, which came by before the fire had reached the bridge.

ACREAGE IN PROVINCE IS NOT REDUCED

Wheat Sowing Reduced Ten Per Cent. in Ontario

MIXED GRAINS

Growing Conditions For Wheat Rated 100 Per Cent.

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Ontario's farmers have set about their spring seeding little daunted by prevailing low returns for produce. Reports received by the Province's Department of Agriculture do not indicate any marked drop in intended acreage.

Wheat sowing will be reduced about 10 per cent, according to the department's latest figures, but the drop is less than five per cent. for oats and the coarse grains show a small increase. Intended acreage as compared with the 1931 planted areas follow:

	Acreage: Intended 1932	1931
Fall Wheat	469,000	526,136
Spring Wheat	97,000	99,570
All Wheat	566,000	625,711
Oats	2,320,00	2,343,884
Barley	440,000	439,603
Fall Rye	50,000	56,358
Flax Seed	5,000	7,064
Mixed Grains	1,910,000	999,568

Generally speaking, officials' reports are highly favorable — may lead to a yield of leading grains equal to that of 1931. Winter-kill of fall wheat has been very small this year, amounting only to about four per cent. the lowest in seven years.

Growing Conditions

Growing conditions for wheat were rated 100 per cent good as at May 1, compared with 98 per cent in 1931. Seeding in the early spring wheat seeding was only 34 per cent complete, against 57 per cents at the same date last year and 48 per cent. in 1930. Seeding was delayed 10 to 15 days by cold weather in the latter part of April. In some sections of Eastern Ontario, work on the land was retarded almost three weeks.

Hay and clover have suffered considerable damage, it is estimated 13 per cent. of the acreage has been winter killed and the condition of growth is 86.8 per cent. of the long time average as compared with 93 per cent last year and 91 per cent in 1930.

Crop correspondents of the department report a number of farmers in Southern Ontario already engaged in early barley for malting.

Demon Urged to Murder Gorgulov Informs Court Resisted Spirit in Vain

"In Kind of Hypnotic Sleep," He Informs Court and Adds That He Was Drunk on Bottle of Cognac—"Mystic Force Armed My Hand."

Paris, May 17.—Dr. Paul Gorgulov, the man who assassinated President Paul Doumer, told an examining magistrate that he was in a "kind of hypnotic sleep" when he committed the crime.

"A mystic force armed my hand," he said. "I had no reason whatever to murder M. Doumer. I was in a kind of hypnotic sleep."

Gorgulov informed Magistrate Fougery that he drank a bottle of cognac before going to the War Veterans' Charity Exhibition where the President was. He said, "I fired without hesitation. Not knowing what I was doing."

He declared he could tell nothing about the gun. He was too drunk to remember anything about it.

The prisoner asserted that while on his way from Monaco to Paris before the assassination he "tried to ward off the evil spirit which constantly urged me on to murder."

"On my arrival in Paris," he continued, "I went to Notre Dame Cathedral and prayed God to rid me of the spirit. I fought to the last against this obsession."

NEGOTIATOR'S STORY FAKED TELLS POLICE

Hopewell, N.J., May 17 Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, Superintendent of State Police announced today that John Hughes Curtis, one of the Norfolk negotiators in the Lindbergh kipnapping case, had written "a complete confession" that all the people with whom he has told of negotiating and all the boats on which he said he met them were creations of his own imagination.

MOTIVE MUST BE FOUND IN MURDER CHASE

Police Hunt on Land and Sea For Slayer Hampered For Motive

BY MARK BARRON

Trenton, N.J., May 17—Police, blanketing the entire Atlantic seaboard in their search for the kidnapper-murderers of the Lindbergh baby, find their investigation handicapped through inability to determine definitely the motive for the crime.

"It is like looking for some one in an impenetrable fog," one official working on the case explained here today. "If we knew the actual motive, then we wouldn't be conducting the search so blindly.

Need Motive

"Clues that we now have would be of much more value and seem to have much more significance, might take on a much more valuable aspect, if only we had the motive of the crime to hook up with them."

Dozens of theories have been advanced and many of them are extremely logical. The one given greatest credence is that which says the crime was committed by gangsters solely for ransom.

This is the theory held by Governor Harry A. Moore of New Jersey. He discounts entirely the theory that the baby had been kidnapped for reasons of vengeance.

Not Personal Feeling

Though Col. Lindbergh has no known enemies, it is pointed out a person who has accomplished even some feat who might have been envied by others, would arouse no slight, but the New Jersey chief executive says that the abductors would have risked such an atrocious crime merely through personal animosity. It is highly coincide with those of Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York who also both believe that kidnapping suddenly became the new pastime of those with gangsters and racketeers who have found their usual means prevailing economic conditions.

Here on the Atlantic coast in Norfolk, Va., May 17—Land and sea hunt in the Lindbergh kidnapping case continued in the Norfolk area today as a part of the widespread search for the murderers of the child.

The search here by land took the form of tracing data and clues gathered by police officials as the negotiations of the Norfolk intermediaries was being vainly pursued week after week.

Stones Found in Switches 3 Young Boys are Summoned

Summonses were issued for three Belleville boys by Magistrate Mikel this morning, after the receipt of a finding of stones, said to be wedged in the frogs of the switches of the Canadian Pacific Railway at the east end of the local yard late Monday afternoon. These boys are all under the age of twelve years and hence will appear in the local juvenile court.

They will be charged with placing stones on the track.

Investigator Ramsay, of the C.P.R. service, was walking down the tracks late Monday afternoon when he made the discovery of the stones. The parents of the boys and of lads were seen about the yard limits shortly before the stones were found, and hence suspicion fell upon them as likely to know something of how they came to be where they were discovered.

The Canadian Pacific passenger train from the east was due to arrive here about seven-thirty o'clock in the evening and had the stones not been discovered might have been very serious results.

The long rest and exhausting swim proved too much for the animal and it died shortly after its return to captivity.

Mother's Heroic Rescue of Children in Quebec Town

FORCED TO JUMP

Father Had Started Fire in Kitchen and Left For Work at Town Hall

Buckingham, Que., May 17 (Can. Press) — Fire, of undetermined origin, which destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gaudet, here today, took the lives of three of their children. Another child was seriously injured, and five others, including a baby in arms, were rescued after heroic work on the part of the mother and townspeople.

The dead are: Leo Gaudet, 11, Marcel, 5, and Denise 8.

A 13-year-old daughter, Jacqueline was injured, the sufferer from several serious pain wounds when she jumping from a second story window. Mrs. Gaudet and the other children escaped injury.

Aroused by Smoke

Awakened by smoke and flames, the mother fought her way to the children's bedroom. One by one, she lowered the children to safety and then threw her baby from the window to the outstretched arms of a man below, Leo Marcel and Denise were missing, but the mother was driven back by the overpowering smoke and was then forced to jump from the window herself.

With flames still sweeping the house, Zephire Pascuult, a brother of Mrs. Gaudet and Fire Chief Emile Brisbois entered the second story bedroom and found the bodies. Leo and Marcel were found in their bed, while the body of Denise was discovered on the floor, where he had collapsed and died while trying to make his way to an exit.

Father Starts Kitchen Fire.

Unemployed, the father had got up early this morning, started the kitchen fire and left for the town hall, seeking work. He was at the fire station in the town hall when the fire alarm was sounded and returned with the firemen to find his home a mass of flames and the three children dead. He had to be forcibly prevented several times from entering the burning house.

The fire, probably started by the railway near the Gaudet home, under the direction of Peter Lissner, foreman, did $4,000 worth of damage to the home.

Aird Indignantly Protests Statements of A.G. Slacht K.C.

Admits He Did Nothing to Assist in Getting Contract

CABLEGRAM READ

Toronto, May 17 (CP) — Severe questioning of John Aird, jr., featured today's session of the royal commission enquiring into the affairs of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, with counsel, Slaght, K.C., independent counsel, challenging Aird's veracity.

Aird at times appealed at the strength of Mr. Slaght's language and burst out indignantly with denials of the counsel's statements.

Denied Receiving Message

Mr. Slaght was seeking to show that Aird's statement in "selling himself" to D. O. Sweezey, then head of the Beauharnois Power Corporation, was to convince Sweezey that he had the "inside track" with Hydro officials.

"I suggest you told Sweezey you had honored friends of $50,000 in 1930 and a half when you worked against them though they thought you were with them and offered to you were with them, Mr. Slaght said at one point.

Protest Against Questions.

"Sweezey didn't want an honest man — he wanted a political graft, er," Mr. Aird then told Mr. Justice J. F. Orde, Royal Commissioner, when His Lordship protested against the line of questioning. "Sweezey didn't think he was paying the $125,000 for a man for nothing, don't think he paid it for nothing."

Aird admitted he had been trying to assist Beauharnois in obtaining the Hydro contract for 250,000 horsepower — a contract which was regarded as essential to the Beauharnois development, and to this Mr. Slaght objected.

Aird Finished

"I suggest when you say you saw no one, that you are not telling the truth and I now invite you to tell the truth," he said.

Aird flushed, then interjected hotly: "Mr. Slaght, I am under oath and have been telling the truth. I did not see anybody."

"Did you tell Mr. Sweezey you had influential friends in the Hydro Commission who would help you to obtain the contract for him?"

"No, I did not."

"How much of your real campaign did you disclose to Sweezey?"

"I did not have any campaign," returned Mr. Aird.

Denied Receiving Message

He denied any knowledge of the present whereabouts of his diary and could not recall having entered details of the Beauharnois deal in the book. He denied too, having received a cablegram from Sir John Aird, his father, saying "I have seen the man at the top and now you can go ahead." This cablegram according to K. C. Millard, his former partner, had been shown to him by Aird when Sir John was on route to Europe and had been mentioned, too, by G. O. Gerry, consulting engineer to Millard, in a letter to J. A. O'Brien, representing the owners of the Madawaska River power rights.

Neither the $50,000 nor the $125,000 he had received from Hydro and Beauharnois respectively had been entered in his income tax returns, Aird admitted, although the $125,000 was entered in 1931 in Victory Bonds had been entered as income.

The coupons had been cashed individually, he said, and the bonds brought Mr. Slaght's ire to fire again.

"If you were being honest with what Sweezey thought he gave you bonds for cash and not the Corporation's party $60,000 of the money—it would be a neat way to cover it up?" asked counsel.

"I don't know," said Aird.

ORATORS TRAIN GUNS ON W. YORK

Three Now in Field For Seat Vacated By Lingoln Goldie

Toronto, May 17—Fighting lines were tightened up and guns began to roar in the West York provincial by-election battle last night.

Three candidates in the riding of York Township, nominated as Conservatives, continued to denounced his retirement leaving the field to the Liberal representative, W. G. Cardhouse, Liberal, and John Buckley, Labor.

Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, was the principal speaker at a meeting supporting Mr. Cardhouse, while Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, and others gave his support to Harry Price.

Mr. Hepburn in his first fight, to force millionaires to disgorge some wealth they gained from exploitation of the province's workers, Mr. Hepburn said. He was "definitely of the belief that the worst evils harm done me in certain quarters by a Liberal government, and curiously, I have no objection to lead the fight if my fellows support me."

The Henry Government would continue to "march down the middle of the road and govern the interests of all the people in accordance with a government's duty," Mr. McCrea said. The appointment of Ontario would "stand by the needy people of this province and see that they get fair play."

17 YEAR OLD SON NOW 11TH EARL

Succeeds to Title on Death of Father in Car Accident

Southampton, Eng., May 17—(CP Cable) — Seventeen-year-old Viscount Perceval became legally the 11th Earl of Egmont yesterday, through the death of his father, former Alberta rancher, from injuries received in an automobile accident.

Death of the 10th Earl, Fred Perceval, as he was known to his friends and neighbors in the Alberta foothills, closed brief tenure of an ancestral seat which brought him little but trouble.

The loveliest peer in England," as he was nicknamed, succeeded to the title in 1920, at the age of 56 years. He had been a rancher for 29 years. From the strenuous openair life of his ranch he moved to historic Avon Castle and gave every evidence of being uncomfortable in his new surroundings. First legal and then monetary difficulties assailed him. He overcame these claims to the estate, one from a London baker and another from a man who subsequently created a scene in Christie's Auction Rooms when the Earl was auctioning his family plate and pictures.

At the time he sold the plate and pictures, the 'Earl' discharged all his debts and was once more afford to keep them and the estate, too, he would be send his son established themselves in the kitchen of the castle, he doing their own cooking and other housework.

The auction netted the Earl about $40,000, but the estate so encumbered with tax dues of varying sorts and size that of the more than 2,000 acres he threatened to sell it and move out.

Three Man Commission for Controlling Body, Power to Expropriate

Annual Grant to Be Based on Estimated Receipts

REFUND EXCESS

Nine Assistant Commissioners May Be Named —Salaries Stated

Ottawa, May 17—Legislation establishing the necessary organization to set up Canada's nationally owned broadcasting system was introduced in the House of Commons last night by Premier Bennett and given first reading. The bill was preceded by the moving of a resolution based upon the report of the special Commons committee on radio which was presented to the House a week ago yesterday.

There was not a word of debate as the House moved into committee of the whole to consider the resolution and the whole transaction took only a few minutes. Second reading will be given the measure tomorrow.

The proposed act follows closely the recommendation of the committee, the object being to "provide for the establishment of a commission with the necessary powers to carry on the business of broadcasting in Canada." The commission will be known as "The Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission."

The controlling body will be composed of three, a chairman appointed for a period of ten years, a vice-chairman appointed for a nine year period, and a third commissioner appointed for eight years. The bill as introduced last night, did not contain the salaries to be paid the three commissioners but blank spaces were left for the amounts to be filled in when the act is reprinted. The Prime Minister will probably announce the salaries in the House today. The headquarters will be at Ottawa, with branches located wherever the commission deems advisable.

Assistants Provided for

Power is provided for the appointment of not more than nine assistant commissioners and not more than one of these to be from each province, the intention being to have one assistant commissioner in each province whose duties will be to organize provincial advisory boards to work with the commission. These assistant commissioners would draw no salary but would receive honorariums fixed by the Governor-in-Council.

Staff required by the commission would be appointed under the Civil Service Act.

Powers to expropriate existing stations required by the commission and on which an agreement cannot be reached with the owners, are provided, action to be taken under the terms of the "Expropriation Act."

Funds would be made available to the commission by annual vote of Parliament and must in no case exceed the estimated revenue from receiving and broadcasting licenses. Any unexpended money at the end of the fiscal year would be returned to the Receiver General, and any revenue earned by the commission would be deposited to the credit of the Receiver-General.

Canada has a per capita production of 120 pounds of fish annually, but the per capita consumption is only 20.7 pounds, while that of Great Britain is 40 pounds and that of Norway 70 pounds.

Value of the United States Capitol Building and grounds is estimated at $25,400,000.

BLAZE VISIBLE FROM STREETS BLAST FEARED

Many Already Leave Homes — Peril Increasing

POWDER MENACED

Kirkland Lake Saved —Flames Dot North Ontario

Rouyn, Que., May 17—(CP)—Whipped to fury by high winds menacing bush fires last night, almost encircling Rouyn and Noranda, while volunteer fire-fighters battled desperately to combat the flames.

Tongues of fire leaping high pierced the pall of smoke which hung about the towns and were clearly visible from upper windows here.

Residents of the twin mining towns were preparing for hasty departure should the flames reach the towns themselves. Parches bush and dry grass-land aided the spread of the fires, fanned all day by strong west winds which approaching gale force at times.

From the town court house, where trial of 34 alleged Communists began to-day, the approaching flames could be seen. Clouds of smoke drove past the building.

At the Noranda mine, scarcely a mile from the town, a crew worked feverishly to avert danger of a serious explosion should the flames reach the surface powder magazine and detonate the officials feared.

Heavy clouds raced overhead and hopes were expressed that rain might fall shortly to aid the fire-fighters and turn aside danger of destruction from the imperilled towns.

Many families moved from the town, while others prepared to seek shelter should need arise, on Lake Osisko, a small body of water on which both towns are situated.

Ward Reaches Rouyn

According to the latest word from the Noranda district reached by telephone last night, afternoon fires cleaned out the buildings and the P and A at Ward, Quebec, wiped out part of the offices and cabins on the Waite-Montgomery and was still threatening the town of Rouyn. The Amulet and Waite-Montgomery properties are closed down. Losses were estimated to run around $50,000 at the Waite, while those at the mine at Amulet was not estimated. Both were covered by insurance.

The Noranda organization had 175 men on call for fighting fires in the vicinity of Rouyn, and in view of the fact that most buildings are of wood it was feared that if the fire actually reached the town limit it would be extremely difficult to save the structures.

Much of the day's difficulty in fighting fire around Rouyn was due to the speed with which it moved with the high wind behind it. It was reported last night that during five hours in the afternoon the main blaze travelled between four and five miles, following a sharp shift of wind took it away from Rouyn.

Kirkland Lake Safe

Kirkland Lake, May 17.—(CP)—Flames which for a time threatened this town were last night being held in check by a force of 3,000 fire-fighters, aided by rain.

All available men were called into service and even underground mine workers were hastily brought to the surface to aid in the fight against the blaze which was sweeping down to within a mile of the residential district of the town.

Volunteers had succeeded in holding the flames back from the west end, and here the situation was under control, but in the southern section the fire was still eating its way through the brush, urged on by a driving south wind. The wind perversely had been blowing from the northwest, but quickly switched to the south.

Observers said though there was little immediate danger of the flames enveloping the town, the situation in the south was still precarious. The bulk of equipment was being moved to the southern section where the flames were eating their way through scrubby brush.

The conflagration starting in piles of brush and timber which had been cut in the building of a "fire-trap" which consists of a wide band of barren land around the town, and which is supposed to act as a check to oncoming forest fires.

POLICE RUSH RESERVES TO QUELL RIOTS

Troops and Tanks Are Ordered to Bombay For Emergency

TEMPLES STONED

104 Are Killed and 650 Wounded as Hindus and Moslems Battle

BOMBAY, India, May 17.—Armored cars from Poona patrolled the streets of Bombay today, and troops rushed here in their wake to quell fierce fighting of Hindus and Moslems, in which 64 have been killed and at least 650 wounded during the past three days.

Whole districts of Bombay were in a state of siege last night, as the riots between the hostile races raged unabated, after having taken a further toll of forty lives during the day.

The Second Battalion of the Green Howards, a British regiment stationed at Poona, left at an hour's notice early today aboard fast special trains for this city. The tanks had been ordered here only a few hours before.

During the night mobs of men, wielding iron rods, knives, stones and bottles, swirled through the streets in fierce combat, by the light of huge bonfires that blazed from one end of Girgaum Road to the other. Other mobs looted Moslem shops.

Police Fire on Crowd

Police futilely struggled to restore order, firing into the rioters in several parts of the city. Many of the police were on the verge of collapse from three days of almost ceaseless duty under conditions of tremendous difficulty.

The situation was so serious that Sir Frederick Sykes, Governor of the Bombay Presidency, who left Saturday for his summer mountain resort of Mahabaleshwar, returned by aeroplane.

An Indian regiment at Poona was ordered to stand by, prepared to leave for Bombay early today to assist in suppressing the riots, which began on Saturday with an attack on two Hindu boys by a group of Moslems.

Temples and mosques were stoned. Several business buildings, including a four-story tenement, were set on fire.

Weapons Prohibited

Police Commissioner Patrick Kelly prohibited any one, except properly authorized persons, from carrying weapons for a month, but the battle broke out again yesterday.

As darkness fell, the dust and din of combat were more intense than ever. The combatants laid about them with knives and rods while stones and bottles hurtled through the air.

Leaping, fighting figures were silhouetted against the flames in Girgaum Road, which was strewn with goods of every description from looted Moslem shops.

A touch of comic relief in the serious surroundings was provided by a party of Moslems, whose suspicious corpulence as they waddled down the road aroused a suspicious police officer. The Moslems were searched, and their bodies gradually became leaner and leaner as year after yard of valuable silks and gold and silver embroideries were unwound from beneath their ample shirts.

TOKIO GOV'T. AVERTS SPLIT

Minister is Persuaded to Withdraw His Candidacy

Tokio, May 17.—Viscount Suzuki, Home Minister, accepted the Presidency of the Seiyukai (Government) Party today, and thus became virtually certain of succeeding the assassinated Premier Inukai as Japan's Premier.

His informal agreement to fill the late Premier's place in the Seiyukai's leadership averted a factional split that threatened to split the ruling party. Eldermen of the party, who decided to support Hon. Reinosuke Takejiro Tokonami, Railway Minister, another possible candidate, to give up his ambition for the Presidency for today.

Mr. Suzuki will be formally installed as President of the party at a mass meeting of the Seiyukai's Parliamentary members this afternoon. It was thought he wanted he would be the next Premier in accordance with Japanese custom.

Fascism in Japan apparently suffered a setback, as a result of Premier Inukai's assassination, when the Military Council deposed yesterday to replace General Sarao Araki leading Nationalist as Minister of War.

To Head Army

Lieut.-Gen. Jinsaburo Masaki, Vice-Chief of the Army General Staff was chosen by the Military Council to take over the War portfolio, regardless of whether the Cabinet under Acting Premier Korekiyo Takahashi, eventually stands or falls.

Tokio was regarded by police reserves against a terrorist plot, by young soldiers.

THE LITTLE GIRL WHO FOUND HER APPETITE

YESTERDAY she only toyed with her food — so no wonder Mother was just a little concerned. But today, it's another story. Mother has found just the treat to tempt a young appetite. It's a big bowl of Kellogg's Rice Krispies and milk. And just see her dip right in with her spoon and enjoy every spoonful of that good, nourishing cereal.

It gives you a lot of satisfaction, doesn't it, to see your children enjoying their food? Well, just give them Kellogg's Rice Krispies. Crisp, delicious rice bubbles that actually snap, crackle and pop in milk or cream!

And Rice Krispies are one of the best cereals for children. So tempting, nourishing, and easy to digest. Splendid for the evening meal — they do not overtax like many heavy foods, and so they encourage restful sleep.

Kellogg's Rice Krispies are made with exacting care. Spotless ovens. Gleaming machinery. Sunlit kitchens. No hands ever touch this cereal. And Rice Krispies are sealed in a protective WAXTITE bag which is placed inside the red-and-green package, and keeps every morsel oven-fresh. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Quality guaranteed.

Air Fleet from Italy May Fly Over Canada

Rome, May 17.—A second Italian air fleet will fly the Atlantic next year, with the purpose of celebrating the tenth year of Fascism and also the World's Fair in Chicago. A fleet of twenty twin-motored seaplanes, under command of General Italo Balbo, the Air Minister, who commanded the first armada to South America a year and a half ago, will undertake the flight. The ultimate objective will be Chicago. The route probably will be via Ireland, Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and Canadian points. Second in command probably will be General Aldo Pellegrini, Commander of the High Seas Aeronautic Navigation School at Orbetello, where 190 picked fliers and mechanics are training for the big flight. The flight probably will be timed so as was the South American venture, with four men to each plane, and it was estimated that the plotting of the route was along the one flown by the German, Captain Wolfgang von Gronau who flew to Chicago last August.

WORTH EMULATION

What cleaning-up of old buildings can accomplish is shown by a newly cleared area behind several stores on the west side of Front Street south of Bridge Street and along the river bank. Buildings which no longer served any useful purpose and which were in a tumbled down condition have been removed and the view from the lower bridge is greatly improved.

This operation has been carried on at some cost, because it required work, but the cost is not commensurate with the improvement of the appearance of the riverbank.

The owner of this property which recently changed hands stated that the removal of these buildings was also really a sanitary improvement.

The removal of this kind is commended to other property owners because of the enhancing of the values of the property, because of the growth of employment, because adjoining buildings are safer from a fire hazard standpoint and because of sanitary conditions.

Such a cleaning is appreciated by any neighborhood in which it takes place, and by other people who chance to see it.

WILD STORIES

Late yesterday the wildest stories were passed from lip to lip as to capture of the murderers in the Lindbergh baby case. "Some one" had heard it over the radio so the story went and the newspaper office was deluged with inquiries as to the truth of the rumor. Because there was nothing to confirm such a story, naturally no press news of the kind had been received. The very fact that there was no reference to it indicated how false it was.

Efforts to trace who had heard the report over the radio failed as expected to indicate that rumor. The story is evidently one which grew of itself and did not come of any broadcast unless a misinterpreted broadcast.

During the war Sundays were often the days for the wildest of reports, causing much anxiety, only to be found unwarranted. How easily stories take form, is strange for they are told with all the trappings and signs of truth, except that they are so exaggerated as to arouse some doubt in the story thoughtless.

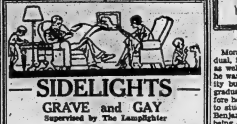
A Toronto newspaper had a similar series of inquiries to answer two days ago, probably along the same line, absolutely unwarranted rumors.

After all the press is a steadying force. What would happen were there no daily record of events may be left to the imagination.

The mind is prone to make mistakes and the existence and accuracy of the press is an absolute necessity because of the wide extent of coverage of the ordinary newspaper which is read by many thousands. That the newspapers are so comparatively free from errors in regard to facts is one of the bright points and the really essential thing about publication. But accuracy much care must be exercised and that it is exercised is the reason for the confidence of the people in their newspapers.

CARRYING PLACE

On July first there is to be dedicated a cairn to mark the neck of land at the Carrying Place (portage) across which the Indians used to carry or portage their boats between Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte. A year or more ago representatives of the Historic Sites and Monuments board visited the scene and decided upon the site for the cairn. Governor Simcoe once thought of the Carrying Place as the capital of Ontario.



Here in the midst of this rich land of the Bay of Quinte section is one of the early spots from which grew the civilization of which all who have been reared hereabouts are a part. It is a thrilling sensation to realize that at the head of the Bay is the very spot which felt the tread of the pioneers who built this portion of Upper Canada.

This should be a loyal portion of Ontario, founded by the best blood. Every acre of ground should have these parts sacred to the memory of some one who toiled and strove to construct a land where would be found the finest liberty.

On these May days and on so many other days of other seasons this thought cannot fail to force itself upon the mind. The lives of the inhabitants of the Bay of Quinte section have been cast in pleasant places for the rearing of a virile and free race, for it is the lap of romance and of the storied past.

Since the old portage days, many changes have left their mark on the country hereabouts. Railways came, navigation developed and the Murray Canal was dug. Now navigation has dwindled, but the automobile has come and in its wake flies the airplane. But these newcomers and whatever newer is yet to come cannot take away the romance of those days when the Indians and first settlers trod these parts.

Finally it would be a mistake if ever the name Carrying Place should give way to another, for no name which can be chosen or created can equal this in its recording of an age which has gone.

GAY-WINGED VOICES

God made each bird a feathered voice
To sing all day: "Rejoice, rejoice!
Rejoice in Summer and the sun;
In filmy lace by spiders spun;
Rejoice in nodding daffodils;
In swift, cool rain across the hills!"

"Rejoice, rejoice!" they soar and sing,
"Rejoice with every flashing wing!
That cleaves the blue of heaven's field;
In every gleam of gold revealed
By sunlight on the rippling wheat;
In clover blossoms, white and sweet!"

"Rejoice," they carol, "in the breeze
That adds to ours its melodies;
Rejoice in rose and brook and bee
And all bright Summer's pageantry!"
God made each bird a gay-winged voice
To sing all day: "Rejoice, rejoice!"

AS THE WORLD GROWS OLDER and wiser, and the demand for unskilled labor becomes less and less it behooves the boys of today to seek out the vocation in life to which they will be most fitted and consequently most happy and successful in. This week the local Y.M.C.A. has arranged for the boys to meet leaders in all lines of human endeavor in the business and professional world in conference for advice and counsel as to their vocation in life. Each boy interested in the occasion may confer with the boys—thus a boy with ambition to become a lawyer will have an opportunity of talking with a man of that profession with the view of ascertaining whether the lad is fitted for that calling. Two banquets have been arranged for the boys and if they are not fitted in some line of profit for all concerned is expected from the conference.

ABRAHAM WAS NOT THE FIRST JEW, as many believe, or a Jew at all, according to Henry Bregman, once a Rabbi, in an address before the Rotary Club Monday. Abraham was the first—Hebrew, if you please, and Jacob was the first Israelite, having been made a Prince of Israel by the angel of the Lord, and Judah, fourth son of Abraham, and Leah, his first wife, was the first Jew, being of the tribe of Judah. The word Hebrew, means, practically speaking, "foreigner," or from "beyond the river," thus Jesus was a Jew, and was thus designated by the woman at the well whom he asked for a drink, and she answered "Thou Who art a Jew."

Mr. Bregman among a number of things which most Rotarians "never knew till now," Persecuted in England and Russia, Mr. Bregman escaped to England where he labored as a Rabbi, much of his work taking him to prisons, jails and lunatic asylums. Twenty-five years ago he located in Toronto and is identified with a mission known as "The House of Seekers After Truth," which concerns itself with the Jewish race.

Other Papers' Opinions

MORSE'S MEMORY

Morse's service to the world was dual, for he was an artist of merit as well as an inventor, As a youth he was keenly interested in electricity but sidetracked it for art. He graduated from Yale College and at 25 he was 20 and went to England to study painting with Allston and Benjamin West, some of his fellows being exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1813. After two years of study he returned to New York, to follow the occupation of a portrait painter. In 1826 he was elected to the position of first president of the National Academy of Design. It was about this time that he revived his interest in electricity having learned the elementary facts concerning el ectromagnetism at the many inventors. Morse had a difficult task in securing recognition for the child of his love and many years when, in 1835, he set up a telegraph instrument in which a battery formed half a mile in range it attracted little attention, two years later he exhibited his invention publicly and he persevered until, in 1843, Congress appropriated money for the building of a line from Washington to Baltimore, over which the latter the first telegraph message was sent and telegraphy was practically established as a commercial proposition. It has rendered invaluable service to mankind ever since and today Morse code prevails in North America. Today the inventor's memory is receiving tribute in both hemispheres, with the honors paid to his successors have drawn closer together. Samuel Morse left a legacy of useful monument to his own genius.—Montreal Gazette.

MORSE THE INTELLIGENCER

The first clear prophecy of the alphabet known as the Morse code" and of the instrument for its use is to be found in a communication which Samuel F. B. Morse made aboard the packet ship Sully on his return home from abroad in 1832.

If the pressure of electricity can be utilized over a few miles of wire the circuit I see no reason why intelligence may not be transmitted by electricity.

Though he was among the first painters of his time and the first President of the Academy of Design, Morse in the day he was to die was establishing a name for himself in another field, in the field of science—the "intelligencer" of the world.

The Morse code is known to every boy in room in New York University in Washington Square and distinctly remembers her interest in "attention, the Universe by Kingdome 'right wheel,'—that telepathic suggestion of the future reach of the clicking current. Instantly in electricity, along the wires of which there are now some six or seven millions of miles—more than all them still using the means of communication invented by Morse and of dedicated Morse, the early American geographer—Boston Herald.

TRAGEDY OF NORTH

Three men were riding home on a three-dog toboggan on the ice-covered Ground Hog River, before daylight, after visiting their traps. The lead dog saw an airhole in the ice and swerved to avoid it, but it swung it that the toboggan was whirled sideways and fell in. Two of the three men, the rear dog, and the toboggan being launching into the water. One man was extricated from the ice and drowned. The other two were able to grasp the dog and the mittens rose to it, thus helping to support them. The two remaining dogs, in danger of being hauling into the hole by the struggles of the third animal and the weight of the toboggan, immediately chewed off their harness and set off at full speed for Fauquier, three" miles down the river, where they created such a commotion at the unusual hour that an investigation was made and officers were led to the scene of the accident by the dogs. The two survivors had gotten out on the ice near by this time, but were in a state of collapse and had to have treatment attention for many days. Neither the drowned man nor the toboggan or the third dog have been recovered so far.

These incidents suggest that the pioneering tasks that are carried on in the remote places are attended by much danger to life, and it is only once in a while that some special event is recorded that calls public attention to the sacrifices of those who are cut off from civilization.—Galt Reporter.

ATTA BOY, DEAN

When Dean Lawrence of the University of Minnesota reared up on his hind legs a few days ago and expressed the opinion that the institution of higher learning have been "handing out bunkum" to the general public, he struck, we think, a responsive chord in the breasts of many people. For it is a fact that is fearful that the Professors' union may get after the Dean severely for this utterance and maybe it would be a good thing if they did. It might result in a general showdown. Dean Lawrence submits as examples of the bunkum which is dispensed such phrases as "Education makes its products more valuable," "Culture and aristocracy can be conferred by educational institutions." It was out of respect to his blood pressure, we have no doubt, that the dean refrained from commenting specifically on the ravings of that professional chap who some months ago declared all whiskers are morons and that other publicity-seeking confrere who suggested that all men over 80 years of age should take a trip to Mars in a rocket.—Hamilton Spectator.

"PAINS ALL OVER ME"

Rheumatism Again!

And once again it was the "little daily dose of Kruschen that conquered it. In fact, it made this sufferer "feel ever so well."

I have been taking Kruschen Salts because of having pains in the back, head and joints; pains all over me. I felt tired going to bed, tired getting up. I was in a very bad way. I was laid up for over a month, and the doctor who attended me said I was suffering from acute rheumatism, and ordered me to take Kruschen Salts. In less than 3 months I felt ever so well. I can't thank you enough for Kruschen Salts."—C. O.

The principle is this: Kruschen Salts drive from your body the tiny acid crystals which cause your pain. Your pain is easy, rheumatism has become loose. Afterwards the "little daily dose" of Kruschen so stimulates the liver and kidneys that your bodily health is kept clean, because no acid does not get the chance to accumulate.

PASS SALES TAX URGES AL SMITH

Presidential Candidate Takes Firm Stand—Slash to Limit

New York, May 17.—Alfred E. Smith, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination last night advocated passage of the proposed manufacturers' sales tax.

Smith, who to date has 46 convention votes pledged to him, took positive stand on the sales tax and other issues of national importance in an address in which he outlined a "financial program for the present crisis."

The Congressional program Smith outlined in detail was:

Pass the sales tax; slash to the extreme limit all appropriations for proprietions of public money; embargo all bills for public works; begin "immediate consolidation of governmental activities and bureaus, in order work may reduce the cost of government"; halt the passage of "Congressional legislation; modify the Volstead Act, and tax and light wines and beer; defeat Federal bond issue to make possible the expanded program of Federal improvements; defeat President Hoover's three-point Federal relief program; give the President a "free hand to provide aid for productive public works of states and municipalities; empower the President to prolong or decrease the moratorium extended to debtor nations "until a real solution can be reached.

Admiration For Aims and Ideals

(By The Canadian Press)

DURBAN, May 17.—Affectionate farewells from Premier J. B. Hertzog and Gen. J. C. Smuts were read at the Biennial Conference of the National Council of Women, of South Africa, by expressions of the highest admiration for the aims and ideals of the association. That these would eventually be achieved was earnestly to be hoped. That they had been partly achieved was demonstrated by the recent political emancipation of women. This would stand as an earnest to members of the council of the fuller realization which was gradually being accorded throughout the world of the place to which women were rightly entitled in the life of a nation. Gratification was voiced that the council was doing noble work in keeping interest in the moral housecleaning of today alive in spite of grave discouragements.

Mrs. Wilson, president of the European towards the native and the Indian problem, said Mr. Ian D. L. Forbes in her presidential speech. To speak of the Native as ignorant, savage, she said, exhibited ignorance of the position. There was in the Native a fine background in the building up of personality which would be of great value to him and to South Africa. It was for European women to take active interest in the cultural and vocational training of young Bantu women, so that the Bantu might well the Bantu might well prove to be the backbone of South African industrial prosperity.

TRAPPED BIRDS BANDED

Kingston May 17—Under the direction of the Dominion Parks Branch of the Canadian Parks and Canada, a group of ornithologists at Kingston recently this season have caught and banded 600 chimney swifts. These birds eighty-one of them have been found in the migration, but large numbers of these birds will be banded and at the university the banding has been done at night, traps being set for them on the tops of the chimneys.

INSULIN NOT CURE IN CASE OF DIABETES

But is Very Valuable as it Supplies Missing Elements

By Louis E. Bisch M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

Insulin is not a cure for diabetes. Insulin supplies more or less the elements of which the body lacks sufficient supply when diabetes is present; but although it is a most valuable aid it cannot take the place of a organic structure lacking normally

My purpose is not to belittle the importance of the use of insulin, but rather I do wish, sometimes to correct a misconception which seems to be fairly common everywhere concerning this marvelous discovery.

Another false idea concerning diabetes concerns the presence of sugar in the urine. Although this phenomenon is the cardinal sign of diabetes, it may well happen that the presence of sugar is due merely to too much starch and sugar having been eaten over a long period of time. During pregnancy also glycosuria which is the technical name for sugar presence, may occur. The inhalation of chloroform during an operation may produce sugar excretion for a while. Lastly certain other kidney affections, as well as a few serious disorders may show a temporary intolerance for sugar.

Sugar must appear for a few weeks anyway before one can be with certainty that diabetes exists. Furthermore, this prolonged show of sugar must be present after the subject is quiescent for a time, using only moderate amounts of starchy and sugary foods.

Despite the use of insulin, the treatment of diabetes should be centered on the diet. Insulin is but proper diet is the keynote. Both should be prescribed and regulated by a physician, no physician who is versed in treating such cases. The patient should never himself, give up his doctor until told by the doctor himself that it is safe to do so.

In diabetes the individual is unable, to some degree at least, make use of the sugar he eats. His body cannot oxidize it; that is burn it up, and that way sugar appears in the urine.

The reason such a person can use only a part of the sugar he takes in is because one of his organs—the pancreas—is not normal. The pancreas contains certain structures called the "Islands of Langherhans" which produce a chemical substance known as insulin. These islands cannot be made working as it should it produces an insufficient amount of insulin. Hence, in the new treatment of diabetes insulin is given to make up for this deficiency.

Insulin is made from beef pancreas and administered to diabetics. It is clear, however, that such extra dosage cannot take the place of the Islands of Langerhaus. When these do not produce enough insulin, the insulin treatment does is to afford the additional supply necessary to meet the needs of the body.

Insulin is but one little insulin in the system the body needs to oxidize fat and convert it into energy purposes. The sugar elements within the body cannot be burned and get rid of. Such use of the fat and starch of the diet not only overitalizes and weakens the patient, but the acetone and ketin acids which are poisonous. Thus the fat and starch of the diet must be considered as merely an adjunct to the treatment and not the right one. The right diet still remains of paramount importance.

YANKEES ON VERGE OF A NEW RECORD

Four Successive Shutouts Ties Cleveland's Record of 1903

NOW FIRST

Brilliant Pitching in National League is Noted

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Rough in the New York Yankees' pitching department which up to ten days ago was setting for something like a dime a dozen on the open market and very few takers at any price, had cleared clear out of sight today.

Ominously the most sensational streak seen in the American League in more than two decades, the Yankees' curvers had tied one record that had stood for 36 years and were on the way of setting up a new all-time standard for efficiency.

When Vernon Gomez set the Cleveland Indians down 8 to 0 yesterday he became the fourth consecutive member of Joe McCarthy's staff to blank the enemy. Johnny Allen started it last Wednesday by stopping St. Louis 3 to 0; George Pipgras followed with a 6 to 0 decision over Chicago last Saturday and Charles Ruffing whitewashed Cleveland Sunday 2 to 0.

The feat ties the league record held jointly by the Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox of 1903 and 1918 respectively. If today's Yankee pitcher—probably young Allen—holds the Indians scoreless he only ties those innings it will better the present mark of 41 scoreless innings set by the 1930 staff.

The Yanks still have some distance to go, however, to equal the major league record of six straight shutouts set up by the Pittsburgh Nationals in 1909.

Yanks First

First place in the league standing was the prize that went with Gomez' triumph yesterday. The Yankees slipped ahead of Washington by a few points as the Senators were rained out for the second consecutive day by St. Louis 3 to 0. Sammy Gray pitched the Browns' blank.

Charley Berry, late of the Boston Red Sox, doubled in the 1929 inning with Appling on base to give Chicago a hard-earned 4 to 3 victory over his former team mates. Smead Jolley, who went to Boston in the deal that sent Berry away, accounted for all the Red Sox runs off Ted Lyons with a home run in the seventh inning. Detroit staged a five run rally in the ninth to defeat the Athletics, 6 to 4.

National League

Two of the day's three games in the National League were decided by brilliant pitching. "Red" Lucas of the Cincinnati Reds yielded only three hits in beating the Giants 3 to 2, and Van Mungo, Brooklyn rookie, allowed but four safeties as Dodgers overwhelmed Pittsburgh 11 to 1. Lucas, pitching his sixth victory, did not let a man reach first base after he had walked Bill Terry on a home run in the third inning.

Riggs Stephenson's single with three aboard in the last of the ninth gave the leading Chicago Cubs an 11 to 10 victory over the Phillies. As the Boston Braves were rained out at St. Louis, the Cubs increased their lead to a game and a half.

Yesterday's Stars

Red Lucas, Reds—Set down the Giants with three hits, drove in two runs with single and won 6-2.

Charley Berry, White Sox—His double in the 10th drove in winning run against Red Sox.

Vic Sorrell, Reds—Settled down after shaky start, gave Athletics only one hit in last six innings and won 6-4.

LEAGUE WINNER IS TEAM TO PLAY

Softball League Makes Decision at Last Meeting

A heated discussion was heard at the special meeting held by the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League on Monday evening. The main item of argument was the application of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association of their league. It was the opinion of some, that the local softball moguls should do the same as is done in Hockey, namely forming one all-star Belleville team for the purpose of entering the O.H.A. and play their city league games as a side issue. After much discussion the league finally decided, that the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League would affiliate with the E.O.L.S.A. and the winner of the local league would enter the Eastern Ontario play-downs as in former years.

The local league will be given the first home game of the season on June 1st., when the original opening game of the Belleville Fruit at the Diamond will be played that evening of June 3rd. The matter of obtaining the use of the Armouries' floor for the big dance of Mr. W. B. Vandervoort and his Belleville Fruit Softball Nine was mentioned when it was decided to play all games at night and play them in the Belleville Arena Gardens. This suggestion met with favor at the last meeting and a delegation will wait on the directors of the Arena to ask for the privilege of operating the softball in the Arena this summer.

Six Umps Apply.

To date the secretary read the minutes and they were adopted President Frank Deacon reported on the recent annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association held in Belleville, which he attended as the local league delegate. The only business coming on hand was the umpires' applications and it was found that but six officials had applied for a berth in the league. After accepting the list of applicants it was decided that they should leave the time limit for umpires affiliation open for another week and all umpires wishing to officiate in the league this season must have their names in the hands of the secretary, Mr. W. B. Vandervoort, before next Saturday night. The following have made application to date—Herbert Pulford, C. B. Colling, H. G. Woodley, Richard Beaversock, W. Gerow and E. J. Colling.

Divide Gate.

After some little discussion the team managers finally decided, that after all expenses are paid the net gate receipts are to be divided equally between the two contesting clubs. In the past the home club has had the gate receipts passed and four law added was merely to equalize the gate receipts between all the six teams if possible. The home club are to supply the ball for each game, however.

The meeting adjourned until next Saturday night, when the team managers will be given their season players certificates for signing. It was definitely pointed out, that all players, except those playing for the Frontenacs last season and are now free agents, will have to positively get a release from their last year's manager if they intend playing for another club this season and the players are warned by the executive, that they must not sign two certificates nor should they sign one with another team before getting a release from their last year's manager. The league executive intend dealing quite drastically with offenders of this nature.

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

Ball players' galore were in evidence at last night's Belleville National week-out when well over 30 young players answered the call of the season. The diamond at Victoria Park from the recent rains and things were anything promising as the Fair Grounds last evening. Manager Gerow inaugurated batting practice and each player was given a lengthy turn at bat.

Although Tommy Pointer and Casey were warming up all evening it is to be built yes they were not used to throw to the other end. The starting battery of Frank and Harold Parks of Trenton looked fair enough for early season but Hutton, also of Trenton did not put in an appearance. Lou Smith, of last year's Moose Jaw club threw down up to the batters for a while and he was later relieved by Bill Hay, late of Port Colborne. Blye is a southpaw and may do for hurling duty for the box. Jimmie McGairs was catching the last two pitchers.

Plenty of infielders were in evidence and were led by no less a personage than "Shiloh" Johnson, as master of ceremonies around the keystone sack. Will Johnson and Moose Darrah split the first base duties while Les Tice, of hockey fame, helped in at second. Dusty Flagler, Lefty Meyers, Richard Winker and a stranger, whose name we could not ascertain last evening, were working at short and third. In the outfield there were so many aspirants that it was almost an impossibility to count them. Manager Gerow will not weed out his outfield material until later in the week but will centre his activities on the infielders while Captain "Pecney" Mills will look after the pitchers and catchers during the pre-season's training campaign.

After the practice we spoke, separately, to Manager Gerow and Captain Mills and they were more than pleased with the turn out to date. Especially when they heard that Weir's application for a position with the C.N.R., in Belleville, had been accepted and he will not be moved to Brighton, as heretofore stated. The "Nats" will practice every evening this week in preparation for their opening game against the champion Kingston Frontes on May 24th in Belleville.

It is too bad to see the passing of the local K.-Y League but due to the fact that the players have not taken sufficient interest in its formation it is more than likely we will see the disbanding of this progressive loop very soon. Those responsible for supplying ball in this league feel that their efforts are not being appreciated when only one team manager puts in an appearance at the meeting called especially for the purpose of organizing the loop for 1932. The actual league players will be kicking themselves about the middle of June when there is no ball for the ten age boys in Belleville. It'll be too late then.

Although Picton and Point Anne are going ahead with activities for the coming season it begins to look as though the local Intermediates are "Sitting Georgs do it." Of course on the other hand, they may be thinking out that intermediate baseball never got under way in this town until after the senior club had opened the season. The reason being that most of the players are anxious to try out with the seniors and therefore the intermediates have to take what is left. While the senior clubs operating in Belleville of late there should be plenty of intermediate material to furnish right now. The Victories will hold the reputation of operating at the "X" on Wednesday night —all interested please invited.

With seven teams ready to enter a proposed Belleville Senior Softball League a meeting has been scheduled for the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night next at the Y.M.C.A. when the draft rules which have signified their intentions of entering in this league are Foster Ward, Housemans, Ontario Knitting Mills, Ingle Hill, Rovers, Bankers and Canadian. It is the wish of those forming the loop that by at least eight teams entered at the meeting on Friday night.

A number of local wrestlers and boxers are going to Kingston to compete in the Eastern Ontario championship bouts to be staged under the auspices of the Canadian Legion. Company's Athletic Club on May 30th. Mr. O. Hogan is chairman of the meet and according to Kingston press dispatches the bouts are an assured success. It has been decided to stage the next boxing bout, under the auspices of the Belleville Nationals, on the evening of June 1st, following the harness race meet which is to be staged under the direction of the Belleville Fair Board that day.

Believe it or not—the local golfers who were so ambitious over the week end in the links are today smarting under a well coat of sun blisters received at the hands of Old Sol. But then them boys was always glutons for punishment.

CLOSEST RACE IN YEARS IS A PREDICTION

First Five Clubs in International Separated By 3 Games

BISONS SECOND

Art Smith, Leaf's Hurler, Curved Balled Orioles to Defeat

(By the Associated Press)

The first month of the International League season has served to beat out predictions of one of the closest races in the circuit's history.

Today, a little less than five weeks after the campaign opened, the first five clubs are separated by a margin no greater than three games.

Newark, the pace-setter, leads Buffalo and Montreal by a game and a half with Rochester and Baltimore another game and a half in the bad. Toronto, in sixth place, trails Newark by only five games and is a scant nine in figure in the pennant fight any time the Leafs can get on a little winning streak. Reading and Jersey City, however, already appear doomed by the rest of the field.

Buffalo is back in the title with Montreal in games won and lost, jumped into second place on percentage yesterday by whipping Jersey City, 5 to 3. Joe Bloomer's sensational relief pitching was the outstanding feature of the game. He took the mound with two one, none out and the Skeeters leading by one run in the third. The visitors were allowed only one hit, a single in the ninth, no other runner reaching first. Werber and Mueller hit homers for the Bisons, Werber's being his eighth of the season.

Art Smith limited Baltimore to six hits in the only other game of the day, pitching Leafs to a 2-1 victory over Orioles. Orioles figured in both Leaf runs. Jim Chapplin singled and Wyatt sacrificed him to second and Hughes tripled him home. In the eighth Stoner's wild throw gave Toronto a life, Fitch and Hughes following with singles. Michael's long fly to Sukeforth scored Owen after the catch.

SHAMROCKS OUT IN FRONT

Defeat Continentals in Trent League By 7 to 6 Score

Trenton, May 17 (Special)—The Shamrocks defeated the Continentals last night, when the Shamrocks beat the Continental Life by 7 to 6. A fast game it was, and had ball that softball is not a girl's game as well as to be. Joe Coughlin pitching for the Shamrocks was perfect, getting seven strikeouts while he was pitching softball. The Continentals used five pitchers in an attempt to stop the A.C. boys, who while having individual batting stars played nicely. Sager going for four bingles, while Silverson was right but part of one, Langdon then went in the box and finished and played the remainder of the game.

The line-ups:

HOUSE TORN DOWN

Toronto, May 17 (CP) — The house to which Oliver Mowat, former premier of Ontario, brought his bride 80 years ago is being torn down. It was in 1867 that Oliver Mowat, then 27, bought the yellow cottage on the corner of what was then Church and Crookshank Sts. During the eight years the family lived in it Mowat began to win fame as a lawyer, and finally entered politics. In 1896, the year he was elected to city council, he moved to a new home he had built. The house bought the property and it has been in the family ever since.

Necessity of Controlling Weeds is Pointed Out

Weed Inspectors, Twp. Reeves, Councillors, Road Supts. Meet

The annual meeting of municipal weed inspectors with township reeves, councillors and road superintendents was held in the Shire Hall Belleville yesterday.

Mr. Joseph Wilson, agricultural representative for Hastings County acted as chairman and pointed out the necessity of controlling bad weeds in Hastings County. Mr. John D. McLeod, district weed inspector for Eastern Ontario discussed the administration of the Weed Act, pointing out that during the last few years, in which the Act has been in force much progress has been made. Farmers generally are now anxious that the Weed Act be enforced even more rigidly than in the past.

Road superintendents reported that where road side weeds had been cut consistently during the last four years, the cost per mile is gradually becoming less each year.

Old Cemeteries Renovated

Mr. McLeod informed the meeting that largely through the voluntary efforts of local weed inspectors hundreds of old cemeteries throughout Eastern Ontario have been renovated and instead of being an eye sore are now neatly spots of which the local people are very proud.

Arthur Martin, assistant director of the Crops and Markets Branch, stated that weeds cost the farmers of Ontario $25,000,000 yearly.

Mr. Martin discussed the habits of growth and methods of control of more than 50 weeds core or less common in Eastern Ontario, and illustrated his remarks with 100 coloured slides.

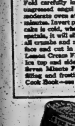
LUXOR CAKE

with Magic Baking Powder

"My advice to all housewives, both skilled and inexperienced, is Use Magic Baking Powder. Then there is no uncertainty about your baking," says Miss Ethel Chapman, Editor of the Home Section in the Ontario Farmer.



This unqualified statement is particularly impressive because thrifty Canadian home makers have learned that Miss Chapman's advice is invariably practical.

Other well-known food experts and cookery teachers in the Dominion share Miss Chapman's high opinion of Magic. In fact, the majority of them—and housewives, too—use Magic exclusively. No wonder Magic outsells all other baking powders combined!

Miss Chapman's recipe for "LUXOR CAKE

1 cup fine granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup ripe butter
½ cup lukewarm water
½ teaspoon Magic Soda
1½ cups pastry flour (or 2 tablespoons less of flour)
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt

Sift sugar. Measure out 1 tablespoon, put on wedding dish and set aside. Add water and soda to egg yolks; beat with egg beater until foamy. Add sugar a little at a time, beating in well. Add flavored sugar and beat. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Fold carefully into mixture and fold in sugared angel cake you. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for 40 to 45 minutes. Invert pan and let stand until cake is cold. When cold run knife all around it, it will slip from pan. Remove all crumbs and cover top, sides and face and cut in three layers. Spread Lemon Cream Filling between layers. Ice top and sides with Marshmallow Icing and Sunkist Frosting. (Recipes for filling and frosting are in the Magic Cook Book—see free offer below).

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Hands as Soft as a Dove's Down

Mrs. Useless, who never lifts a finger except perhaps to ring a bell, doesn't have any hand troubles. She lives a futile sort of existence, tottles to a manicurists every week, gets the rose-tint high shine, turns her mind to other matters. Mrs. Useful, who washes the babies, the dishes, the shirts and the socks, who calls in the calcimining wrecking crew and then puts her house all together again, who at a pinch leans into the back yard and washes off the windshield of the car,—this woman, the salt of the land, has hand troubles, lots of them.

But it is better, say we, to have a broken finger nail now and then and the fun of running a family than to be a lazy person of purest ivory serene and let to fill a place of service in the world. Idlers may be pretty, but they're seldom interesting. Idleness is the half sister of selfishness. There is always worthy work to be done.

When Mrs. Useful has the children tucked away for the night, it is time for her to be self-indulgent. Let her grasp herself one half hour of beautifying, even though she knows that Baby Freddy will be peeping in four in the morning, eager for a nip at the milk bottle. Let her particularly give attention to those poor hands that toil incessantly the day, that are in and out of hot or cold water, that must brush out dust from under radiators, that must do all manner of chores that are not likely to arouse any enthusiasm in anyone.

During the day time the disagreeing hand lotion is convenient. It allays roughness, it soothes the cuticle that is flaking and sensitive. At night the creamy massage is received gratefully by the little mite. Cloies leaves its hand all prickly by the skin, and hands are not left greasy. Cold cream offers itself as a pleasant agent but it is likely to be too thin to apply conveniently. The medium for hand massage should be firm enough to give resistance when the hands are rubbed. Take the orange wood stick, load it with cream, plunge it under the nail eaves; treat the cuticle around and base miserable little hangnail cracks that become painful and prove stubborn.

If the hands are slipped into old white cotton gloves they'll have a the cosmetic feast all night. In the morning, dear, take them with soap. Leave with warm water. Cold water is an excellent tonic and astringent for the complexion, but it won't do for the hands of the housewife because they get more water than they need during the activities of the day. They're shedding dead scales faster than new ones can form, because of dirt and grime, household cleaning mediums that eat into the delicate skin surface.

Rubber gloves are a safeguard. They aren't the thick heavy things they used to be. They are less expensive than they have been in the past. When removing them, sprinkle the inside surfaces with talcum powder. There won't be that maddening tugging and pulling them, when the gloves are slipped on next time.

Mrs. Hamilton served refreshments and a social half hour enjoyed.

Woman at Head of Purchasing Dep't

(By The Canadian Press)

TORONTO — Three-ton ambulances or packages of tape are not the day's work to the head of the purchasing department of the Toronto Department of Health, and because she is a woman she shoes for both with equal grace and assurance, Dr. Gordon P. Jackson, Medical Officer of Health, in directing the Zonta Club, said that woman's pro. clivities are by nature feminine. Now the appointment of one of the gentler sex perhaps thrifter, to the head of an important department.

Toothache is outmoded as an excuse for "playing hookey from school since efficient dentistry has now reduced the dental defects of Toronto's school children to a very low percentage. In reviewing the work of the Health Department, Dr. Jackson stressed particularly the activities of the dental, mental hygiene and medical and nursing services. He paid high tribute to the Public Health Nurse and described her as "missionary par excellence." She walks the streets in spite of the fact that public health nurse," he said. "My hat is off to her, noblest woman of them all."

"Don't phone the health department when you want your rent," Dr. Jackson warned his audience. "We have no jurisdiction over your landlord, though many think we have!" He stated that 18,991 nuisances — which were a menace to health — were abated by the department in the first six months of this year. Jackson explained that the department had jurisdiction only over the nuisances which were judged a menace to health. The public is at times embraced the department of indifference in matters where it had no legal status.

Crow Eggs of Bounty Become Little Crows in Claimant's Pocket

Emporia, Kan., May 17—With two crow eggs in a pocket, E. E. Post, farmer, drove toward the county clerk's office.

It was a very warm day.

"I'm sorry," said the deputy clerk, "but we don't pay bounty on crow's eggs—just on crow heads."

"Well, you can have the eggs anyway," Peet responded and put a hand in the pocket of a look of astonishment crossed his face.

He collected 20 cents bounty —19 cents on each crow.

WHAT THE WIND BRINGS

Which is the wind that brings the cold?
The North wind, Freddy and all the fold
And the sheep will scamper into the shed
When the North begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the heat?
The South wind, Katy, and corn will grow,
And peaches redden for you to eat
When the South begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the rain?
The East wind, Arty, and farmers know
That cows come shivering up the lane
When the East begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the flowers?
The West wind, Bessy, and soft and low
The birdies sing in the Summer hours
When the West begins to blow.

FIRMER TONE IN TORONTO

At Noon Tuesday Stocks were Holding Gains on Monday

Toronto, May 17.—Still hearkening to Wall Street, Toronto Stock Exchange Market advanced today after a long-over confident opening going into the third hour, short of the later-listed issues held an appreciation over closes last night. Bell Telephone at 88 3-4 was up one at noon, Brazilian at 9 3-4 up 38, and Nickel at 8 3-4 up 1-4. Steels are unchanged at 12. Goodyear preferred and Service Stations preferred both unchanged, the former at 75 and the latter at 30, and Rogers-Majestic Tubes unchanged at 1.

Oils slackened somewhat late in the second hour and lost whatever small amounts they had picked up in the opening.

The market was extremely sluggish, and the increase in interest on the upturn as has been the case whenever this has occurred recently. Even if the rally lasted only an hour this morning losses fell off with the advance in prices, although bids followed the trend upward.

Ford did not come out at all the first couple of hours and the world activity was typical of many other pivotal issues.

New York Market Recovers After Early Wave of Selling

New York, May 17.—The stock market fluttered uncertainly today but seemed more inclined to move forward than to retreat.

After most of yesterday's late upturn had been lost in the first hour the market rallied briskly, to the accompaniment of "construction" developments in Washington, sold off again on publication of the weekly car-loading figures, but recovered after mid-day to around the best levels of the morning, with U. S. Steel in the lead.

Oils showed notable strength on the upturn, but even the rails, which had been distinctly heavy during the morning, joined the procession. Union Pacific and Santa Fe, consistently recovered from early declines of nearly three. U. S. Steel was a leader the afternoon recovery, getting up nearly two points. American Can gained more than a point, as did Corn Products and Dupont. The morning upturn in the oils was well maintained, but such issues as Standard of N. J. and California, which had got up a point or so. American Telephone similarly recovered an early drop of 2%.

The rumors regarding Washington developments appeared to be the chief factor in the better tone of the market, which brokerage quarters attributed largely to short covering. These rumors remained slightly nebulous, however, and were apparently based principally on a more cheerful attitude toward the prospects of passage of the tax measure.

PURE PIFFLE IS COMMENT OF COUNSEL

Aird Declines Swezey Had Wrong Impression as to Purpose

PROBE GOES ON

Toronto, May 17 (CP).— The Royal Commission on Hydro-Electric Power, Hon. Gerard Ruel, Jr., when the enquiry resumed today. All day yesterday Mr. Aird had told of his negotiations with the Hydro Commission and the Ontario Government and its consequent payment of $50,000 to Mr. Swezey for services rendered in connection with the Ontario Conservative party. Swezey's impression, according to Aird, was incorrect and based on nothing he had heard from Aird himself.

In Case of Difficulty

Mr. Aird had told the money for services to be rendered the Government. Swezey acted, stated Aird, and that was all there was to it.

"There were only the two stories—Aird's and Swezey's, was the comment, arising at the Bar. Tilley, K.C., Commission Counsel, in characterizing some of Aird's statements as "pure piffle."

He had approached Swezey in the first place because "common gossip" in Montreal pointed to the latter as a "big guy with money" there, Aird explained. The keystone of the whole Beauharnois deal was the Hydro contract, and line was an essential link in the chain. Aird's first contact to enable Beauharnois to sell its bonds.

Refused $100,000

Because of his knowledge of Hydro matters, he had then approached the Beauharnois head; proffered his services; been given $100,000 by Swezey; declined it and passed it on to Conservative treasurer or $125,000 contingent on the Beauharnois obtaining the contract, and received that amount.

"I still can't see why you got the $125,000—I can't credit such a story," declared His Lordship. "It was the biggest piece of graft ever and savored of robbing shareholders of Beauharnois. I think you did nothing except be at Mr. Swezey's beck and call and take $125,000. I can't credit it."

To this, Aird stated he was satisfied himself he had rendered services, and that Swezey had made the contract with him and was satisfied.

Not for Campaign Fund

Mr. Justice Gawood and him, maintained Aird, that Swezey and H. B. Smith, vice-president and head of the power corporation, would believe the money for campaign funds, for nothing he had said or done possibly have given them that impression.

Aird's career as an engineer was outlined by counsel, who thought the fact Aird had never received a fee of more than $5,000 in any year until he received $50,000 from the Hydro Commission in regard to Madawaska.

Before the contract was signed, he said, Griffiths had come to him by telephone, and Aird had replied: "All right, I'll be down in Montreal in a few days for the money." He went to Montreal, $100,000 in bonds was turned over to him. That afternoon he went back to Swezey's office and received a cheque made out to cash and signed by Swezey's secretary. The cheque he then exchanged for another, payable to Aird, which would give no explanation for his acceptance of the money. The cheque is to be obtained for the commission's perusal.

No "Nods"

There had been no "significant nods" when the money was paid over, as alleged by Mr. Swezey, stated Aird, and Griffiths thought the money was for Canadian funds they were wrong, and he could not understand why they had received such an impression.

He had never been Beauharnois' man after a Hydro contract until he heard it as "common gossip" in Montreal. He stated the realization that the "condition of the Beauharnois Power affair made the keystone of the whole Beauharnois structure" was a Hydro contract and that time was an essential thing in the securing of the contract as the Beauharnois had to sell its bonds" had led him to approach Swezey in the first place on the matter of assistance.

They had come to the agreement after Aird had told the Beauharnois head of his work with the Hydro commission in the Madawaska, and Swezey "picked up his cues."

NOT GUILTY IS CAPTAIN'S PLEA

Appears Haggard After Weeks of Confinement in Jail

Miami, Fla., May 17—Captain W. Lancaster, former British army aviator, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in circuit court today on charges of murdering Haden Clarke, youthful writer and flame of Mrs. A. E. Keith-Miller's Brazilian flyer.

He appeared haggard after weeks of confinement in jail.

James M. Carson, chief of defense counsel, asked that the trial be postponed for six weeks. He said he would need that much time to obtain character witnesses here from other states.

State Attorney Ns Vernon Hawkins charged Sturges Lancaster killed Clarke in a bedroom at Mrs. Keith-Miller's home as a consequence of a love triangle. There was no objection to the postponement.

TRAILING TRUCK BICYCLE STRUCK

A dangerous practice sometimes indulged in by numerous boys throughout the city almost caused a fatal accident on Saturday boy on Front Street last evening. In this instance, however, through lucky circumstances no serious injury was recorded.

A truck was proceeding along the street, and gripping fast to the corner of the rear of the vehicle, a boy on a bicycle held on with one hand and was being towed along. Nearing the silent policeman at the upper bridge the truck swung wide to cross the bridge and the boy let go to continue on north. In the following, the driver of which had been unaware of the boy's intention, struck the bicycle and knocked the boy to the road. The application of the brakes saved him from being run over, and possibly serious injury.

BODY RECOVERED.

Windsor, Ont., May 17.—The body of James Brignall, who was drowned on April 20, was recovered today a short distance from the point of the fatal accident.

Brignall and four other lads were on a raft which broke from its moorings. He and Ernest Reavely, 8, jumped into the water and were drowned.

Ruins of an Indian pueblo large enough to have accommodated 2,-000 persons have been found near Rodeo, N.M.

Villages Threatened

Five Near Bancroft

In Bancroft a blaze in a small fire which broke out in a nearby bush menaced the town; but was finally checked out by a rush of volunteers to the scene, in the village of Combermere a fire was reported to the ground as the sparks carried on the winds moved from place to place. Surrounding the immediate district were also fires, and second growth timber continue to smoke while various outbreaks have been brought under control many places still show glowing embers and trails of smoke to the city.

Eternal vigilance of the fire rangers had today shown striking results, observation indicated by the Ontario Intelligencer, they stated the worst of it was over and there remained little else for the settlers to do but to keep a sharp smouldering fire under observation.

Rain is Welcomed

Toronto, Ont., May 17—Rain has fallen in various sections of the province today, relieving fire hazard being and the fire hazard reduced, according to a statement officially issued today by Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forest, Spring Hazard.

"A long fire hazard occurs in the spring when the bush is dry and before vegetation starts", said Hon. Mr. Finlayson, "and when the season is backward and the fire hazard occurs at a later date. The department has been in touch with the various districts, the fire rangers are all at their stations, but there may be a bad fire hazard for a few days until vegetation starts to grow. An annual amount of brush disposal and cleaning of fire zones around villages and settlements has been carried on for the last two winters and the situation is very much improved in this respect."

A number of fires occurred in the Cochrane District started by settlers clearing brush and debris but all were under control and heavy rains fell last night accompanied by snow. Fires in the Kirkland Lake area were all under control and no damage done.

Artificial wool can now be manufactured from jute at low cost.

LAD'S WAGON CRASHES TREE

Master Bobbie Courtney, Tweed, Painfully Injured

Tweed, May 17 By Mail— Bobbie, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Courtney, reached very painful scalp and facial injuries in an accident on Friday, that many times may have terminated fatally. Seemingly desirous to experience the thrill of a swift ride on his wagon; but, being too young as not able to judge of what might be a safe way to obtain that thrill, he took his wagon to the Anglican Church hill, the steepest hill in the village, and accordingly down the walk from the highest point.

He had not proceeded far before the speed of the wagon had increased beyond the margin of safety for a small boy, who soon lost control, the wagon hit the sidewalk and struck a nearby telephone pole with considerable force resulting in the injuries mentioned above.

An annual event of considerable interest in connection with Tweed Consolidated School is "Parental Night" which is to be held at the school on the evening of Friday, May 27rd. In addition to musical numbers by the children, an address on some topic of interest will be delivered by Mr. H. W. Crooker. Some of the pupils' exhibits of the children's work in Art, Household Science, Manual Training, Penmanship and other subjects will be on display.

Mrs. John Martin was called to Arden on Sturday because of serious injuries received by her sister, Mrs. W. A. Donnelly. Mrs. Donnelly has been visiting her mother, Mrs. S. Alexander, and fell from the snow in the barn. It is feared that, in addition to injuries to her back, she may have been hurt internally.

The return softball game between the boys of T. S. School and of T. C. School was played in the play afternoon at the Consolidated school grounds.

Owing to the fact that a number of the boys on each team came to school in the vans which leave Thrasher Hall after 4 o'clock, there was an abbreviated affair of five innings and resulted in a 5-5 tie. In order to make the teams more evenly matched the T.C.S. which has a much larger attendance, dropped a number of their largest boys from the line-up and substituted some who were more nearly the size of their opponents. This resulted in a very interesting game which was enjoyed by a number of spectators; and T.C.S. was rather fortunate in earning a tie.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Lennox and Elizabeth were not consulted as to their plans. They were to be married, Elizabeth in the late spring, so to early June, all chosen, and come home to receive at Washington Square. Then they would go off for a little trip. On their return they would make their home with Lennox. This plan found without comment. Lennox Sheldon drew a nominal salary on the bonus, an allowance from his mother. George Sheldon's will, made before Lennox was born, left all of which he was possessed to his wife. It had been arranged for him to change it, after the boy's birth. There was a covering clause to it, to which Sheldon set forth that he was cognizant that children might be born to them, and in the event he trusted his wife to provide for them.

Elizabeth had wished, but not audibly, to be married from her own home, but in her financially anticipated this. She remarked, merely, that it would be simpler if every way for the wedding to take place in New York. Had her father been a member of the Sheldon household for the nothing would be necessary in the arrangement. Ella and the girls would come to them, there would be plenty of room, and they could go put by the Lake Forest guild comfortably. Louisa would give the processes.

Elizabeth's mother and sisters had written. It seemed to Elizabeth that they were unduly impressed. She had such a "miracle should have taken her. Yet they wrote lovingly to the verge of sentimentality and she read their letters of admonition and affectionate rejoicing with such unconcealed tears that Louisa, watching her, thought her far too emotional. And she knew a moment—had the first—of misgiving.

Louisa knew other moments, marking how nervous and almost spectacularly handsome Lennox grew as the weeks went by, how thin Elizabeth's hands, so thin that the ring must be returned to Tiffany's and made smaller, her she saw it. Louisa thought—still—over, and resigned herself to the position of involuntary spectator until late spring— and after.

Once however, in early winter, she turned on the stair, after bidding them good night, and surprised them there at the foot of the long flight, moveless and embraced. She set her teeth and went up to her room, having made no sign that she had seen.

Anything she closed the door, and sat down in a straight-backed chair and looked unseeingly ahead of her. She was trembling, she did not know it. She said to herself, mechalleng her thoughts to order, "I think the child should go home for a time, until perhaps a week or so before the wedding. Ella will want her, she wishes to go."

Louisa congratulated herself upon this kindly thought and spoke to Elizabeth the next morning.

"I have heard from your mother," she said, truthfully enough, "and she feels that you should be with her for a little time before your marriage. It is eight months since your last brief visit to her and I find it quite fitting that you should return for a while."

Elizabeth nodded, flushed with pleasure. She wanted to go, wanted to be held in her mother's meager, loving arms, wanted to cry and laugh with her sisters, wanted to talk about Lennox. She had tried to talk about Lennox to his own mother, she had asked so many tremulous questions. What kind of boy had he been? What had he looked like as a small boy? Didn't Cousin Louisa think him the handsomest, cleverest——? But Louisa had not proved responsive nor encouraging. She had answered laconically. A healthy baby, a good little boy, growing she trusted, into a fine, upright man who would walk righteously, etc., etc.

When the plan for Elizabeth's departure was told Lennox, he looked blank. Go home? For months? He shrank from the idea which he had come to love since she entered it.

But his mother argued his protests, smiling a little disdainfully she made them appear ridiculous, a schoolboy.

"It will not be for long," she reminded him, practically. "Ella is entitled to a little time with her daughter."

Still he could not grasp it.

"Do you really want to go?" he asked Elizabeth during one of their few moments alone.

"Yes."

"And leave me?" he inquired, incredulous.

"No—no—"

"But what, darling, darling?"

She couldn't say. She couldn't tell him that she did want to leave him, for a little while; that she wanted to be away from the enchantment of his presence which was with her in his house even when he was not wanted to sort out her emotions, as it were, look her love in the face, grow familiar with those two dazzling features. Here, in these short weeks, her eyes were blinded by an ardent light. Home, perhaps, in the old surroundings, she might see clearer, both herself and him.

She answered weakly.

"I feel that I should be with mother—she'd be hurt."

It was decided that she would go to Boston the day after Christmas returning in May. The wedding date has been finally set for June.

Christmas was a time of strange gayety in the Sheldon household. Tyne, a heavy, elaborate dinner was served with the evidential plum pudding on a silver platter surrounded by blue flames of burning brandy. They had a tall spruce tree—Louisa had insisted—and presents came calling. But there was no lightness about the day, no real plenty of rejoicing. Elizabeth wished that Lennox could know the kind of Christmas celebrations she had known, lumpy stockings and a little money, candy and oranges and mittens.

This Christmas, the last before her marriage, began and ended with church. She had a little locket of pearls from Louisa, a bracelet from Lennox, dozens of other gifts, among them the embroidered bureau set from Henrietta. The latter's present would not, send in their box, this year, she would so soon be with them. She would postpone their little fete until Elizabeth arrived. Perhaps Easter—would one look?

He could not. His mother remanded him that he must not neglect his apprenticeship at the office, must not begin his holiday.

Louisa, was happy, in her dour fashion. The girl would be going. The future settled, there would be no more talk of Lennox's being a woman who had planned it. She would once more be alone in the house. She would have, for her solitary worship, the idol of her undiminished passion.

She would have days of him, weeks, months, without the irritant of that man's claim and presence. She would glut herself with him, she would drink up, hoard her memories.

There was a late church service christmas night. Louisa and Lennox attended it. Elizabeth had been excused she must rise early on the morrow in order to make the tire-some trip to Boston.

The services were at ten o'clock; they included a tree for the parish progress; Louisa had supervised the trimming of it. They would be home by half past eleven. Elizabeth must not sit up, said Louisa considerately, she would see them all in the morning.

Elizabeth went up to bed. She had kissed Louisa, she had brushed Lennox's cheek with her lips, she had said good night to Henrietta. Her trunk was packed, strapped and ready.

She could not sleep. She began to wonder how soon they would come in. Perhaps they would come early. Wry had just she asserted herself, she thought resentfully, gone with them, or waited up after all? She was not tired, not in the least.

Now that tomorrow drew nearer with ever licking minute, her heart failed her. Her imagination fell into fever. To be separated from him so long? What might happen? Anything might happen! One or the other might sicken and die. He might live far her, meet other girls, prettier, defter, cleverer.

She could not go.

She could not go without seeing him once more, alone. Tomorrow she would be forced to say good-bye to him with the very eyes of Louisa, of, perhaps, Henrietta. He would not even take her to the station. She could write, of course, but of what worth were words? She wanted the reassurance of his arms, the broken sentences that were not sentences at all, the agonized comfort of his lips.

It seemed to her that she was parting fro m him forever. June was still — June—but five long months away.

It was midnight when she heard them come in. First one of the clocks struck, solemnly, definitely. Then there came the sound of a bell, of a heavy door, opening, closing. Then footsteps.

She heard Rogers put the chain on the door for the night and go down to the basement quarters. She heard Lennox's voice and Louisa's. She heard them come upstairs. Heard them stop at Louisa's door. Her own room was down the bend of a long corridor, next to a guest room.

She heard Louisa's door shut. Then, next to it, Lennox's.

She must sleep now, she supposed. As once, on shipboard, as many times since, her little heart left her body and wandered in search of his.

She cried, a very little, and stretched out her immature arms. Lennox—Lennox.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Lennox in his own room had undressed and now sat in dressing gown and pajamas, writing a letter. Elizabeth should have a letter for the train. He wrote, his pen racing over the sheets. He wrote, "I love you." He wrote it in a hundred phrases. He wrote, "June is so far away—how can I let you go? You belong to me for always."

He wailed a long time, when the last word had been written. His mother's light was out. He rose and went to the door between their rooms and listened. She was asleep, he could hear her breathing.

He opened his door, softly, and slipped down the hall, turned the bend and stopped before Elizabeth's room. Stooping, he pushed the thin wedge of paper under the small space at the sill.

Elizabeth saw it, that advancing square of white. A night light burned near her, a tiny candle flame floating in a saucer. She jumped from her bed and Lennox turning away, heard the outer knob of her bare feet, his wailed, and suddenly his heart rose into his throat and choked him terribly.

Her door opened.

She'd flung a silken kimono about her, her pale hair fell to her waist a shining veil, her eyes were wide, they were beggar and wildest terror.

Lennox stepped across the sill and took her in his arms. After a moment he reached back, shut the door, quite automatically. The letter lay on the floor at their feet unheeded. She clung to him, she was shaking. She said, over and over, "I stayed awake—I wanted you to come— to say good-bye—I stayed awake."

"I love you," he answered.

Entering the church had been a less holy thing than this stepping across her sill.

The great house was very hushed and dark. Downstairs a dying ember on the hearth flared up and for a moment the tinsel, sensible fruit of the christmas tree sparkled. The star, the silver star, shone out, the wearer angel gazed with her white futile flight. The old house slept, secure in its intricate traditions. Louisa Sheldon slept, heavily, and without dreams.

In Elizabeth's room the night light burned, a little flame of hope and gold. Somewhere, in the sound of sighing, a trap sprang. It was inevitable, it was pitiless.

The night light guttered, was gone. Elizabeth's room was a dark forest, profoundly silent, haunted by beauty and forgetfulness, the knowledge of mortality and the lonely wisdom of the flesh.

Louisa Sheldon had sent comfort of her son after Elizabeth's going. He was remote, very withdrawn. He had the eyes of a sleepwalker.

Only when her letters came did he awaken to life. They would lie there upon the hall table, waiting his return from the office, while the tinted envelopes, the address formed in a round, careful hand. Louisa, passing them on her way out, could, would not see the eyes, such temptation had they for her. What did Elizabeth find to say to him that he should carry the letters up to his room and lock himself in with them for, literally, hours?

Louisa's very fingers itched to open them open, but she never as much as touched them. Where Rogers had put them they remained until Lennox claimed them. Her pride was rigid and very curious.

Two weeks. Three weeks. Then Lennox appeared uneasy in her room, one Friday afternoon.

"I am going to Boston."

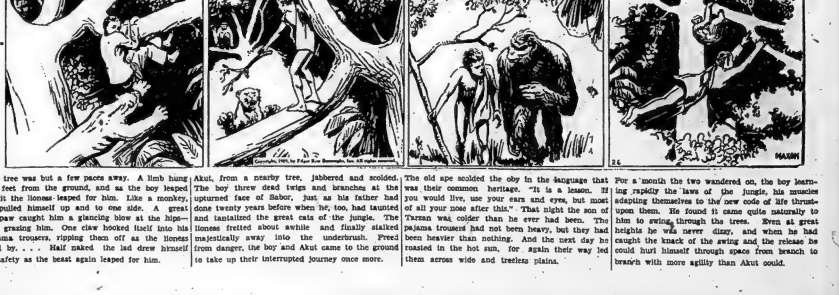
BRINGING UP FATHER

—By George McManus.



THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 26.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The tree was but a few paces away. A limb hung ten feet from the ground, and as the boy leaped for it the lioness leaped for him. Like a monkey, he pulled himself up and to one side. A great forepaw caught him a glancing blow at the hips—just grazing him. One claw hooked itself into his pajama trousers, ripping them off as the lioness sped by. . . . Half naked the lad drew himself to safety as the beast again leaped for him.

Akut, from a nearby tree, jabbered and scolded. The boy threw dead twigs and branches at the upturned face of Sabor, just as his father had done twenty years before when he, too, had taunted and tantalized the great cats of the jungle. The lioness fretted about awhile and finally stalked majestically away into the underbrush. Freed from danger, the boy and Akut came to the ground to take up their interrupted journey once more.

The old ape scolded the oby in the language that was their common heritage. "It is a lesson. If you would live, use your ears and eyes, but most of all your nose after this." That night the son of Tarzan was colder than he ever had been. The pajama trousers had not been heavy, but they had been heavier than nothing. And the next day he roasted in the hot sun, for again their way led them across wide and treeless plains.

For a month the two wandered on, the boy learning rapidly the laws of the jungle, his senses adapting themselves to the new code of life thrust upon them. He found it came quite naturally to him to swing through the trees. Even at great heights he was never dizzy, and when he had caught the knack of the swing and the release he could hurl himself through space from branch to branch with more agility than Akut could.

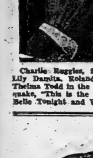
ROLY YOUNG OF STAR WEEKLY REVIEWS "THIS IS THE NIGHT"



Dresserware Gifts Wednesday

Roly Young, noted photoplay critic of the Toronto Star Weekly, speaks in the following glowing terms of "This is the Night," the clever Avery Hopwood feature comedy opening at a two days' engagement at the Belle commencing today:

"This is 'The Night' is a delightful imitation of Chevalier's latest picture, 'One Hour With You,' and while it lacks the Chevalier personality, it has every other ingredient which made Chevalier's picture so enjoyable, including as fine a cast as Sweet Roland Young and Charles Ruggles, who also appeared in 'One Hour' With You.' The girls in this flicker are Lily Damita and Thelma Todd and there is also a personable young newcomer named Cary Grant. The director of this film had quite evidently copied Dub Hamlin's act, plus a few ideas of his own, and so it romps along most pleasingly, except for a series of rather aggravating clips where the censor has eliminated brief snatches of dialogue.

The picture gets under way with a novel knock, showing an orchestra tuning up. The conductor opens up the score of "This is the Night" and they start to play the music. This has nothing whatever to do with the picture except for the fact that there is special musical score running through it. Thereafter the real plot fades in as Mr.'s orchestra fades out and we find Miss Todd arriving at the Casino de Paris with Roland Young and Lily Damita in her evening dress torn off when her train catches in the automobile door. Her husband, Cary Grant, is supposed to have left for the Olympic, being a champion javelin thrower. In his absence, she plans a little vacation in Venice with Mr. Young. The pair arrive home to find that Grant has returned unexpectedly. This, naturally, starts complications particularly with regard to the hand of the lady's dress. Young's friend, Ruggles, is also in the mix-up as he invents a wife for Young in order to cover his embarrassment. The tickets which hubby has found were of course for Young and his wife, and hubby, still being suspicious, decides that he and Thelma will go to Venice also, to meet Young's wife. Ruggles thereupon digs up an actress, Lily Damita, to take the part of the wife and the climax is on. The whole thing is delightfully light and foolish and Young gives his usual droll performance, which is continually amusing. Incidentally, Thelma Todd, who has played almost exclusively in comedies except for the one time when she changed her name to Allison Lloyd to play the lead in "Corsair" gives a performance in this film which should justify her remaining in feature pictures from now on.

At The Capitol

"PLAY GIRL" NEXT AT THE CAPITOL

Loretta Young, beautiful young screen favorite who scored so heavily recently in "Taxi" and "The Hatchet Man" will arrive at the Capitol Theatre Wednesday in her latest and most important picture, "Play Girl."

Miss Young has brought to a part packed with romance, pathos and spirited comedy, a sincerity and understanding which makes it the outstanding triumph of her career.

Norman Foster, as the young lover and husband, a lovable, gambling fellow well—carries the role opposite Miss Young to the story's happy ending. He again demonstrates the superb technique evidenced in his clever successes, "Under Eighteen" and "Alias the Doctor."

Comedy in "Play Girl" is amply taken care of by those delightful veterans of stage and screen, Guy Kibbee and Winnie Lightner, thus rounding out a balanced and intriguing story. James Gleason, a new face on the screen, Noel Madison and Dorothy Burgess also have important parts.

"Play Girl" is the story of a modern business girl, whose longing for a home and children, for the financial security and inherited fear of motherhood, are all cast to the four winds when she meets the young scapegrace, Wallis. Unknown to him, she manages his luck by chance or chance.

Their honeymoon almost ends in tragedy when Buster discovers his wife's secret. Subsequent trials in the form of heart-rending ups and downs, and in a thrilling climax as Buster, expecting Shadrach, replaces her last cent on a horse named "Baby Mine."

Another romance, threading its way hilariously through the problems of the young lovers, is that of Peggy Bland, Georgina's clerk in a department store, and Pinkerwald, portrayed by Winnie Lightner and Guy Kibbee, respectively.

Many of the scenes of "Play Girl" are laid in the hustle and bustle of a big department store, providing a panorama of life such as seen in a grand hotel or a union depot.

Maurine Watkins, author of "Chicago" and other stage hits, wrote the original story which was adapted and dialogued for the screen by Maude Fulton. Ray Enright, director of many screen successes, has brought "Play Girl" to the screen with imagination and originality. Gregg Toland, cameraman for the pictorial clarity of "Palmy Days" and "Tonight or Never," handled the photography.

OBLIGING CROWS

Emporia, Kan., May 17—With two crow eggs in a pocket, E. E. Neal, farmer, told the County Clerk's office. It was a very warm day, "The crows will be pretty," Clerk, "but we don't pay bounty on crows' eggs—just on crow heads." "Well, you can have the eggs anyway," Peet responded, and put a hand in his pocket. A pile of admonishment crossed his face. He collected two cents bounty—ten cents on each crow.

The "corrado centre" of the United States is almost at the geographical centre.

Considerable Activity is Noted at Popular Watering Place

Yearly the popularity of Oak Lake is fast increasing as to the possibilities of a summer resort. The latest improvement to be noted on the shores of Oak Lake is the remodelling of the Oak Lake Pavilion by Mrs. Pearce, its genial owner. The floor space is being extended until it will boast of one of the finest dance floors in this part of the province. A special screened in promenade will be built around the two sides of the building thus affording the dancers a large space for lounging purposes.

The newly reorganized Commodores with Charlie Allan, who has considerable experience in orchestra work in the United States, have been engaged to supply the music of the season and the new band will have a seven piece orchestra, for dancing each night. Besides the new dancing pavilion to be opened in the near future new cottages are being erected all around the lake and the present cottages some of which have been there for a number of years, are undergoing their annual spring cleaning just at this time.

EXPRESS FEAR ROBOT FOOD

Proprietors Says Food "Never More Perfectly Prepared"

Cape Town, South Africa, May 17 (CP)—A member of restaurant has been expressing his fears of mechanized or robot food. "The art of roasting meat is very nearly lost—the oven runs it automatically. Even the clever personal touches of one's club or favorite restaurant chef are dying out—the individual receipes, little finishing flourishes that make the article memorable and different.

"To the layman the food sent out in public restaurants seems to come from a robot kitchen where the hand of the chef stirs not but leaves the job of cooking to pots that whistle when their contents are boiled; to stoves that automatically switch themselves off when the pie is done and to patent inspection rules that reduce the artist's job meticulously but soullessly. Fine for the cook, but bad for the food.

But the restaurant-proprietor exserts have a different tale to tell. "Never more perfectly prepared and cooked" is today's slogan. Ingredients scientifically and cooked to the exact second. Even modern electric grills are devised to retain the maximum amount of juice and the article cooked so that people today are eating far more nourishing food than in the "old-fashioned" days when valuable juices and vitamins were wasted by the methods of cooking that then prevailed.

"Food has come to be an interesting or varied as presented today in restaurants," he declared, "and not eating the same kind of meals they did 15 or 20 years ago. The 'snack' habit is the result of the static influencing the style of food prepared in the modern restaurant. It is becoming the aim of restaurants to provide food that are scientifically different from those obtained in the home."

Action Deferred Over Curtis' Faked Stories Movements Checked

Keen Thinking of Lindbergh Plays Part in Confession

SEQUEL GIVEN

Local Investigation is Suspended By N. J. Authorities

New York, May 18.

Dr. John F. Condon mediator who paid $50,000 ransom to supposed kidnappers of the Lindbergh baby, planned to remain at his Bronx home today.

Dr. Condon stepped through his front door to get his mail this morning and exchanged greetings with two detectives stationed in front of his home. He said he had had a strenuous time, needed a rest and expected to remain at home during the day.

Defer Action Over Curtis

Hopewell, N.J., May 18.—Action against John Hughes Curtis, New York ship builder who confessed to perpetrating a cruel hoax on the parents of the murdered Lindbergh baby, was deferred today pending the results of continuing examination.

In his mid morning bulletin today Col. Schwarzkopf, Superintendent of State Police, said that questioning of Curtis who faked a story of negotiations with the baby's kidnappers, continued during the night and was to be continued today. No particular developments could be reported to the questioning.

Curtis' Movements

Norfolk, Va., May 18—It was learned from an authoritative source today that Norfolk police have been checking the whereabouts of John Hughes Curtis on the night of March 1, when the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped and that his whereabouts at that time has not been definitely established.

It was stated, that the information was brought to Washington by the general check up here on details relative to a statement by the New Jersey police regarding his investigations. All information obtained by the local officials, however, was forwarded to New Jersey authorities, and that the investigation has been suspended, it was stated.

Examine Safe.

Police today obtained mud scrapings from the automobile owned by Curtis to determine if possible whether any of the soil can be identified as New Jersey soil. Results, however, had not been made.

The investigators here said Curtis was evidently describing his own car when he asked police to look out for a green sedan. A search here resulted in the finding of only one car of his description and this one, officers said, was his own, which they found parked at his his boat house.

Lindbergh's Keen Thinking

Hopewell, N.J., May 18—Friends disclosed today quick thinking by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was responsible in part at least for the confession of John Hughes Curtis of the hoax, which caused widespread search at sea for the kidnapped baby.

Informed last Thursday night aboard A. L. Fraser's amphibian Catchalot anchored at Cold Springs Harbor, New York, the baby had been founded dead, Lindbergh immediately began questioning his boat, remarking: "Come with me to Hopewell, Mr. Curtis."

An automobile left Cold Spring harbor at 9 p.m., arriving at Hopewell early Friday morning. Curtis was taken to police headquarters. There began the questioning and checking up of trips which ended in his confession.

Pre-Arranged Signal

First information that the baby had been found dead was transmitted to the Catchalot by radio, who had gone to Atlantic City Thursday, while Lindbergh remained ashore after a futile effort to meet the kidnapper's boat at a rendezvous set by Curtis on a dock at Cold Spring harbor with Lindbergh on board.

A prearranged signal from the dock to the schooner indicated that a message was waiting. A small boat from the schooner went to the dock.

"Is there anybody aboard that knows about Alec?" asked an attache of the dock. "There is a telephone call for him."

"Alec" and Curtis

The name "Alec" startled all on the small boat, for it was Lindbergh's alias. His real identity being known only to a few aboard.

It proved to be Curtis at the other end of the telephone. Curtis Atlantic City he had learned from newspaper reports of the announcement of the discovery of the body.

The party, who answered the telephone arranged with others in the small boat to write the message correctly and unsuspicious, Curtis and to spell words incorrectly if there should be doubt as to the nature of the telephone call. The spelling was correct.

Serious Information

There was a wait on the dock for Curtis to come from Atlantic City and then a trip back to the Catchalot.

"We have important serious information, Alec," said one of the party.

"Let's have it quickly," answered the Colonel.

CAPTAIN SAYS HOAX CRUEL

McLain Does Not Mince Words About Curtis

Atlantic City, N.J., May 18—Captain Edward C. McLain, who piloted the yacht Cachalot in the rough Atlantic ocean to the rendezvous off the Lindbergh baby, did not mince words when he learned John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk shipbuilder, had confessed his part was all a hoax.

"A cruel, despicable piece of work," was the Maine skipper's comment.

He went on to tell of the final voyage—when Colonel Lindbergh stood on the Cachalot's deck and the finding of his son's body.

Forgets Precaution

"I had every confidence that when he left Atlantic City we really were going to meet the kidnappers," McLain said. "That confidence was caused by the fact that Lindbergh himself was aboard. His very manner seemed to create a feeling among us that we would get results. It was Lindbergh who stood atop the pilot house in a wet suit to attempt to view the vessel we went out to meet by flashing signals. It was a cruel piece of work to make him believe that the voyage would mean the return of his son. It was a cruel, despicable piece of work."

Tells Story to Belief

Captain McLain said he had been firm in his belief that the negotiations could not be carried out at sea.

"My mate and myself could handle the dory in such a sea," he declared, "and I was positive that who would actually make the contact. Even Col. Lindbergh felt sure that we would get back his baby that way. It was a cruel, despicable piece of work."

His Story Faked Too

New York, May 18—Frank Parsych who said yesterday that he was one of the kidnappers of the Lindbergh baby, confessed today that the story was false.

Parsych was arrested yesterday for wife desertion and volunteered the kidnap story.

He was examined for many hours during which time it developed that he had been drinking heavily and was a user of narcotics.

Today the Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney that his whole story of being connected with the kidnappers was a hoax.

Bigger and Better Ogopogo Giant Frog of 10 Foot Tall Haunts Land and Water

The Pas, Man., May 18—A giant frog-like creature with a tail 10 feet long, huge green eyes, green mottled body and webbed feet haunts the waters of the North country. Such is the word brought to Pine Bluffs by Indians and today a number of white hunters were on their way to lag Northern Saskatchewan's own edition of British Columbia's ogopogo. The beast has been seen on both land and in the water and Thomas Head, who was first skeptical now vouches for its existence.

Head himself disbelieved the story when it was brought into Pine Bluffs by other Indians, and considered it a tale originating in an overdose of "fire-water." A few days later he was travelling in the region supposed to be inhabited by the monster. A hideously overgrown frog broke through the surface of the water near Head's canoe. The Indian fell unwell for the second during which he gazed at the green eyes and slowly yawning maw of the weird ogopogo. Then he "scrammed."

He adjured the faithful to abstain during the eight days "at least from entertainments and amusements, even perfectly lawful," and urged such "those in easier circumstances" give to the poor "the proceeds of this retrenchment."

Farmer Forgets Dynamite Caps in His Pocket

Windsor, May 18—Glen McGill, who lives on a farm near Harrow, was the victim of a peculiar accident in a Harrow blacksmith shop.

He had a slow point that needed sharpening, and being handy with tools started to do the job himself. As he pressed the metal against the grinding wheel the heel of the casting was against his leg.

He found that he had 25 dynamite caps in his pocket, was unaware of the danger when they "set go" and caused behind injury to his leg. The sound of the explosion was heard for some distance.

He had planned to use the caps in breaking up stumps on his father's farm.

22 FIRES

By Canadian Press

Ore Forest fires are still fighting forest fires in various parts of New Brunswick. In Quebec Province 18 fires are burning, smouldering woods in old and new sections of the province, are being carefully watched to prevent further outbreaks.

All forest travel permits have been cancelled in New Brunswick and in Ontario in the southern province, where the situation is reported to be the most serious since 1923. Twenty-two fires were reported as in progress or just under control last night and the government fire-fighting forces were particularly active in the northern area of the province, O. L. Miller, the chief forester declared last night. It would be impossible to control some of the outbreaks if winds came up.

In Quebec the most serious fires still demanding attention are in the Lake St. John district, Temiscamingue and the Gatineaus, and near Metis in the lower St. Lawrence.

IS FORGOTTEN FOR MONTHS IN DEATH CELL

Confusion of Records Produce Strange Situation at Raleigh

MIND FALTERS

Oversight Prevents Records Going to Supreme Court

Raleigh, N.C., May 18— The strange case of a youth placed in the state's prison death row nearly eight months ago under sentence of electrocution and then forgotten, has been discovered here.

The youth is Willie Rector, who was convicted of the last October and since that time he has lived from day to day in the belief that any hour he might be led to the execution chamber a few feet from his cell.

A confusion of records produced the situation. Today it was revealed that notice of appeal in the youth's case had been given in Rector's behalf and due notice served upon prison officials. This notice stayed execution, but through an oversight the records in the case were not sent to the Supreme Court and the case was not docketed.

Rector, after more than seven months' uncertainty, prison officials said, had affected the mind of the prisoner.

HYDRO GOT VALUE

Magrath Tells of Relations With Aird Over Power Deal

Toronto, May 18 (By The Canadian Press) — The Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario had a moral obligation to pay John Aird Jr., for his services in negotiating the purchase of the Madawaska River power rights, declared C. A. Magrath, former Hydro Chairman, before the Royal Commission today.

Although there was no legal obligation, he said, Aird had assisted Hydro in making the purchase. He admitted the orders-in-council authorizing the payment of $50,000 to Aird had not been passed by the government until four months after Aird received the cheque.

Mr. Magrath concluded his evidence with regard to Madawaska today, but may be recalled when the commission continues its inquiry by the Hydro of the Dominion Power and Transmission Limited, Hamilton for $2,000,000.

No Legal Obligation

Was there any legal obligation on the Hydro to pay Aird a five cent piece?" asked C. Stuart, K.C., independent counsel after pointing out plans and specifications had been prepared by J. G. Kerry, consulting engineer to Aird's former partner, R. W. Millard.

"I would say off hand there was no legal obligation—but we were using Aird in pursuance of the policy."

Who Wants to Pay Bounty on Crows' Heads? Boy Asks Here

Two young crows lost their head yesterday, and one young farmer's boy spent the whole morning counting the feathers. Not only that, but a handful of money changed hands.

"Crow heads?" an audible chuckle over the line followed the answering query: "No, no crow heads today. Don't want 'em. Try another day," was the reply.

The second county official was located, and the query was put to him.

"Crow heads?" he was anxious to find out this business of crow heads.

"Crow heads! Never heard of them!", answered the second official, after he became reconciled to the idea that he wasn't being kidded. "Other places may be playing fifty cents or so for crow's heads, but this county has adopted a sort of live and let live policy as far as the crow is concerned.

All of which will be good news for the Hastings County crows.

The commission recommended to the League Council that a representative of the Liberian Kru coast to assist in pacifying the country and to bring about the return of 1200 tribesmen who have fled their homes.

The Liberian delegate declared the commission that his government had taken "necessary legislative action" against recruiting to maintain order and to protect lives and property.

GIANT TRUCK PASSES THROUGH

A giant truck loaded with tons of machinery, bound from Gananoque where it had been built for some time past engaged in quarry work in that vicinity, passed through the city this morning on its way to Toronto to be stored in the yards of the Rideau Construction Company, who own it. BOYS' CHOIR IS MAKING PROGRESS

Under the leadership of Harold Howard the Y's Men's juvenile singing class at the Y.M.C.A. is making rapid progress. Last night Bert Houston played the accompaniments. Two distinct quartettes were picked for the present and they were also instructed. Director Norman Thompson supplied the boys with sheet music and plenty of choir practice will be under. The boys are slowly learning to read music and are rapidly learning to control their voices. Director Thompson was more than pleased with the showing of the boys and stated last night, that the class would, by the end of the season, live up to the intentions of the Y's Men's Club to place the Belleville's Boys' Choir before the public some time this summer. All of the boys in the choir are of teen age and their voices are far beyond the conception of the public. They will some day be a credit to the city.

COLDER WEATHER RESTRICTS USE

It's an ill wind, or a cold breeze, or words to that effect that hasn't some advantages. In the case it is the waterworks department, which reaps the benefit. Since the cold weather wave invaded the district some days ago, and still gives promise of lasting on, the waterworks department have saved considerable on pumpage of water. Ordinarily outside taps and lawn sprinklers would have boosted the consumption of the water this time of year considerably, but with the change in the weather residents of the city are waiting for warmer weather to sprinkle the lawns and gardens.

MANY TURTLES SEEN IN LOCAL HARBOR

Scores of turtles have been observed on the logs and other wreckage in the harbor for the past few days sunning themselves. The creatures are quite tame and can be easily approached by the boatmen, who work around the harbor, but as they are valueless and unfit for food or other purposes, they are not molested. One young boy, who managed to capture one of them on the shores of the park, the other day, almost lost a finger when one of them, after being handled for some moments by the boy, managed to free itself from its captor, which was almost impossible to shake off. They are known as snapping turtles and are inclined to bite more often and harder than their cousin the common.

SEASON ACTIVITY ABOUT HARBOR

Considerable activity was noticed among the boatmen of the harbor today who have been outfitting and repairing their craft for the opening of the summer season. Several of the boats whose bottoms were leaky were sprung by the ice in the harbor during the winter, and after filling with water and sank when the thaw came, have been reclaimed from the bottom and put back into service again. One boats still remains in the water, but as the owners for the craft cannot be located little interest is being shown in the craft. The boats which had been beached along the harbor front last winter are now undergoing their annual cleaning, during which new paint figures quite prominently.

Responsibility of Making Life Choice Rests With Boys

Avoidance of "Fortune-Tellers and Palmists Urged

KNOWING JOB

"The fundamental principles underlying the choosing of a life work," was the subject on which Mr. W. B. Cook from the Industrial Council of the Y.M.C.A. of Toronto spoke to over twenty boys at the Y.M.C.A. last night.

The project of placing before local boys the choosing of a life vocation is being sponsored by the local Rotary Club, the Y.M.C.A. and assisted by all educational seats in the city of Belleville. The principles inculcated in the project are being fostered and presented by the business men and professional men while they also are delivering their talks to encourage to try and place local boys in positions that will be fitted for in future life.

Four Channels.

In opening his address Mr. Cook pointed out that there were four distinct channels along which the boy must analyze himself before he is even assured that he is fitted for the particular vocation or profession which he may choose. The first is "every boy must carry the responsibility of making his own particular choice." By this Mr. Cook pointed out that the boy must get all the competent counsel possible but the final responsibility would be theirs. Also he assumed that they avoid such fake counselors as fortune tellers who might lead them astray from their life calling. The second channel is to "know themselves" and in this there is divided into three separate parts namely, physical, so that the boy may know just what he can stand mental, so that he may know his own capacities, these may be had on from his personal knowledge of his records at school, and finally emotional, whereby the boy decides just what occupational surroundings he likes to work under, as some like working alone while others desire indoor work and so on.

Knowing Job.

The third channel is "know your job" and this may be summed up by reading or conversing with those who are actually doing the work in question.

Following the address Mr. Cook handed the interested boys a questionnaire which they were asked to fill out carefully and to have studied the paper quite extensively and took over the full issue of the week to do so. The questionnaire deals fully with the boys' likes and aspirations for the future. All boys present were quite enthusiastic as to the possibilities of the movement and more students are expected to be present at the next meeting set for Friday night at the Y.M. C.A. Rev. Father Neil Hall and A. J. Sherritt of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Cook assured the committee, after, the meeting, that the project had been an inspiration and that he would be back on Friday night to help in the counselling of vocations and professions. Mr. Cook was of the opinion, however, that there should be a continuous vocational counselling service throughout Ontario to help the boys analyze and determine their personal life work. All connected with the "find yourself" campaign for local boys were highly enthusiastic over the results of last night's meeting and the project will no doubt, be a benefit to the community as well as the boy himself.

Dr. Condon was continuing his search for a picture that resembled "John" or "Axel" or "John Axel" when he was found dead. Then all bills over Strayhorn cemetery wall in Jamaica, Long Island, the ranch of Charles A. Lindbergh, while Col. Lindbergh himself, were Under guidance of Detectives Michael J. Silverstein "Jafsie" as he signed his communications, Condon had led to payment of the futile ransom money in the first vicious circle. Then he was taken to the inner room at police headquarters to go through photographs of criminals.

Alleged Double Crossing

Mineola, N.Y., May 18—Inspector John A. Lyons of the Nassau County police said today that one hour before John Hughes Curtis of Boston made a smoke story about the Lindbergh kidnapping was a hoax was confronted in Bergwell with a Long Island bootlegger who charged him with having double crossed him in a deal involving a substantial sum of money.

Norfolk, Va., May 18—Chief of Police S. W. Ironmonger said today that Mrs. Betty Gow believes that John Hughes Curtis had made a complete confession regarding the fake flight relations in the Lindbergh case and that he has withheld "something important."

Withheld Something?

Chief Ironmonger would not give any indication of the nature of the information as he said he believed Curtis has withheld. The police official also refused to say whether he had learned that Curtis had associated working with him in the fake negotiations.

The same information he said had been learned here by Norfolk investigators, who have been working their cases until further developments or reports from the New York authorities.

Fear Result of Remorse

Hopewell, May 18—John Hughes Curtis, fake Lindbergh baby ransom negotiator, was identified by the police for fear his "remorse" might lead him to commit suicide, a high official revealed today.

Curtis' every movement is being watched, it was said.

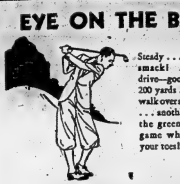
Hopewell, May 18—A report disseminated by a news service of the Associated Press; that Curtis had actually attempted to take his life, was officially denied at the state house.

Is Being Guarded

Major Charles Schoffell, assistant superintendent of state police, made the following statement through John Toney, secretary to Governor Moore.

"We had information from a confidential source in Norfolk that the man Curtis had become involved in financial difficulties and attempted suicide and after receiving that information, for his own protection we placed a guard over him twenty-four hours a day. Later the same attempted suicide nor has he had an opportunity to do so, having denied for questioning."

Mrs. Curtis, shortly after the announcement that her husband had confessed to fakes failed hopefully, stated that Mr. Curtis was at home on the night of March 1st.



Minister's Story

Dean Rundell today reiterated his opinion today that an attempt at extorting $50,000 through the Norfolk "intermediaries" revealed to him after he was mysteriously summoned to New York that Curtis was in contact with the activities of the Norfolk "negotiators."

The probe he said, was rejected after he and Curtis had conferred in New York and decided that they had better "clues."

The minister said he made a hurried trip by aeroplane to New York after he received a mysterious summons on the telephone. He said he feared that Curtis might be in danger or that he was involved. On arriving at the Park Central Hotel in New York a man serving as a guide arranged an interview with a second man who then made the hurried decision that Dr. Condon-Peacock said $500 down payment was asked, with the $50,000 ransom to be paid upon the delivery of the child. He said the identity of neither man was known to him.

Mystery Ships, Gang of Desperadoes Imagined by Norfolk Intermediary in Hope of Heavy Financial Returns

Offers of Films and News papers Led to Building Up of Colossal Veil of Lies Around Lindbergh Baby's Promised Return

ALLEGED HE COULD HAVE STOPPED HOAX

Curtis Writes Own Confession on Typewriter, Picturing Himself as a Central Figure and Hero

Hopewell, N.J., May 18.—John Hughes Curtis, bankrupt Norfolk boat-builder, yesterday confessed that he conceived and executed a vicious hoax in which the return of the Lindbergh baby, alive, was promised the child's despairing parents.

Spurred by the hope of heavy financial returns from news reels and newspapers, Curtis drew on a vivid imagination to enact the spectacular melodrama involving a mystery ship and a gang of brilliant desperados, with himself as the central figure—and hero.

His colossal web of lies broke yesterday beneath the hard hammering of the New Jersey officials, and last night he stood revealed as the most stupendous faker since Dr. Frederick Cook of unsavory North Pole fame.

From beginning to end, the creatures of whom he told so glibly, the gangsters with whom he conferred in his "dangerous dives," the seagoing "criminals" who signalled him by radio, the phantom ship that was supposed to have met the Lindbergh child aboard—all were figments of his brain.

Fabled Convincing Story.

Yet, so convincingly had he painted the atmosphere around these characters, that reputable citizens of Norfolk, a minister of the Episcopal Church, a retired rear admiral and scores of responsible business men had been convinced that he was telling the truth.

And towards the end of the "search" he staged deliberately over the coastal waters along the North Atlantic shores even the once-skeptical Col. Lindbergh and his advisers had come to accept the story as containing the elements of truth.

Today that pretence collapsed. Tangled his discrepancies in his story, directly questioned, Curtis broke away as merely "a part of the puzzle," he sat down at a typewriter and calmly gave the authorities the truth—the truth they had suspected but had been unable to prove.

Why did he perpetrate this hoax—the second one to subject the Lindberghs to exquisite hope and unutterable pain?

"A very lucrative offer was made for motion picture activity."

When Curtis informed police, on March 1, eight days after the kidnapping, that he had had a conference with the kidnappers of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., he had not expected his statement would explode into its sensational importance.

Then, when a host of newspapermen, camera men, magazine writers, film company representatives and others of the world of publicity descended upon him, and when his fellow townspeople turned to him as a public hero, his ego, his vanity, and his hope for material gain persuaded him to build the monstrous tissue of untruths in which he was finally trapped.

Confession Revealed.

The explosion of his pretences came this afternoon. The document was as dramatic as anything the lurid imagination had conceived himself. Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, in the deliberate words that are characteristic of his official bulletins, told of the confession.

"At four o'clock this morning," Schwartzkopf said, "John H. Curtis sat down to a typewriter and himself wrote a complete confession connecting his activities in this case.

"He stated that the boat and all the people to whom he had been referred were creations of his own mind and did not exist in fact.

"Shortly after the kidnapping Mr. Curtis told a story about having a conference with the kidnappers. A newspaper representative, according to Mr. Curtis' statement, made a very lucrative offer for his story to be given exclusively to that paper.

"Also, according to the Curtis statement, a very lucrative offer was made by another newspaper and film company for pictures concerning his activity.

"This altered Mr. Curtis on to greater activities. Mr. Curtis also said that Dean Peacock, the Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, of Christ Church, Norfolk, could have prevented his unfortunate part in this enormous deception.

"Admiral Burrage merely presented to Colonel Lindbergh the story as he had heard it. Mr. Curtis recommendations, but permitting it to stand on its merits.

Integrity Vouched For.

"Reputable citizens and officials frequently vouched to Colonel Lindbergh for the integrity of Mr. Curtis stating that his word could be relied upon. This made his deception so much easier. He had been a Norfolk shipbuilder, prominent in a community. Recently his business was reported not so profitable.

"The story of Mr. Curtis resulted in the very widespread activity of the coast guard and other Federal agencies in seeking the fictitious boat he has described.

"It has further resulted in many official airplane trips and auto trips as well as keeping Colonel Lindbergh away from his home and activities during the most important phases of this case, in pursuit of fictitious clues.

"Four days ago, when Mr. Curtis came to police headquarters, the police authorities at this point started questioning him and checking his story. The result of this check on his story and the questioning of Mr. Curtis was terminated at 4 o'clock this morning with his complete confession that all the information he had given was the result of his imagination and deception as well as his desire to make a good newspaper story, that would bring lucrative returns, and that there was no fact or foundation on which the story was built.

Schwartzkopf announced, at the time he issued his bulletin, that Curtis had not been placed under arrest.

Father Holds Hope.

The words "as well as keeping Col. Lindbergh away from his home," During the most tragic hours, these were full of tragic import. It was a pitiable, super-sophisticated circumstance that his father should have been on the high seas in a futile quest for his baby, when the child's battered body was found in the desolate hilltops four miles from the Lindbergh home.

And throughout the night of tragedy, when Anne Morrow Lindbergh, trying bravely to bear up under the fearful news, needed Col. Lindbergh most and was constantly frustrated by to get in touch with him, Lindbergh was pacing the deck of a yacht, far at sea, peering through the darkness in search of a phantom ship—a ship that existed only in Curtis' imagination.

The beginning of Curtis' wild melodrama was simple. He told officials that he had made a contact with certain characters—believed at that time to be associated with the men fleet that hovers off the Atlantic coast—and that these men had attempted to enter into negotiations with him. They wanted $50,000, he said.

Something about Curtis' story failed to ring true. But his record was that of a fairly substantial citizen of Norfolk, despite the fact that his financial affairs had not flourished in recent years. And then he insisted, as a "front" for his honor, the dean of Church Episcopal Church and a retired naval officer of unimpeachable integrity and character, to further his claims.

We are living in a new kind of world in which no one nation can long prosper or gain influence without the co-operation of its fellow-nations.—Nicholas Murray Butler.

Text of Confession

HOPEWELL, N.J., May 18.—The official text of the confession of John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk "intermediary" in the Lindbergh case, follows:

"Many of my own hand and own free will. Referring to the two statements made previously by me in regard to Lindbergh case. At the present time I am sane, but I honestly believe that for the last seven or eight months I have not been myself, due to financial troubles.

"I was apparently brought back to my senses by my telephone conversation with my wife this afternoon, when she told me of the trouble she was having, and how the children missed me; also by my conversation with Inspector Harry Walsh.

Statement Repeated.

"I desire to state that my remarks about the newspapers are true, and can be verified. This is in reference to my story about Mr. Hasbell and Mr. Wilson of the Herald Tribune, "Mr. Lee of the News and Mr. Twin and Poe offered me money for my knowledge of the Lindbergh case, or pictures of the baby.

"The matter was brought to my attention during a conversation, and due to what I now believe was a distorted mind by brooding over it, I became insane on the subject for the time being, which caused me to create the story in its entirety, which was untrue in every respect.

"I never knew such people that I named to Colonel Lindbergh. They were creations of a distorted mind, with the exception of Marie Truesdale, who had no connection with crime.

Expresses Regret.

"I also regret that I caused Colonel Lindbergh and others any trouble or embarrassment, but it is my power to correct my wrong.

"In justice to my wife and children, I trust that it is in the power of Colonel Lindbergh to forgive the inconvenience, worry and injustice I did him in his time of grief.

"This statement has been brought about by my realization of the wrong I have done.

"Submitted,

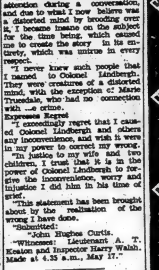
"John Hughes Curtis.

"Witnessed: Lieutenant A. T. Keaton and Inspector Harry Walsh. Made at 4.35 a.m., May 17."

DEAN INVITED TO EXPLAIN

Officials Would Like Statement—Curtis Shadowed

Trenton, N.J., May 18—It was announced last night that a request had been despatched from the Attorney General's office to Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian clergyman now at Penrhyll, N.J., asking if he would come here voluntarily for questioning on the Lindbergh case.



It also was ascertained that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh himself had not made known what his attitude would be toward the possible future charges against John Hughes Curtis, associated of Dean Dobson-Peacock.

A state trooper was directed to locate Curtis and not permit the Norfolk man to leave his sight at the Lindbergh home.

SELF ACCUSED MAN IS HELD IN BABY CASE

New Yorker Tells of Helping in Abduction of Child

CHECK DETAILS

States Five Others Participated in Crime—Asserts Child Dropped

New York, May 18 — Frank Parzych, aged 30, who told police here that he and five other men kidnapped the Lindbergh baby, was questioned for hours at police headquarters, and then taken by a corps of detectives to an undisclosed destination.

An effort was made to reach Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police, before Parzych was taken from police headquarters last night in a department car.

Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan and two detective captains rode in the same car as Parzych. Their machine was followed by another filled with detectives.

Police earlier said Parzych, who was arrested on a wife abandonment charge, admitted being a narcotic user, and that he had been drinking heavily. Although they said they doubted the truth of his story, they started an immediate investigation to check its details.

The prisoner was said to have come to Frank Smith, but later admitted he was Frank Parsch, with a wife and two children living in Brooklyn.

Volunteers' Story

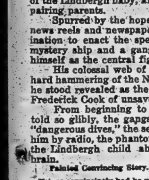
He told his story of participating in the crime voluntarily, Lieutenant Durkin, after his arrest on abandonment charges last night.

His story was said by Police Commissioner Mulrooney to be substantially as follows:

A few months ago, while he was working on a construction job, occupation he pursued for eight months, he and five other men plotted to kidnap the Lindbergh baby. When their craft put in to land, they went to a town in Long Island, where they made the ladder to reach the nursery window.

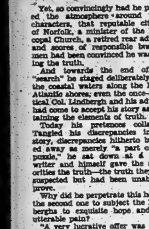
This was made in two parts and was of maple, Parzych believed. In a grey automobile he and his companions drove to Hopewell. Parzych waited in the automobile with one or two others, while the rest approached the Lindbergh house. One man climbed the ladder and stole the baby. Descending the ladder, he dropped and injured the child.

Declared Child Dead



The six men then drove away with the baby. They had only gone a few miles when one thought the baby's head was cold. Another said he could not feel a heartbeat. Still another said the baby was dead.

The infant was carried some distance in front of the roadside and hidden in underbrush after its clothing had been stripped off.



Parzych said he left his companions in New York, and has not seen them since. He said he knew nothing of the ransom note left in the nursery, or about any subsequent negotiations on the part of the kidnappers.

Parzych gave the names of the men he said were his companions. When shown a picture of one of them he identified it.

He said he had been using narcotics and drinking heavily the past few months.

BRUSH FIRES

The fire hazard seems always with us. Stories of conflagrations sweeping the brush and forests, some of them with fatal results have been pouring in to the newspapers.

Forest fires create a heavy loss and forests create a heavy crop, though themselves the raw material of wealth. Bush creates another hazard which must not be overlooked at this season of the year.

The value of the forestry organization is apparent from the reports which have been made from the central district office at Tweed, showing how over twenty fires which had been started in the district had been controlled through organized effort.

The system has been a very effective system of control and the result is that on a few minutes' notice help can be organized at diverse points many miles away to fight contemporaneous fires.

Such a system seems valuable when it is realized what a danger lies in woods and brush to destroy habitations of man and potential wealth and perhaps lives. Towns and villages in the forest areas are often in grave danger, which can only be removed by a lucky lull in the wind or rainfall with organization of firefighters.

ASSESSMENT QUESTION

On Monday evening next an important matter is to be determined by the city council, that is in regard to the deferring of assessment on new buildings till the second year later.

Many think that this would encourage builders and individuals to erect buildings and so in time make possible additional taxes from the increase in assessment.

This has been suggested that people make known their views to the members of the council and if they feel so inclined attend the meeting and express their views or opinion on this matter. Council would welcome a full expression of the people to aid them in reaching a decision on a question which appears many to be a forward step. Anything that will lend encouragement to building is needed for even work on a building has an influence on trade and better as it shows a hopefulness in the stability of the people. And if such a measure is satisfactory in these days it ought to work out after recovery sets in.

SENSATIONS

Sensations continue to come out of the Lindbergh case, which is bringing to light some of the evils of the conditions which obtain in the United States. First it was the kidnapping and now it is a man who arrives in the country and the world cannot be exaggerated, then the friction with the police, the attempted extortion from the alleged kidnappers for the return of the stolen child, which must have made people of the land of Longfellow, Lowell and Emerson blush at the depths to which paying of ransom then the news of mysterious meetings on land and on sea, sensational stories of these appearing in the press, the mysterious of the murder of the child with the finding of the battered body, and now the confession of one of the negotiators that he had faked the story of kidnapping to publicity purposes to sell his stories to newspapers, the accounts being pure figments of the imagination.

That is where the case stands at present, but more is certain to be revealed. So much that is unusual and unsatisfactory to American ideals must stop where the A New York paper is calling for a searching probe of the New Jersey police which listened to the claim of kidnapping on land and sea and did not, it is claimed, make an exhaustive search of the immediate neighborhood of the crime.

It was a sad condition which led Col. Lindbergh to feel that he could not place the case entirely in the hands of the police but had to call in and take the responsibility on his own behalf, having in his mind no doubt a feeling that the administration might not be able to do all that ought to have been able to do because of the background of the conditions which give a gangster so large a place. It was natural that Col. Lindbergh should do all that he could personally to aid in the search but the very history of crime in the States and the failure of the police to run down a great percentage of criminals must have influenced him in the efforts he took to find the child and have effected the whole course of the search.

This is the enlightened twentieth century in which the President of France and the Premier of Japan were slain within a week. The murders were political — how far has politics advanced yet? Is this the modern idea or is it merely the recrudescence of an ancient idea?

An Englishman, on his first visit to America, arrived at a small town and said to the first man he met:

"Do I have to see a doctor before I get a drink here?".

"No, not till afterwards," answered the man.

By Aline Michaelis

Because you love me well you offer me
Such gifts as love has brought through ages long
To the beloved—at bit of lazuli,
A moon-white rosebud and a tender song.
Because you love me well, sometimes you say:
"Tell me, my own, what most your heart
desires:
A garden-plot, with birds and roses gay;
A glowing ruby, lit with ruddy fires?"

Because I love you well (how well God knows!)
I name the boon which I would have you bring,
A gift more lovely than the moon-white rose,
More precious than the jewels of a king;
Though years will steal our beauty, ardor,
youth,
Give us always the priceless gift of truth!

BELLEVILLE IN WAR TIME with khaki, khaki everywhere, young citizens being made into soldiers, almost while you wait, drilling and exercising, lists keeping the spectre of fear ever present—all the mad, sad whirl of a world dominated by the great god Mars—now an ever-dimming memory—will be recalled on Victoria Day, May 24, at ten in the morning when the soldiers monument, made possible by the efforts and generosity of Ex-Mayor Robert J. Graham, will be unveiled on Memorial Park, Station Street. The monument will contain many names, fitting tribute in addition to the part of war in human lives, fine young citizens who made the supreme sacrifice that democracy should live and that a self-crowned monarch should not achieve the ambition of Napoleon to be ruler of the whole world. Due military honors will be accorded the young soldiers by those life and death in the service of their country will be commemorated by the shaft to be unveiled on the morning of the day set aside as a national memorial for the great Queen of the mighty nation upon which the sun never sets.

THE SEDATE and unhysterical New York Times gave almost its entire front page to the story of the entire space in page two and three to the finding of the Lindbergh baby body. Some Canadian newspapers went loco, also the Hearst chain, without much excuse for the Lindbergh story which has been a great circulation fattener for the Yankee yellow papers and that is excuse enough for almost anything of them. Canada's newspapers, with few exceptions, left out the story of the aviator who had flown the Atlantic, was feted down near the coast of Ireland and was picked up by Captain Freed, of the Steamship Roosevelt, Cap. Freed being the hero of several sensational head-scares on newspapers using the story of the flight gave it scant attention and if on the Front Page at all, a position at the bottom of the page, under screaming headlines told the story over and over again of the Lindbergh kidnapping, and the gruesome sequel. Again it seems apt to refer modern newspaper men to the order of creation, the greatest story ever told, and in the fewest words.

FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH was not marked by any particular bad luck for Belleville, although it was received with a thus far, and down New York way it was a particularly lucky day for a whole lot of poor people, because the ship reporters, renowned for their generosity, turned a bigger trick than usual when they clubbed together and purchased 30,000 pounds of fresh fish seized on the schooner Caspian when she was picked up by the Coast Guard with 1,000 cases of liquor aboard. The fish were given to the poor through the Salvation Army, a call being sent out through the press to come and get the fish at the Barge Office at the Battery any time after 9 a.m. Battery Park never held a bigger crowd except when Jennie Lind, the Swedish Nightingale, under the management of Phineas Taylor Barnum, landed there a good many years ago.

Other Papers' Opinions

SPENDING BY CHILDREN

In the May issue of Child Study there are a number of helpful suggestions for teaching children how to save and how to spend. Mr. Louis Dublin, statistician for the last census, or at least thinks that saving and spending habits are not incorporated to earnings, are more important for the child to learn. Mrs. Rosenberg thinks that a child should be given spending money as soon as he can be taught to make "instructive mistakes." He learns to choose among various things that he wants, to save for a toy that costs more than one week's allowance. Other writers urge taking the children into the confidence of their elders as soon as they are able to understand and to help in planning family expenditures.

An interesting experiment in co-operation between school and parents is recorded by Miss Greer. The faculty has sought with a school bank, with pupil-marketing, for school needs, with advice of action made by the children, and in other ways to teach them how to earn, spend and save. A better method than tried a year or so ago. It was decided to make a separate building for the children's school and for the budget showed the children how the tuition paid by their parents was spent, and how much was available for the new building. All their figuring out of the amount of estimated expense to that amount, until one day they brought to the pupils do the work. It may seem incredible that children of 15 or 16 or 18 could make the plans and blue prints, purchase materials, make out the bills, but the model block foundation and actually erect building with the fireplace in one place, but these boys and girls did it. They had the supervision of a shop director who knew his business, but the boys planned the how to make suggestions and when to keep hands off. Much interesting work was done in the major project, and these children not only learned how to save and buy in building material but the value of the labor of others or mason's labor.—New York Times.

FOR THE WELL DRESSED MAN

While lacking the exquisite simplicity and the severity of line shown by the costume which the Doukhobors of British Columbia are endeavoring to popularize as their spring styles for men, as projected by the men's dress parade in the park of Great Britain, mark a distinct advance in the right direction over the kind from the tyranny of coats and trousers, not to mention vests.

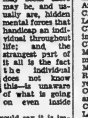
The men's dress reform party, which incidentally is composed entirely of women, has been working zealously for two years on the problem of styles in men's costuming which will make the mere male an object upon which the feminine eye may rest with less visual discomfort than at present. The problem was a difficult one, inviting the attention of many tans, but at last it has been solved, and the style is now ready for sale as soon to be let loose upon a startled world.

According to those who have rem models of the new design in men's suits, it will cause the wearer to look like a cross between a Macedonian highland and a Russian Doukhobor and Greek peasant. That in itself is no objection, since the Macedonian Albanian Highlanders and Greek peasants are always regarded as handsome specimens of manhood. Another advantage of styles is that makes it difficult for the wearer to tell the male conservatism of men in regard to their wearing apparel.

And yet the design is one which will appeal to the romantic and artistic instincts of men the world over. Falling loosely from the shoulders, a tunic reaches to the knees, is belted and is belted loosely at the waist, if any. It has a low cut collar, open opening at the neck, and the elbow-length sleeves are open at the underside. There is no apparent reason for these slits, except that they help to give the wearer the sensation of care feeling which the well-dressed man always wants to feel.

Shorts cut with an uneven edge, fitting and comfortable, make a belooped tops, will also be worn. These are shorts which are become frayed around the cuffs during the process and so would doubtless serve admirably if belted. Such a belt, however, is no mention of galluses in connection with the shorts.

Collars are banned. Neck-bands are banned. No fastening studs will be used. Ties are optional. Businessmen may wear on top of their shorts the jacket-like garment which is a means of symbolizing that business has gone to blazes, but as a rule there are no hard and fast rules. That is left to the taste of the individual wearer, who, however, is expected to go and take a good look at a rainbow before assembling this ensemble. The whole idea of the new costume is to brighten the drab spots in universe, and if the hopes of the designers are fulfilled the sun-tan pills become popular nobody could doubt that the world, especially when in spring or summer, "spring fancy" will take on a gorgeousness which even modern neckties have so far failed to impart.—London Advertiser.



Motion pictures stand today on a higher average level than current books and periodicals. Albert Shaw.

HANDICAPPED BY UNKNOWN FORCE WITHIN

Devastation Caused By Unconscious Mental Influences

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Strange as it may seem there may be, and usually are, hidden mental forces that handicap an individual throughout life. The strongest part of it all is the fact that the individual does not know that he has unaware of what is going on even inside himself.

Off hand one would say it is impossible that this should be, and should be trying to destroy themselves, or hold themselves back in development, and in the main this is true. Nature is, after all, optimistic, so to speak. It keeps on struggling to get ahead, to develop in the inherent capacities to the highest possible degree.

Yet one such character is so complicated that it stands to reason that conflicting forces are always going along as expected.

Here I wish especially to point out the devastating effects of what psychologists recognize as unconscious mental influences. It is agreed that the mind is a most powerful directing organ. When it is functioning at its best it not only keeps the individual adjusted to his environment, but it also helps him to regulate the vital organs and assists in the proper processes of their functioning. That is in them. Contrarywise, when the mind is not working as well as it should, it can even create functional disorders in the heart, the digestive tract and other organs—symptoms that are practically the same as those which are caused by or by tissue changes in the organ themselves.

As an example of what I mean in relation to unconscious handicapping forces is the one that goes to the general name of inferiority. Such a person may be quite good in life or does not achieve the success that his ability and talents deserve, simply because, hidden away in the deeper recesses of the subconscious, there is a small but effective voice, which keeps on whispering "You can't do it."

Yet such a person may be equipped for the very highest kind of achievement. He may have plenty of intelligence, as well as ambition, perseverance and the will to do; but always this voice of negation—this restrictive force—asks him to hesitate and become timid. And almost in that way and unknown succeed completely in its undermining work. Then out the person's life comes victory, and keeps its victim continually wearing the worried look.

Fear is another of these unconscious motivating factors of a tearful nature. Many of the conditions that may not be afraid while unconsciously they are. They are so right; you feel the force and influence of them, though yet for some reason or other you hesitate, vacillate and finally do nothing.

Fear and shame are two other unconscious forces that handicap. Both are devastating and both are uneasy. Sometimes there is a sense of fear, sometimes of shame, that accuse yourself for this or that although another part of your mind tells you how absurd it is. Sometimes it is on your part to go on.

Then there is the sense of unworthiness that often assail us, sometimes unconsciously, that no good reason at all, really, you feel that you are not as good as the other fellow, and so hesitate about with making comparisons until you have lost the best opportunities and long lonely part of the world and your fellow human beings.

Lastly, self-punishment; eyes subconsciously turned inward, as an unconscious self-punishment in disguise. In this case often you set forth a task that are really quite impossible of accomplishment, or you deny yourself even a vacation or pleasure because you wish—you don't know why—to inflict pain on yourself.

Watch these unconscious influences and recognize them for what they are. For the best of it is that as soon as you recognize them they disappear as if by magic.

TARANTULA—

Into the office yesterday came Tarantula, carrying a bottle, looking bug in a bottle. "Banana skeeters are back," he said, and proceeded to tell them when they got on the back of one's neck. Then the shipments of bananas which are shipped up from the south, and how of them step warily when they get a whiff of the warm, moist cold weather yesterday had made them quite active. However it was easy to scoop him up and put him in the bottle. Tarantula has a warm day there would have been a lot more skeeters around, but he got a start. Frank claims that the skeeter is the forerunner of lightning. This one was the last, and was about as large as a mosquito but had a fully four inches body. Some spread a number of dark spots on the body, which ended with a fine bristle like the hairs on a fine tooth comb.

For centuries this bug has been the principal pest in the tropics of the country of its origin. Its bite is not fatal, but is considered but we in this age know better. Tarantula is a bug of high order, such a hold on the imagination that it has given rise to a dance of the same from the bug. Tarantism or Tarantella was a nervous orgiastic dancing mania which spread through Italy in the latter part of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It was supposed originated with a great dread of the bite of the Lycosa Tarantula, which though sufficient to pierce the skin, was not fatal, but caused a crying rise to the hysteria and dancing mania. Tarantism is of this day and age known as chorea, or St. Vitus' dance, which can cause considerable suffering, but is not fatal. BENEFICIAL ADVERTISING—

There is a sporting goods dealer in town who has happened on a plan which is by far the best method of advertising his product that the tip should be passed on to other towns for the benefit of the dealers there. It is one way of advertising which draws the attention of the people in no uncertain manner and also provides some useful means of saving labor, life which is so badly needed these days. Possibly you have noticed as you travelled along the country, several bird houses all tastefully painted and standing on top of tall poles set in the ground. They are of various designs, some with peaks, others sporting cones and odd a dodo. There is even the boys' club house. They have been placed. More than that, they have been placed in the path of the flight of the shipments of bananas which are brought up from the south, and how of them step warily when they get a whiff of the warm, moist cold weather yesterday had made them quite active. POLICE PROBLEMS—

Over the intersection of Coleman street, a few days ago some one placed a sign which conducted to the police about the popping of motorcycles, and the noise of them on evenings for some time. A policeman investigated the matter and found out the lay and outs of the thing. It seems the boys have a regular little club house around the corner on Coleman street where the city converges there in the evenings and they have a workshop, chain drives, belts, magnetos and other things else, which pertains to motorcycle. Some of them are pretty handy at the game and can make one or two good cycles out of the parts which have been picked up around the town. One boy in particular, an only child, managed to put one together which he could ride, and which he had finished by the shop with the help of the other boys. Of course they will have to get rid of their machines before the police will stop their activities, and as long as they are in their present location they have no alternative other than to put a stop to it.

RED SQUIRREL AND BIRD'S EGGS

Perky and companionable as he may seem on spring days there is no enemy of bird eggs and nestlings leaping from branch to branch in search of prey than the handsome, shoe-button eyed- see all things. Seldom is he still, and when he is at rest his bushy tail is jumping in nervous twitching.

This little enemy to birds of all sorts is the red squirrel, according to bird lovers in the district. They claim he is a real menace. Only lean, stray cats can compare with him in damage done to nestlings and baby birds in the nest. Birds are aware of his activities and fight furiously with the lanky tailed thief when he appears on the scene.

YANK'S RECORD BLASTED BY A CIRCUIT CLOUT

Earl Averill Hits Homer in First Innings Off Allen

MARTIN BACK

Teams Are Now Beginning to Level and Good Games Result

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Gone their hopes of creating a new all-time record for holding the opposition scoreless, the Yankees were free today to devote their energies to winning the American League pennant.

And if ever a ball club looked like a champion in May, it is Joe McCarthy's big aggregation that piled through over a stretch of eight straight victories last week, well nigh perfect, their hitting timely and their fielding almost errorless.

What makes the New Yorkers' streak even more impressive is the fact that their closest rivals, the Washington Senators, have had hard sledding against the western clubs and dropped three straight in St. Louis. Yesterday's 3 to 2 triumph over Detroit, while the Senators were losing to the Browns 11 to 2, put the McCarthy men a half game in front of the field.

As for that record the Yankees shook, it practically exploded in their hands. When Johnny Allen, who started the run of four scoreless performances, faced the Indians yesterday he compiled only one scoreless chapter to tie the 39 year old mark of 41 in a row. He got by that first inning on two pitches him but the third, Earl Averill, batted a home run right into the bleachers. An alert fan put the ball in his hip pocket and a pitching epic had come to an end.

It was a great one, too. Mel Harder, Indian right hander. He granted the Yankees only four hits but Ben Chapman's home run in the fourth with Gehrig on base tripped him up. Some gratifying relief by Tony Lazzeri pulled Allen out of the hole in the late innings.

A's Shutout Tigers

The Philadelphia Athletics bunched three singles with a wild throw in the seventh inning to score two runs and hit the Detroit Tigers 2 to 0. George Earnshaw allowed only four hits. The Chicago White Sox made it three straight over the luckless Boston. New York gave Lefty Grove a tough battle for a 3 to 2 in., when Walker cut loose a wild throw past first on Manion's bunt in the 10th and Chapman scored from third base. Bill Terry's eighth inning single with Critz gave the Giants their only run off Ray Kolp.

Pittsburgh made it two out of three over the Cubs, 3 to 2, as Bill Harris pitched scoreless ball for the first seven innings. The Pirates bunched their hits in the fifth off Phelps in the third and fourth frames.

Philadelphia's Phillies blew sky high in the seventh inning when Chicago scored eight runs in a body to win 9 to 4. Six Cub three hits and three Philly errors contributed to the Cubs' large inning.

Pepper Martin returned to the Cardinal's lineup after being out several weeks with a dislocated shoulder and drove in two runs with a double as Bill Hallahan bested Lefty Brandt in a hurling duel, 4 to 3. Hallahan struck out ten and contributed a triple on the Cards' attack. Red Worthington drove in all the loser's runs with a home run and a single.

SUPREME ON LAND, WATER AND IN THE AIR

The mechanical genius of Great Britain is apparently without equal in the air. Flight-Lieutenant G. H. Stainforth of the British Royal Air Force has attained a speed of 283.67 miles an hour in winning the Schneider cup for his country, in the famous "S-1596". Kaye Don in New England II set a record for speed boats that has been heavily challenged, in his super racing car, gained the world's speed record in almost unassailable time. The Schneider Cup, having been won for the third consecutive time by Great Britain in competition with the world, has now been withdrawn. The withdrawal was due to the failure of Italy, France and the United States to send entries. Great Britain broke all existing records twice, and with two different pilots, at Calshot last September. Flight-Lieutenant J. N. Boothman, two hours before Stainforth reached a speed of over 338 miles per hour, crossed the pilots to a new mark, exceeding the ten world record by 11.45 m.p.h. It was at first thought that had to be revised when the motion pictures Stainforth's fastest plane, the "S-1596" at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, this year. If the speed boat Miss England III, comes up to expectations, Lord Wakefield will send her to the British exhibition accompanied by Kaye Don, the popular hero of the Harmsworth Cup races at Detroit last year. These triumphs of British engineering in the air, on the water and on land demonstrate the complete supremacy of the Old Country in every field of endeavor.

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

The C.O.B.L. pot is beginning to boil as the approaching of the current baseball season draws near. We are told in some quarters to hit the loop, is a dispatch from Oshawa stating that "Al" Tyson is slated to coach the Cobourg seniors this summer. It looks as though "Al" is returning to his first love, Cobourg, as he first started in the senior baseball scene ten years ago when he migrated to Cobourg from Hamilton with the "Goodhand." Tyson's experience should add considerably to the prestige of the Cobourg entry as he was always a live element of the game and has a world of experience.

The Kingston Frontenacs ran into a snag last Saturday when the Kingston Y.M.C.A. allowed 7 runs across the plate in the fourth inning to help even matters up with the game by the score of 11 to 11. The Frontenac batting staff of Jamieson, Smith and Hicks did not help so but while Hicks fanned 10 and Mickey Compeau was forced to retire in the fourth innings due to arm ailments. Seven years is a long time to be kept out of baseball, of which Compeau found out on Saturday. Hardly enough to stage a comeback in one day.

Another surprising note of Saturday's game in Kingston was the fact that "Flay" Wiggs late of Peterboro, was pressed into service as a catcher. Wiggs tried his hand at the receiving racket many long years ago in Peterboro but was found wanting; now in Kingston may-be he will think they have a "find" in "Slap." The Kingston press seems to be the first to state a comment that due to some years absence from the diamond Compeau's eyesight is not what it used to be. Well that's no good as allhi as any.

Here reports were received in the camp of the Nationals yesterday when it was learned that Larry Gilbert had been removed to Brighton by the C.O.B. Victor Hugo has been quite pitching and outfield duty for the Nats for the past two seasons and due to the fact that he was moved to Brighton by his employers, and will no doubt get a player's certificate to play for the Nats this season. Before the spring training season opened the outlook for the local Nats was anything but bright but with the clever the season draws the better the Nats look, on paper.

The finance committee of the Nationals met last night and announced that they had made $1850 for the club from the receipts of the Empire Day last Friday. The committee was indebted to all citizens and businessmen who made the evening the success it enjoyed. The finance committee is now settling on their season ticket project. The reports is that they have the effect that they are receiving the whole-hearted support of the citizens in their endeavours. They also say that they want the cry of "Play-ball" was heard at the local park on May 24th there would be a big concert turn out of fans in years in Belleville.

More surprises greeted Manager Gerow, as he watched his work out with two more high class infield aspirants turned in. Art Eckel, late of Peterboro and Ken Chambers, of hockey fame, also from Peterboro and Trent, made the rallbirds sit up and take notice. Both Eckel and Chambers handles himself to a very good advantage around the keystone sack and will be given a thorough tryout by the Nationals.

These acquisitions give the Nats two infielders capable of at least each infield position, while there is still a big gap to be filled caverting about in the infield that have not even had their "once over". Tommy Fokter and Casey assumed the mound for the first two days and everday and threw them up for batting practise. Both lads are fast rounding into condition and will be ready for the call on May 24th. All of the other infielders including Darrah, Cretney, Flagler, Eibler, Morgan and Fiv were on the job while Shiner Johnston did not get in from Stirling last night but will be on the job tonight.

Both Manager Gerow and Captain Wally Wood were last night evening casting an eye over the "new boys" especially while they were at bat. No outfielder is yet assured of a position and as a matter of fact there is only about one position on the team that is an assurity, as yet. You guessed it," Penney Mills.

A delegation of boxing and wrestling enthusiasts from Kingston, were in Belleville last evening trying to find out exactly how many local fighters and wrestlers were going to Kingston for the Eastern Ontario championships. Any local boxer or wrestler wishing to enter these bouts can procure an entry blank from Jack Seamain. The bouts are to be staged in Kingston on May 30th.

REDWINGS ARE CLICKING AND ARE BAD NEWS

Southworth Has Team in Second Place and Going Strong

LEAFS LOSE

Guy Cantrell Contributes to Own Defeat By Wildness

(By the Associated Press)

Billy Southworth finally has his Rochester Red Wings clicking and that constituted bad news for the other seven clubs in the International league.

Champions of the circuit for the last four years, the Red Wings today had won seven of their last nine games and had moved into second place in the standing although their margin over the Buffalo Bisons and the Montreal Royals with whom they were virtually tied in games won and lost, was based solely on a few percentage points. Rochester's percentage was .581; Buffalo's .566 and Montreal's .561. Newark still was in first place, two and a half games ahead or all three.

Southworth has been getting excellent pitching of late, especially from Dr. Weiland, Bud Teachout, Biff Wysong, Al Eckert and Ira Smith. The chief batting punch has been furnished by the sensational outfielder, George Puccinelli, who has hit safely in every game the Red Wings have played this year.

Collected 6 Hits

Puccinelli collected six hits in seven times at bat yesterday as Rochester beat Reading in both ends of a double header, 10-3 and 11-3. He batted in outfielding string he clouted his 11th and 12th home runs, a triple and three singles, scored in seven runs. Wysong and Teachout gave the Keys eight hits in each game.

Newark turned back Montreal 5 to 4, Ripple driving home the game serving only to make the score closer. Ripple singled in four hits apiece of the 14 Montreal collected off Bob Nekola and Byron Speece. Single and triple were Waddell.

The Baltimore Orioles bunched hits for seven runs in the fifth and sixth innings to defeat Toronto 7 to 2. Guy Cantrell's wildness contributed to his defeat. His gave six passes and allowed eight hits in the six frames he worked.

Ben Brown, sormented his old team-mates with a home run, double and single to account for three hits and beat Buffalo 9 to 4. Brown scored three times and batted in two other tallies during the afternoon. The Bisons made 12 hits off Hubbell but Ogden was strong in the pinches.

KING'S PLATE AN OPEN RACE

Likely 18 Will Face Barrier on Saturday Afternoon

Toronto, May 18—(By The Canadian Press)—Prime of Ontario horse flesh today was stabled at picturesque Woodbine Park waiting the start of the classic of Canadian turf features—The King's Plate.

Forty-five horses have been nominated for the historic event which will be run tomorrow afternoon at Woodbine Saturday afternoon. The big regard of the three-year-olds and up will be weeded out considerably, probably to a maximum of eighteen. No intimation has been made of what entries will be withdrawn but workouts to date indicate, that horses facing the barrier will be a classy field indeed. Jim and Chambers handles himself to a very good advantage around the keystone sack and will be given a thorough tryout by the Nationals.

Opening Ceremonies Will Be Brief and Locals Expect Win

Providing the weatherman smiles upon the Belleville baseball fans on May 24th, the local baseball fans will witness the 11th opening game of the O.B.A.A. to be staged in Belleville, in 1919 the old Grand Trunk opened the season in Bowmanville, while in 1927 the locals were not represented in the Central loop, with the exception of those two opening games, the "Nats" have represented the Ontario city every year since. Queer as it may seem, only two flags have been raised out of their opening games, as yet the Nationals have been with in an ace of calling off the game, but Saturday's opening night but before noon on the 24th of May, the sun has always smiled on the Nationals' opening game.

It is hoped, that the weatherman will again smile on the Nationals, when they open the current season on May 24th against the champion Kingston Ponies. The Belleville clan will be out to practise every night from now on in preparation for the battle and it is the opinion of Manager Gerow and Captain Penney" Mills, that they will once again be able to place a team on the field capable of upholding the honor and name of Belleville baseball, which is expected of Tommy Bolster, Belleville's youthful left-hander, this season and the manager's policy in strategy feel that their versatile fourth pitcher will be a big help to the league in games won. Manager Gerow is now in the ball park every day to practise last night and before the end of the week he will announce the proposed starting team for May 24th.

Special Opening Day ceremonies have been arranged for the day and Mayor Wallace, assisted by President E. Colling of the C.O.B.L., President A. B. Collins of the Nationals and Past President R. A. Elliott of the O.B.A.A. will be the "big guns" during the short opening ceremonies, which are being arranged. The diamond also is being groomed daily for the occasion and all that is now needed is the old ego cry of the umpires, "Play Ball", to assure the fans, that once again the baseball season is here.

A PLEA

I ampther be with her always; let her wear
This dear mood about her, let the harm men do
Be more than such a jewel-like breast can bear;
Laughter be with her all her sweet life through!
Read in her heart the lyrics sky-written
Keep her small feet in April's garden place,
Be gentle with her, Beauty, lest she go
Out from a world too sorely needing grace.
Give gayness to her hands; Spring silks, a gown
For every hour, should it please her heart;
Stockings and shawls as soft as thistledown.
Let rayness never from her hands depart.
And Spirit, God of Lovers far and wide,
Let her find all contentment at my side!

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Low Down on Dress-Painted Women

"Why don't you stop bawling out the girls who use too much paint?" asked the friendly critic. "Don't you know that some women like to look down right dowdy? They never use what they're doing. Sometimes they are most respectable female living their lives, no whoopee at all; sometimes they belong to-an entirely different set. The truth is that when they paint, the intention is to look painted."

"But, don't you see—"

"You have a handy way of intimating that they haven't any lights near their mirrors or that they dare not walk down the street on the Ohtnese red and the gaudy eye shadow, but you know better than that. Every woman I've ever met has a working acquaintance with the looking glass. She doesn't get a glimpse of herself on the run. A woman never looks more serious, more intent, never has a more searching look in her eye, than when she regards herself in the mirror. She takes no chances. The truth may be awful, but she wants to have it. No sense your bawling out the heavy-handed make-up artist.

"But let me explain—

"I saw a woman yesterday with carrot-colored hair, evidently dyed, with raspberry lips and orange cheeks and she wore a bright red hat. That combination wasn't an accident. It was intelligently put had every man on the street looking at her. Some wanted to kill her, no doubt, but she didn't know that. She got attention. That's what she was after.

"Oh, for goodness sake, shut up a minute."

"What makes me mad is that you are always finding excuses for them. They haven't found the right rouge, you say. Or they haven't been told how to apply make-up and charitably-inclined specialists will advise them. I'll warrant a dozen of those doll-babies try all kinds of war paint before they hit upon the one that makes them look the wildest, so's you can't tell them from the

Give a wreath to an evening frock and find new smartness. A frock done in violet-blue semi-crepe has a diagonally posed garland of field flowers across the high bodice twisted girdle.

A good couple is that of chiffon and fabric. A new evening frock is made of pink chiffon and has huge puffed sleeves and a draped girdle of taffeta with huge silver coin dots.

There is a short, sleeveless coatee of the silver dotted taffeta.

The Military Note is being stressed in many suits. A new model in beige tweed has a distinct military note with its red buttons with a rim of gilt and its shoulders corded in gold braid.

For you are a suit that consists of a jacket that is of different coloring that the skirt. Even you are in style this season. Much liked is the suit that has a jacket in black fitted and tailored, and a skirt in fine black and white check. The suit is worn with a white felt sailor and a black and white turban.

The landscape is dotted with polka dotted frocks. A new afternoon frock is of white triple sheer chiffon with embroidered polka dots in navy blue. The cape sleeves are of satin and the girdle is of blue and white crepe. It is worn with an organdie hat of white with navy dots.

Step easy in a pump, the always popular shoe, whatever the season. A smart model is developed in storm-fly brown kid and tortoise shell patent leather, with the vamp stitched in numberous rows.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Madame Fashion is no longer the iron-fisted old mistriarch, she's merely lenient nowadays. There's this matter of the length of the skirt. You make it pretty much what you please floor length, to ankle, to that potni midway between ankle and knee. Girls with pretty pins are still displaying them. We note that the Spring silliteur is short enough for comfortable movements of the legs when walking, and evening frocks need not be trailing draperies that make the tall girl look like a beanstalk. "Just suit yourself beautiful", says madame. "Adjust the style laws to suit your individual case." Gracious old thing, isn't she?

Make-up should be removed with a thin cold cream or a liquid cleanser; the skin prefers that process to the immediate application of soap and water. After the creaming plunge into the facial saddings, and after the rinsing and drying, put on some more cream. Complexions thrive when they are petted. Those dingy baking aidns one sees now and then are merely the victims of neglect. Soaping, friction, drying, creaming all contribute to the welfare of the complexion, freshening and beautifying it.

Want a Cupid's bow mouth? Too simple. Anoint the lips with a cream, place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb at one end, second finger at the other, keep that finger in the centre stationary and draw toward it the thumb and second finger. Makes a lovely pucker.

Prominent collar bones disappear, no matter how thin a girl may be, when the supplicant for a svelte shape learns to stand properly. Throw the hips backward, to lift the chest cavity, to let the arms fall naturally to hold the tummy in where it very well belongs.

Pepper-and-salt hair is the most difficult of all kinds to dye. Dark hair comes out one shade, white hairs a lighter one. The woman who fancies she must duck her head in the dye pot had better consult somebody who knows the whole works if she is to presto-change from white-and-black to solid color. She has to know the game in that particular case.

Correct Manners

A MATTER FOR CONCILIATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me whether it is good manners to repeatedly correct those about you in their speech? A member of my family keeps correcting my constantly. I thought it was ignorance to correct your betters. It causes much unhappiness among us.

This member of the family happens to be my older brother, who is twenty one. I am eighteen. I refer to our parents as the "elders." Our speech is not as all so awfully poor that he should do this.

Sisters

Few things can cause more unhappiness in the family circle than this constant "nagging" by some member of the family who sets himself or herself up as Perfection. It takes from the family that most live-able-with and healing of virtues.....Ye sanit-heed.

A warning about this: it should not be met with a similar nagging, but with quiet, unless masked terms. It should instead be dealt with in a conciliatory way, with a pleasant and friendly chat. Take your brother—Bide some day when he seems in a good mood for conciliation, and show him in the most gracious way possible that he is making the family unnecessarily unhappy, and suggest that he try silence and "human tolerance" for awhile. And what exquisiteness and tellacy this will take only a sister will realize!

ICE CREAM SERVICE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Will you be kind enough to "set me right" as to the correct silver to use when serving molded ice cream and small cakes (soft cakes) on the same plate, individually?

2.—As I have no ice cream forks, would it be correct to use salad forks? Assuming that I did have ice cream forks, would this fork be used for the cake and ice cream, or would I have to supply separate forks for the cake also?

3.—Is a spoon or fork used for a fruit cocktail?

P. P.

1.—Ideally, the correct service for this would be an ice cream fork and an ice cream spoon. For ideally a hostess places the double silver service for all kinds of desserts. Whether, as a matter of fact, the guest uses both or not.....the guest is given the choice of using both or either one.

For this service, often we see the small tea fork (and a very convenient altogether it is, too) and the tea spoon. This too is a most convenient service.

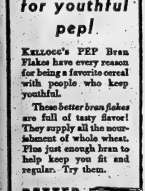
2.—If you haven't ice cream forks, or tea forks, I think that you might, as you suggest, place the salad fork for the cake and the tea spoon for the ice cream. Then you would still be offering the double service.

3.—It is best form to place a tea spoon for a fruit cocktail. We usually want to eat the delicious juice of the fruit cocktail.

WALKING ETIQUETTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—When a boy and girl are walking together on the street, should the girl take the boy's arm, or should the boy take the girl's arm, or should they walk independently?



2.—When they are crossing the street, should the boy take the girl's arm?

Jennie.

1.—They should walk independently.

2.—The boy places his hand under the girl's elbow to help her in crossing the street, or to help her in getting on a car, and so forth.

WALL STREET IS HESITANT

Temporary Gains in American Telephone and Other Stocks

New York, May 18—The stock market remained hesitant today, failing to venture far in either direction.

The list eased off in the early sittings, firmed up later in the week, and again showed easing tendencies in the early afternoon. Scattered selling continued in isolated issues. Traders looking for a reply on American Telephone's earnings of the regular dividend were disappointed.

Interest in the market around a mid appeared in such issues as Interstate Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Lambert, Pacific Americas, Tobacco and Eastman. U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric and Standard of N.J. were fairly steady. Goodrich, Lagget and Myers, Kennecott and International Harvester ran into some selling pressure a point or more. Case, Packard, one of the thinly traded higher priced issues, broke 1-2 to close at 82, then recovered partially.

Maintenance of American Telephone's dividend at the present rate is generally predicted burying the last day or two, although not long there was considerable talk here on of a possible reduction to 87 1-2 or 75 in the rate more in keeping in line with earnings. The mid-week statement was taken as a sign of encouragement, indicating a slight gain in aggregate in the outside.

PRICE ACTION IS CONFINED

Trading Light and Featureless, Portions of List in Discard

Toronto, May 18—Confined price action and comparatively little interest marked the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in the afternoon today. Trading was light and featureless, with a large portion of the list in the discard.

Following declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents and extras of 50 cents, payable June 15 to shareholders of record May 31, Lake Shore moved up to $27 for a 100 unit gain.

But only a few transactions sprang up in the issue.

Pioneer of B.C. recovered 3 to 2.10 and Ventures and Bidgood Kirkland were steady. Lake Shore Gold and Howey lost fractions. Siscoes moved ahead 1-2 point and extras of 50 cents, payable June 15 to shareholders of record May 31. Lake Shore moved up to $27 for a 100 unit gain.

But only a few transactions sprang up in the issue.

Pioneer of B.C. recovered 3 to 2.10 and Ventures and Bidgood Kirkland were steady. Lake Shore Gold and Howey lost fractions. Siscoes moved ahead 1-2 point and was off 35 to $14.65 when taken in hand. Siscoe was stationary at 31 Acme Gas, off a half to 9 1-2, showing the only change among the lower priced oils.

Market Gives No Indication of a Decided Turn

Toronto, May 18—Still indecisive in its movements, Toronto Stock Exchange market this morning gave no indication of a decided turn in sentiment. The list fluctuated idly in the wake of New York. The turnover the first hour was about the lowest of the current dull period, with only ten stocks out and scarcely more than 500 shares changing on the board.

The outstanding issue on the board was International Milling Preferred, which dropped from an opening price of 94 1-4 to 92 1-2 on a turnover of about 400 shares. Other stocks in the same grouping were inactive.

There were small losses shown by C.P.R., Brazilian, International Nickel, Smelters, Bell Telephone was firmer at 89 and Bank of Canada 1-4 higher at 7 3-4. Walkers, the food and chain store stocks were unchanged.

GREED, WAR

In the encyclical entitled "Charitas Christi" —Christ's charity — we find the Pontiff also dealing with "evils that are crushing humanity."

They are, he said, greed, the accumulation of the wealth of the world in the hands of a small group of individuals, exaggerated nationalism, unscrupulous trade, Communism and "the revolt of man against God."

From greed, he said, arises "the mutual distrust that casts a blight on all human dealings." He reiterated the words of St. Paul: "The desire of money is the root of all evil."

Turning the point of his criticism upon Communism and speculators, the Pontiff said: "Communism and the revolt of man against God."

Agreement With Ottawa to Help Relief B'll Expected Soon

SURVEY ORDERED

Settlers to Be Selected For Suitable Tracts Official States

Toronto, May 18—Settling of unemployed men or proper capabilities on suitable areas of crown lands in various parts of the province and putting them off with cash grants from direct relief funds probably will be embraced by early agreements between the Dominion and provincial authorities, implementing the Federal direct relief bill passed last week.

Negotiations with Federal authorities for the carrying out of this and the numerous other forms of direct relief outlined in the bill will be begun within the next few days, Premier Henry said last night.

Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, is understood to have been in Ottawa since the bill was passed, to obtain that a working arrangement with Federal authorities should be reached and especially in regard to the use of Crown lands for unemployed, was given by Mr. Finlayson following his return here yesterday.

As a precautionary and preparatory step in anticipation of the agreement, Crown land and timber agents throughout the province have been instructed to survey their territories, and list those areas that are unoccupied, at least partly improved, and suitable for cultivation or settlement.

Premier Henry said he had not yet been in touch with Ottawa about the relief land plan and other features of the relief bill, having only yesterday received the draft of the bill and the arrangements made by it. He expects, however, to be going to the capital within the next few days and does not anticipate it would take very long to come to a satisfactory agreement with the Dominion Government with a view to putting the bill's provisions into effect.

Implement Proposals

Under the terms of the bill, both provinces and municipalities will join with the Dominion in implementing its varied proposals, both for giving direct cash and other relief and for assisting unemployed by such means as the land settlement plan.

Until the survey launched by Mr. Finlayson's department is completed it will be difficult to say how many settlers can be absorbed on what Crown lands are available, but it is believed the plan will substantially relieve the situation.

"We are preparing a list of all suitable Crown lands available for unemployed with the proper qualifications and experience to settle on," it was explained last night by W. G. Cain, deputy Minister of Lands and Forests. "The province or department has not made any arrangement with the Dominion along this line yet, but if and when it does we will have all the necessary information available to facilitate consummation of the scheme.

"As I understand it the plan is part of the direct relief bill passed at Ottawa last week. In addition to selecting land that is unoccupied and partly improved, I understand there will be selection of men who are liable to be good settlers, and with strength and other qualifications assuring them of a reasonable degree of success at agriculture or related pursuits. I believe each man or family so settled will be assisted to get started with a cash payment from direct relief funds."

The success and scope of the scheme, he said, would depend largely upon how many tracts of land were found suitable for such use and the number of men needed likely to "make a go of it."

CASUALITY LIST STILL MOUNTING

Now Known Dead is 92 With 910 on Injured Roll

Boonbay, May 18.—(AP)—The list of casualties of the Hindu-Moslem riots, which entered their fifth day here today was increased to 92 dead and 910 injured, when four persons were killed and 68 injured as the rioting broke out afresh this morning.

The fighting had subsided overnight and the city was quiet until shortly after daybreak.

Throughout the night, with the new curfew ordinance in force, officers stood in the shadows throughout the troubled area watching the wrecked shops, the contents of many of which were strewn across the roadways.

The honey industry in Ontario is expected to be greatly stimulated by a new process for the treatment of honey, recently developed under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Henry or Hepburn is Choice Kennedy Advises West York

Choose Between Policies Not Merely Candidates Minister Urges

Toronto, May 18.—The election of West York on May 23 would help to choose between the policies of Premier Henry and the leadership of Liberal Leader Hepburn and not merely between the candidates of one party and that of another party at a different political faith, Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, told a gathering of West York Conservatives in the community hall last night.

"You have to decide between Mr. Henry and Mr. Hepburn," said Col. Kennedy. "It would be the greatest calamity in times like these to elect to office a leader whose honesty of purpose is not above doubt. Only those who want to serve the province honestly and courageously, can make a success of politics. There are some who try to fool the people and they inevitably fail. You have the right to ask for what we have done to meet the conditions which have existed and if our answer is unsatisfactory to you, then it is your privilege to vote against us.

"There were reserves in Ontario which were not developed and which in the present period of economic stress, Col. Kennedy continued. The Hydro enterprise, for example, provided an abundance of cheap electrical energy, doing away with the necessity of importing millions of tons of coal which would have to be done were there no Hydro energy available. The mines, the forests and the streams all were yielding an abundance of wealth."

Purchasing Power Needed.

Turning to his Department of Agriculture, Col. Kennedy declared it was a recognized fact that when the farmer regained his purchasing power prosperity would return. A plentiful supply of all crops was of little benefit if there was not market. Everything the farmer had to buy cost more than the returns he received for his crops. This had reduced the buying power of the men on the land to the vanishing point, resulting in idle factories and general stagnation of industry.

Some of the efforts made by the Department of Agriculture to popularize Ontario-grown products were recounted by the Minister. In explaining how vital it was to have Ontario households consume Ontario-grown food, Col. Kennedy mentioned that in the city of Toronto alone, over a period of three months $11,000,000 had been spent on food brought in from foreign countries, most of which could well have been purchased in the province.

"If we keep that money into the province in order to set the wheels of industry turning once more," he declared, "The people of Ontario would have a full share in agriculture we have the basic industry, and when that industry suffers, all suffer."

J. Earl Lawson, M.P. for West York, spoke of unemployment insurance and outlined some of the difficulties in the way of putting it into operation. He condemned those who shouted that were they in power they would have unemployment insurance in operation within a month or six weeks. These schemes sounded well, but would not stand the scrutiny of daylight, he declared.

Collegiate Cadets to Receive New Colors at Inspection

Tomorrow morning at 10.30 o'clock the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School cadets are to be inspected on the school campus by Capt. M. Johnston, M.C., district cadet officer. New colors for the corps are to be presented and dedicated. Favorable weather only is necessary to make this year's inspection of the cadets one to be long remembered.

Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.B., D.S.O., D.S.O., Officer Commanding M.D. No. 2, and Major R. G. Whitlaw, O.S.O., have accepted the school's invitation to be present for the ceremony.

Col. Ira G. Everson, of the school staff, under whose supervision the senior girls of the technical school worked the new colors, will present the flags to the corps.

Farmers in North to Receive Free Trees

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 18. —Announcement of a reforestration scheme whereby farmers will be able to secure trees from the Government without charge, was made yesterday by A. H. Richardson of Toronto, forester in charge of reforestration for Ontario. Through this scheme there will be available to any farmer of any other citizen red pine and spruce. There will be no charge for these trees, but ready 2,500 people in this district have been circularized and told about the scheme. The trees will cost them nothing and will be all ready for planting when taken away. Although more than 10 primarily to give farmers a chance to plant trees on their property they will still be available to people in the city who wish to plant boxes or clumps of trees. There are now employed planting trees. Between 600,000 and 500,000 trees will be set out there this year.

UNESTIMATED DAMAGE DONE BY BUSH FIRES

Whole Villages Wiped Out as Quebec Fire Fighters Fight

WIND CHANGES

No Relief in Sight as Skies Remain Cloudless

Quebec, Que., May 18 (CP)—Another day of cloudless skies today forced weary firefighters throughout the province of Quebec.

From the Ontario border to the Gaspe Peninsula and from Rouyn to Maine came reports that beautiful forest land was being destroyed by scores of fires. Several points suffered losses of building as the fires, getting out of hand, swept into settlements.

A survey of the situation early today showed:

Val Alain—Some 40 buildings destroyed, including the church and railway station. Homeless scattered to nearby villages for shelter, damage $300,000.

Masse, Matane County—150 settlers families homeless, fire spreading along banks of Metis River thoroughfare.

Ste. Sequad of 400 men gathered to combat fire.

Rouyn and Noranda—The twin gold mining towns were saved from destruction by a turnabout in the wind but danger still threatened as a large force of men was at work. Damage to property of concerns affected alone estimated at $500,000. Two railway bridges and telegraph wires were burned.

Sully—40,000 trees projects of United States owners, burned close to the Maine border. Fire which was brought in outbreak under control, barely half a mile from the village which was being prepared for hasty evacuation.

Val Barrette, Gaspe Peninsular—The fire, which swept through Val Alain approximately 40 miles from the twin towns but was believed held in check. Fire fighting crews equipped with pumps and other equipment supplied by Canadian National Railways.

Villeroi, Lotbiniere County—Railway officials spoke of unemployment and one outlined some of the difficulties in the way of putting it into operation. He condemned those who shouted that were they in power they would have unemployment insurance in operation within a month or six weeks. These schemes sounded well, but would not stand the scrutiny of daylight, he declared.

St. Eusebe, Temiscouata County—Farm and fox outbuildings were razed.

Estcourt, Temiscouata County — Homes of several farmers and the national Paper Company were threatened for a time but danger was averted.

Destructive fires were burning in the townships of Blais and Langis, in Matane county, and Ste. Louis and St. Aubert, in L'Islet county. Parts of the Gatineau and Manitawki territories in the north and the Laurentians near Montreal were being burned over.

Handicrafts Exhibit Well Worth View

(By The Canadian Press)

TORONTO—The Canadian Handicrafts Exhibition formally opened by Hon. W. H. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, on behalf of Premier Henry, has been a great success.

From the west coast, from the gifted Canadian artist, Emily Carr, have come bits of her unusual pottery, made from the clay of the Pacific. The Doukhobor women of the prairies have sent their home-woven linens. There are the many-colored embroideries, all in white, the Ukrainian women, the Hungarian women, the Lithuanian and of those other Old World arts that have not forgotten since they have become New Canadians. There are the hand loom woven fabrics and the hooked rugs of picturesque fashioning, which the French-Canadian women weave. All these arts are represented, and Newfoundland, where the women of the remote fish, hunting villages find it natural to weave and to make rugs.

One of the most charming well arranged corners of the exhibition is that for which the Canadian Handicraft Art Association is responsible. It is timely to say that it was the Women's Art Association, as it was then known, which pioneered successfully in the re-awakening of the love of handicrafts of Canada. As long ago as 1885 Mr. Dignum, the founder of it still its president, worked in the face of many discouragements.

For some time efforts have been made to revive in Ontario the art of weaving as it was commonly practised in pioneer homes. Incentive to this movement was given when, on behalf of the Handicrafts Association, Mrs. H. Mansfield presented a length of choice herringbone woollen material in a soft shade of brown, which she herself had woven, designed for a suit for Premier Henry. The gift was accepted for Hon. Mr. Henry by Col. Kennedy, who chose this moment to recall spinning tales he had heard from his grandmother.

Ten thousand "throws of the shuttle" were necessary for the completion of this beautiful piece of cloth of Mrs. Stansfield's making. Mr. and Mrs. Stansfield were the founders of the Cromer Guild and Handicraft in Norfolk, England. For two summers, at the invitation of His Excellency Sir William Allardyce and Lady Allardyce of Newfoundland, Mrs. Stansfield taught weaving to the women of the Newfoundland fishing villages.

W. Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — The whole community regrets very much to hear that Mrs. L. Lavigne's little girl is smitten with scarlet fever and the house quarantined. It is only a week since the burial of the father, and much real sorrow is felt for the little sufferer and the family with this added affliction.

The Principal and pupils of the Public School took their annual outing which took the form of a fishing campaign. The weather was delightful and the pupils returned full of appreciation of their juvenile community demonstration.

Fishing excursions have commenced to "bite" in this community. One hears of daily parties going off. They all report a good sport.

Mr. and Mrs. Merper Rowlands were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Parks' on Friday evening last.

The Rev. W. H. and Mrs. Trusscott entertained Mr. Stokes at the parsonage on Friday night last and Mr. Trusscott took him to Stirling on Saturday where he stayed with Mr. Martin, Sr., and spent the day on Sunday visiting the local churches in the interest of the Bible Society.

Much activity is manifest all around this year in the vegetable garden outlay. Everybody is seeing to it that an ample supply of garden produce is available for future needs.

People around here will regret to hear that Mrs. Trusscott's father, Mr. Mills is gradually sinking.

Mr. Chester Mills arrived home from Ottawa last week end after a prolonged stay there as nothing reported.

"Au bon marche"

. . . through Advertising

One of the largest department stores in Paris is named "Au Bon Marche." Translated, it means "at a bargain—cheap." Actually, "au bon marche" indicates to the French what a true bargain does to Canadians—dependable merchandise at fair prices.

When so many shops everywhere are full of merchandise on which the "price appeal" is prominent, it is necessary that the wise shopper insist upon products of known value and proven merit. The clock that will not keep time is hardly a bargain at any price. Foodstuffs and drug-store supplies must contain pure ingredients and be prepared under hygienic conditions, lest they become not only cheap but dangerous. Wearing apparel at a mark-down is only a snare and a delusion if it lacks the quality that will result in wear.

Wise shoppers, nowadays are refusing substitutes, are weighing true worth against price appeal. They are using the advertisements in this newspaper as a shopping guide. When a merchant advertises his wares consistently you may be sure that he is telling the truth about them. He could not afford to do otherwise, even if he so desired. When a manufacturer of national scope appeals to you through these pages, you can believe and act upon his words.

"Au bon marche." Today advertising points the way to the only real bargains!

She was setting French toasts on a blonde head when Elizabeth came downstairs. She frowned and said, sharply, keeping her eyes intent upon her work. They also looked up, quietly.

"Is Lennox here?"

"Yes. Think afternoon. I've telegraphed Elizabeth."

"Elizabeth is ill, she added sharply.

"No—but I want to see her, I—they can do without me Saturdays. I spoke to Gilmanus. I may have my week-end, he said."

She opened dry lips, to say, quite firmly, "This is sheer nonsense—you are not going."

But she said nothing. She had looked at him. For, almost the first time she saw him—he was a man. She could not unfold him, to come and go, as pleased her. Her heart pounded, she went quite white. Lennox, watching her, said hastily, "Here."

He gave her the medicine, recognizing the familiar symptoms of the attack almost before she did. He kissed her.

"I'll call cousin Henrietta... she'll be Sunday night—" and was gone. But the color, under the door, her color returned, her breathing was easier, she balanced him with a question.

"Is it necessary?"

She was wise. Lennox had grown so accustomed to her attacks that latterly he had treated them as a doctor does, quickly, efficiently, almost perfunctorily. He flung out, "I must see her. You understand."

She sat as he left her, her hand on the riotous heart. She did not understand. But she was beginning to, dimly. Her eyes, always a little prominent, started with fear. Had she overworked herself? She thought, deliberately of Elizabeth, reciting the qualities in the girl which had so aided her own plans. Youth, health, beauty, a sort of sweet simplicity, candor. Upon what had she not reckoned, what unknown, a n d unrecognized strength?

Presently she said to herself—this will pass.

Henrietta came in worried, flustered. Louisa was her way.

"It was nothing," she said, briefly. The shabby little flat on the outskirts of Boston received Lennox happily. Elizabeth was a bright flame of welcome, Ella cried on his shoulder, fussed about him, made him comfortable.—The two older girls, handsome, rather clever, teased him, admired him.

"You came—"

"Could I stay away longer? Shall come every week-end."

She was radiant white with happiness.

"But your mother?"

"Am I not with her all week? Did you think you could keep me away—"

He never shortened her name as her mother and father did, nor did he speak it crisply as did Louisa. He lingered over the syllables, he breathed them out in tenderness—Elizabeth.

Cousin Ella believed in leaving young people, engaged young people, to their enchanted selves. They might walk on the Common, they might go out to Cambridge, they might go where they pleased. They could have the homely little living room to themselves in the long cold evenings. She and the girls went to their rooms and left them there. Cousin Ella had been a happy wife, she had loved, she was tender lovers.

A sentimental little fool, Louisa Seddon had called her more than once. That ridiculous marriage, that marriage so pinching and scrimping and worry, all because Harry Howland had broad shoulders and yellow hair and a smile to draw the heart from a woman's side! Louisa had known him first, she had introduced him to Ella. She had been pretty then. Harry had had no eyes save for her. Louisa remembered him definitely, he had disturbed her. Then George Sheldon had come along, his eyes turned to Emmeline.

Well, she and not Emmeline had married George and she never thought of Harry Howland if she could avoid it.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The weeks slipped by. Lennox went about his day's work dutifully accompanied his mother in his free time, sat at home with her, paid calls, and did not come alive until Friday. Every Friday. When he stepped on the train his real self returned to him, he walked through the gates and was the undisputed lord of the cars as a conqueror walks.

Then there came days when Elizabeth started when spoken to, turned into tears at a word, crept away by herself to sit in dim corners, her chin in her hand, and spent hours writing letters which she tore up. Lennox wrote every day, wired twice, and coming home as night looked eagerly toward the hall table on which no letter lay. His mother questioned him.

"You have not heard from Elizabeth?"

"Not this week—she must be ill." He broke off and his dark face was down with a touch of influenza the day you came home,"—said Mrs. Sheldon.

He was not listening. He was prowling about the room. Something was wrong. What was it?

Elizabeth told him, the night he arrived, after her mother and sisters had gone, upstairs. She sat beside him on an old ramshackle couch, and her small cold hand was in his.

"Dearest —and you worried so! Child, what a head it ain't! Be calm! Out, clutching the hand until her flesh whitened in pain.

"No—don't— all worth it—" She had forgotten how to write. I have to hear to bother you."

"June?" he asked heavily.

She looked at the ceiling. June was so far away.

Suddenly he pulled her to him, held her.

"We'll go off, quietly—and be married."

"Here?"

"And no. Could you come to New York? Next week I'll meet you—we'll slip away. Tell them we couldn't endure the fuss and nobonsense of a big wedding."

Lennox, Lennox. I've worried you dreadfully!"

He put his hand on the pale, shining hair, pressed her face hard against his breast.

"Because you said, "And fretting you—well, it's been my fault. But I loved you so," he said.

They made their plans. To make sure, when he reached home he would send her a little memorandum with time and places on it.

It was easy to slip out while her mother was marketing, to leave a note, to know the girls were safely out of the way. Lennox left her. But harder to buy the ticket with the money Lennox had given her, to get into the train and sit there, quietly, watching the scenery slide by, not wondering much beyond the eventual safety of his arms, not thinking of other people, especially.

It was not chance that brought Louisa Sheldon to the station that day. It was a page from a note book, fallen from Lennox's pocket. The little sober routine he had made out for Elizabeth's guidance, lest she go astray and had not sent, the second draft seeming clearer. It was not a letter, just memoranda, just a memorandum. Louisa didn't read other people's letters.

It fell into her hands on the morning Elizabeth was sitting on the train.

Louisa met the train.

Elizabeth getting out of the car, saw Lennox first. He was hurrying toward her, he had sent no one else. His eyes were slight with relief. The shabby little station, that she stay was taken, adventure.

She smiled and moved toward him. She looked beyond him and her eyes went wide and blank. Lennox turned.

His mother moved up beside him, stood there.

"The cousin is outside," she merely said.

They went with her. like children. No word was spoken on the long drive downtown.

Then, into the library with them and the door closed.

"What is the meaning of this"

"We were going to be married."

She looked almost imbecile for a moment. Then her face hardened.

"But you are to be married—in June."

There was a silence. Elizabeth got up from the chair in which she had been sitting limply and came forward. She flung back her head and controlled her lips. She said, clearly, "June will be too late."

Another silence. It hurt like hammer blows. It sharpened, took on the quality of an insane screaming. Lennox made a motion toward his mother.

"My fault.—I—Don't look like that, Mother. We—we love each other."

Louisa fought against an actual nausea. She turned her eyes from his eyes, she blotted, brutally, comprehendingly at the girl.

"I understand," she said, and did not know that understanding had been denied her.

"Sit down."

But Elizabeth stood as if rooted to the carpet. Words struggled in her little throat, beat here like wings— Oh, you don't understand, you can't you beautiful, cold woman. We love each other—we wanted each other—and it was beautiful. I tell you, unendurably beautiful— and now it's spoiled. You've spoiled it, with your hard eyes and your bitter mouth and your voice—

She could not say any of it, not one word—she struck her hands together—the room swung, the room darkened —she thrust her arms stiffly ahead of her, spoke her lover's name in a small voice—and fell deep, deep into the burning darkness.

Lennox caught her, laid her on a couch, turned to his mother.

"She's fainted," he said savagely.

"No, Mr. Lennox, she has fainted her head lower. She will be all right in a moment. It's only natural, under the circumstances," said Louisa.

They faced one another across the little, still figure.

"Well?" Lennox demanded.

She lifted her head, he was her enemy. No, her enemy lay there, unconscious, escaped from her. She answered, unhurried.

"I have no comment to make. Why should I? The marriage must be hastened. I will tell people I am giving a shower. The wedding will take place at once. I suppose word was left with Miss Eliot—"

"That you, Elizabeth had heard from me and was coming on New York to be married quietly."

"Ella is a fool," remarked his mother, Her tone added—and the mother of fools. She looked briefly toward the girl who stirred and moaned a little, tried to sit up, Louisa watched Lennox go to her, raise her in his arms. She heard his voice, his broken words of comfort. She stood very erect, holding herself so, face tongued, strangely cold, what a head it ain't" he cried out, clutching the hand until her flesh whitened in pain.

"No—don't— all worth it—" She had forgotten how to write. I have to hear to bother you."

"June?" he asked heavily.

She looked at the ceiling. June was so far away.

She stood very erect, holding

"and my son's child. Not you. With you I have no concern."

"Mother!"

"Be silent!"

She left the room, without haste. Elizabeth turned her face against her lover's arm. The pale which wrung her went through him, shook him, twisted his heart, forced the ask to his eyes. He held her very closely.

"Don't —ah don't—what does it matter She —we could have expected just that. She can't understand dearest. Don't cry so. See, we'll be married next week—and forget. Forget—I'll be so good to you, I swear it, she shan't hurt you, I swear it, she shan't hurt you."

Louisa, pausing at the door to draw breath, heard that.

She shan't hurt you.

Louisa went on up to her room. She wrote out her will to Ella, and the letter that was to follow. Very light, her touch on the pen—such silly, romantic young people—their addled heads filled with the very tenderest idea of elopement. Too much novel reading, she supposed. But she'd stop them. Lennox couldn't conceal anything from her. The wedding would take place next week. She named the date. Ella and the girls must come on, there would be the final irounseau to buy, all the things to arrange, caterer, church. And it was as well that things had so fallen out as she. Louisa, had an opportunity to pass some friends abroad and thought to sacrifice it. Now she would go, directly after the wedding.

Back Stiff and Sore
An Effort to Get Up

Toronto, Ont.—"For many years I had trouble with my kidneys. I had pains in the lumbago in the lower part of my back and would be so distressed that my work was a burden to me. I could hardly wait for the day to end," said Richard Fowler of 11a Stafford St. "It was an effort for me to get in and out of bed, my back would be so stiff and sore. I saw Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets advertised and began at once to take them and by the time I had taken one bottle my kidneys were all right, my back limbered up, the pains disappeared and my kidneys and back have given me no more trouble." THE SON OF TARZAN No. 27.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

After weeks of exposure came a toughening and hardening of his smooth, white skin, browning now beneath the sun and wind. He had removed his pajama jacket one day to bathe in a little stream too small to harbor crocodiles. While he and Akut were deporting themselves in the cool waters, a monkey dropped down from the overhanging trees and scampered away with the boy's single remaining article of civilization.

For a time he was angry, but soon realized being half-clothed is much uncomfortable than being entirely naked, and he came to revel in the freedom of his unhampered state. Sometimes he would smile to imagine the surprise of his schoolmates could they but see him now. How they would envy him! He felt sorry for them even amid the comforts and luxuries of their English homes and happy with their mothers and fathers,

A most uncomfortable lump arose in the boy's throat as he thought of home and he saw a vision of his mother's face through a blur of mist that came unbidden to his eyes. Then it was that he urged Akut onward, for now they were headed westward for the coast. The old ape thought they were searching for a tribe of his kind and the boy did not enlighten him as to his real plans when they would come to civilization.

One day as they were moving slowly along the banks of a river they came unexpectedly upon a native village. Some children were playing beside the water. The boy's heart leaped at the sight of them—for over a month he had seen no human being. Even if they were black -skinned, were they not fellow creatures? He started toward them. Akut laid a warning hand upon his arm to hold him back, but he shook himself free and ran forward with a shout of greeting. .

LORETTA YOUNG REACHES CLIMAX OF HER CAREER IN "PLAY GIRL" STORY

Screen Gaiety Gift Thursday.

Theatre-goers who have admired Loretta Young as a beautiful and capable young lady were enthusiastic in their applause for her as a great emotional actress, when "Play Girl," her latest production, came to the Capitol theatre this afternoon.

Always popular because of her personal charm and thorough technique, Miss Young reaches the climax of her enviable career in this picture. Her emotional understanding and sincerity proved her dramatically qualified in the greatest acting opportunity that she has had.

In "Play Girl" she plays the part of "Buster, a modern young girl who in spite of her plans for a brilliant business career and financial independence without including marriage or motherhood. She suppresses them all when she meets Wallie, a handsome young Lothario who promptly steals her heart. They marry, and for a time Buster revels in the resignation of her own hopes and submerges her former ambitions in her love for her husband.

But Wallie turns out to be a never-do-well, lavishly and indiscriminately earning his precarious living by gambling. Lastly in the honeymoon over when Buster discovers him out with another woman. Her life, nefarious greed that in him gradually lessens as he makes and breaks promises to work and refrains from gambling.

A bitter quarrel sends Wallie to a distant city without Buster. Alone, with dwindling funds and expecting a baby, she resorts to his own practice by placing her last cent on an unknown horse because its name was "Baby Mine." The climax would spoil an enjoyable evening for many theatre-goers if related here. Suffice it to say that it is an imaginative and unusual ending to a consistently strong story.

Mingled with the adventures of Buster and Wallie is another romance, the hilarious wooing of secretary amorous copy who is the persons of Winnie Lightner and Guy Kibbee, furnishing some of the rarest comedy of the season. Red-headed Winnie wisecracks and gesticulates in her old sparkling manner. Kibbee, a comparative newcomer to fame, has established as a capable comedian.

Norman Foster, as the young husband, is excellent. Marion Shilling in "Play Girl" opens the doors of a new realm to him. Noel Madison, Dorothy Burgess, James Ellison, Polly Walters and Mae Madison are splendid in supporting roles.

Ray Enright's direction is laudable in "Play Girl" written for the screen by, Maurine Watkins, of "Chicago" fame. Maude Fulton directed and adapted the story.

"Play Girl," supported by comedy and cartoon, plays at the Capitol today and Thursday (silverware gift night.)

At The Belle

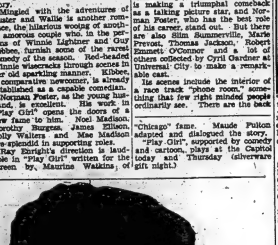
THE LATEST SHOCKER — OUT-DRACULA'S DRACULA

A strange, hair-raising thriller, which is said to "out-Dracula Dracula," is "Murders in the Rue Morgue," Universal's version of Edgar Allan Poe's Parisian drama, which comes to the Belle Theatre on Thursday and Friday on the two feature program.

Bela Lugosi, the original "Dracula," of both stage and screen enacts the leading male role of the new picture. Sidney Fox, and is seen in a characterization which is said to excel his former one in power to thrill and chill audiences. Lugosi plays the role of Dr. Mirakle, a doctor with a warped brain, whose is intent on introducing the blood of a gigantic ape into the veins of a living girl, and his ruthless pursuit of this fiendish experiment. And to bring to "Murders in the Rue Morgue" is fascinating quality of unique horror.

The principal feminine role is played by Sidney Fox, charming little New York stage actress whose first year on the screen has been a constant succession of triumphs, and who is said to excel all her past efforts as the gentle French girl, who is pursued by the doctor and his terrible spell. Other important parts in this strange drama are also filled capably by Leon Waycoff, Brandon Hurst, Bert Roach, Betty Ross Clarke, Noble Johnson and D'Arcy Corrigan.

A remarkable joining of interesting people, unusual scenes and fantastic language combine to make "Mystery Liner" one of the most interesting scurrying pictures of the season. The second feature offering on the same program.



Of the people, Mae Clarke, who rose to remarkable heights in "Waterloo Bridge," Russell Gorten, who is making a triumphal comeback as a talking picture star, and Morgan Wallace, who has the best role of his career, stand out. But there are also Hilda Vaughn, Marie Prevost, Thomas Jackson, Robert Ellis, Gertrude Messinger and lots of others collected by Cyril Gardner at Universal City to make a remarkable cast.

Its scenes include the interior of a race track "photo room," something that few right minded people ordinarily see. There are the back room scenes of an upstairs speakeasy, and the mysterious detail of the homeward journey of the prodigal.

The genial member also paid a tribute to Art MacConnell, Chief William Lynch and Carl Reed were the lucky winners. Bernard Gallagher presided at the meeting.

DEVALERA TO ATTEND PARLEY

Providing His Going Will Not Interfere With Gov't Business

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 18 (C.P. Cable)—President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State, today said he will attend a meeting of the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference in June provided his business did not interfere.

The Irish president said his first move to organize a delegation to the conference was to consult with members of the Free State representatives although he said it was likely Messrs. Lemass and Blythe, government would accompany him.

The president said he hoped to attend the conference himself came to the attention of the world through the Dail Eireann his bill to abolish the oath of allegiance to the British crown from the constitution of the Irish Free State.

In the British House of Commons J. M. Thomas, Dominion Secretary, had said peace or no peace, by June all stages of procedure would mean Free State would no longer be in treaty with the Free States and that it would not enter into any agreements with that country.

PHONE TAX TO BE REVISED

Six Per Cent. Will Be Added to Long Distance Accounts

Ottawa, May 18—The basis of the Government's long-distance telephone tax was changed in the commons last night when the Committee of Ways and Means reached a unanimous decision. The amended resolution carried, and the bill was introduced.

Hon. E. B. Ryckman, Minister of National Revenue, moved the subsidiation of the original proposal of one stipulating that on every cable and telegram or radio message originating in Canada, the customer would pay to the Consolidated Revenue Fund a tax of 5 cents, and that on every long-distance call originating in Canada, the telephone company shall pay a tax of 6 per cent. of the amount charged.

It meant, said Mr. Ryckman, that on monthly accounts the monthly amount would be taxed 6 per cent. In the case of pay stations, however, the charge would be 5 cents for each call for which the charge is in excess of 26 cents, and up to and including 50 cents and an additional 5 cents for each additional 25 cents.

Miss Agnes Macphail expressed concern lest the imposition be applicable to residents of a rural community not having connection from a private line to the Bell Telephone Company.

SOCIAL ORDER MUST CHANGE TO SAVE RACE

Rev. F. J. Irwin Believes World at Dawn of New Era

MUST SERVE MAN

Communism as Developed in Russia Misses Spiritual

A new social order has to be organized for the benefit of the masses, said Rev. F. J. Irwin, speaking to the Rotarian Club at their luncheon at the Queen's Hotel yesterday. His address differed from any address that has been given to the club since its inception dealing as it did with the economic conditions of the present day and the means that must be taken to relieve the condition in which the world finds itself at the present time.

World Seeking

"There is no place on the world's map," said Rev. Mr. Irwin, "one cannot place his finger and find a crisis such as the world never before experienced" and he cited a few. India has a big population and her people are restless trying to work out their salvation. Germany, the scene of unrest is facing the most difficult economic crisis in her history. Today is governed and dominated by the greatest statesmen ever known. England has her pound sterling to contend with, is falling from a pedestal long maintained, as the North American continent, eight to ten millions of people are walking the streets with their hats in their hand begging for something to eat. We cannot lay all these crisis to providence for our own economic order is wrong. Communism is not the word for the conditions that exist. It is rather an industrial error," he said.

Overproduction

The speaker traced the movements of the world down through the ages showing the first era was Christ-ordained. Under the Church was founded until the Reformation, the saints and priests ruled the world. Then followed a period of colonial expansion by armies of knights in which the heroes were soldiers. This was the military era. The next coming is the present time this era is industrial error through the invention of the power of the machine. Rev. Mr. Irwin, during his address illustration the shoemaker, who formerly made shoes in a little shop built into the shoe his own personality into the product, which he was selling in a competition that was fair and reasonable. This age was changed by the machine to-day and the man could not build as true a shoe and the natural consequence was that he was forced out of business and had to go to the neighbor in ask for work at a price he wished to pay. "Our rapid progress," he said, "is to blame." This caused us to produce faster than we can consume and faster than the poor in cheating power can consume. From 1928 there was an increase of 33 per cent. in industrial expansion but a decrease of 22 per cent. in employment and this state can not go on forever. Commercial expansion invariably brings war."

Russian Attempt

Turning to the Great War, the speaker stated that all were led to believe they fought for democracy and peace and never has the power of democracy been so far from the world as at present. Russia is an example of a people trying to find a way out but did not hold theirs up as the same way. There are always excuses that probably Russia has gone to excess but they are making an effort to adjust the means to an end but have left out the primary necessity, Christ. We must socialize the corporate agencies of life so that industry will not be for the benefit of a few. During the Protestant Reformation the people wanted to be saved from hell so to worship God in any way they chose fit and out came the Reformation, a blot on the history of the world, for it split Christendom, a curse that, while from movement of today, which is fast gaining ground, of evil we are not economically free."

Mr. Irwin was introduced by George Ferguson and Rivenian appreciation was expressed by Rice Hunter.

Russian Way Wrong

Speaking at John Street United Church hall last night, Rev. Mr. Irwin, before a large audience dealt on the address given to the Rotarians, giving his reasons why the world should not accept the communism of Russia in that it was not a dictatorship as that of class or group and was devoid of spiritual values of that robbed mankind of one of the fundamentals of life.

A series of weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared for the Belleville and Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE NO. 19

Know the Products You Sell

The other day I received the following account of the effort of one merchant and I am explaining it in detail, as I think it offers a suggestion which other merchants can use to advantage.

"We have several items that we sell every day and we fail lunch to-ther every day in my dining-room just back of the store. I have a cook who prepares that lunch entirely out of goods from the store.

"We make a point of using, at one time or another, every article in the store, so that we may know from experience what is in the package, how to prepare it and what it tastes like.

Not all of us have a staff or store large enough to install an experimental kitchen, but most of you have homes where you can take some of the new lines of goods and try them for yourselves. Get your wife to try some of the recipes printed on the packages, she'll tell you if it is easy to prepare or not, and you will know how your whole family like it. Get your assistants in the store to try them as well.

If you can say as one of your customers,

"I took a package of this new product home last week and Mrs. King tried it, using the recipe they print on the back of the package, a mighty nice dessert. We all went back for second helpings."

you have a great deal more confidence in your customer, and very likely an additional sale.

The whole idea relates to grocery and food products, the same policy of knowing your products applies to the merchant in any line and to each person on the store staff.

Manufacturers spend much time on the materials that go into their products in order that they can give you better service.

Mr. Merchant—your attractive homes, your intimate friends—all furnish a testing laboratory that will enable you all to speak with confidence as to the products you carry. This knowledge will enable you to sell more and better products, as frequently this personal word is all that is needed to turn a "convenience" purchase into a "satisfaction" sale.

If a product is being advertised in your local paper, and you know it is good because you have used it yourself, you can take from the sales message published by the Manufacturer by prominently featuring the article in your own ads, in your displays on your counters, and in your talks with your customers, both in the store and over the phone. In other words make the Manufacturer's advertising a part of your own advertising — because manufacturer's advertising cannot carry all the burden alone. You must do your part, adding to the manufacturer's claim your own tested and proven report.

In a future article we will talk on "Demonstrating Products."

NEXT WEEK—"MARKING TWO SALES INSTEAD OF ONE."

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column, if received by Wednesday noon of each week. Letters must be signed. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.—(Copyright)

Schwab Optimistic but Says Government Costs Must be Greatly Cut

Business Revival Cannot Be Expected Until Existing Credit Jams Are Broken Schwab Tells Steel Institute

INDUSTRY MADE FOR MAN

Governments, Federal and Local, Must Prove That They Can and Will Live Within Their Incomes Under Necessity

New York, May19—Charles M. Schwab today reaffirmed his optimism for the future but asserted that costs of government must be reduced and existing credit jams broken before business could revive.

In his semi-annual financial address to the American Iron and Steel Institute, Mr. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said "a measure of optimism" was justified by the world political conference was "the demonstration by federal and local governments that they can and will live within their incomes under stress of necessity."

The steel industry, he declared, has put its own house in order and in federal reserve system is doing its part.

Mr. Schwab said steel employers hoped the wage reductions would be compensated for by improved employment.

Decent Standard of Living.

"In my belief only the human considerations are basic. Industry was made for man, not man for industry. In the long run our present form of economic structure must provide employment, happiness and a decent standard of living for the population, or it will not survive.

"The best the steel industry has been able to do so far is "slacken the pouring of disintegration."

"Even with firmer prices and these (trade) cuts in operating costs, we cannot continue indefinitely unless credit is put to work and the volume of our business is thereby increased," Mr. Schwab asserted.

"Steel operators, he said, must look to Washington for aid in meeting competition from foreign dumping.

FLESH OF WALRUS PRESERVES TEETH

Civilized Food Would Create Need For Dentists

Toronto, May 19.—The teeth of the Eskimo, where Nature provides refrigeration, the thirty-two who are people of small stature, can boast of having the largest jaws and the best teeth of any known race, incidentally, they are not bothered much with decay or irregular teeth. These pleasant conditions are due to the simple fact so long as they adhere to the nutriment, which consists mostly of cooked, dry foods, such as walrus whale, seal, caribou and fish, all which demand more than ordinary exercise of the jaws.

But "uncivilized" men assert itself in one generation, and if the Eskimo decided to eat the white man's foods and candy, dentists and orthodontists would be in great demand in the land of the Eskimo.

These were among a diversity of interesting facts which were unfolded at the thirty-first annual meeting of the American Society of Orthodontists in the Royal York Hotel yesterday.

DO-X GERMAN AIR LINER ON ITS WAY HOME

Passes Nova Scotia Coast on Way to Lake Constance, Switzerland

OVERHAULED

Weather Quite Favorable and Take-off is Perfect

Yarmouth, N.S., May 19—(By The Canadian Press)—The Canadian Radio Signal Service reports at 9.20 (EST) this morning that it has received signals from DO-X, German air liner bound for Newfoundland, indicated she was near the coast of Nova Scotia.

New York, May 19—The German air liner DO-X, its seven motors roaring in the silence of Long Island Sound, took off at 4:06 o'clock (EST) this morning for Harbor Grace, Nfld, on the first lap of its return trip to Germany.

Take-off

The take-off was made from a point 12 miles east of Manhasset Bay.

The roar of the great seaplane's powerful motors was heard by newspapermen surveying the Sound from its fast launches, endeavoring to locate it in the darkness.

It had been lost to them since it raised over from North Beach last night. First indications of its new position were contained in radio dispatches requesting weather reports.

Later it was learned that the ship had not left the water enroute to its new position for a few minutes at first mile or so and then was towed by boat.

Conditions Favorable

Captain Frederick Christiansen, the Do-X's commander did not announce the trip he called on Hoover where he had apparently decided it safer take-off could be effected.

A message from the German air corsair at 5:30 o'clock (EST) said that weather conditions were "favorable" and quoted the log as recording that they were "Past Washington", the Radio Marine Corps reported.

The air liner was heavily loaded for its trip to Europe. Flight, a full supply of fuel and provisions was placed aboard and Capt. Christiansen, after taking his draft in a point off the J. P. Morgan estate on Long Island, where the 150 ton craft was a crew of 14 aboard.

St. John's, Nfld., May 19—(By The Canadian Press)—Northeast wind with fog and light rain being weather conditions unfavorable for the arrival of Do-X, giant German air liner, which left New York at 4.06 (EST) this morning for Newfoundland.

Police Will Interview Norfolk Clergyman in His Home Over Curtis

Curtis in No Way Involved in Ransom Money Say Police

PROBE GOES ON

Career of Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, Third Negotiator in Child Case

Trenton, N.J., May 19—Governor A. Harry Moore announced today in view of the fact the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian rector and one of the Norfolk negotiators in the Lindbergh kidnaping case will not come to Hopewell, he favors "sending someone to Norfolk to see what he has to say."

Not Involved

Hopewell, N.J., May 19—Superintendent of state police H. Norman Schwartzkopf announced today that there is nothing that would in any way link John H. Curtis, of Norfolk, Va., with the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby and the collection of the ransom money."

Curtis was jailed at Flemington yesterday following his confession that he had purpreirated a hoax on the Lindberghs in claiming falsely that he was in communication with the kidnappers of their baby.

After the confession investigation was immediately begun as to Curtis' whereabouts on the night of March 1, when the baby was kidnapped and the night of April 2 when the $50,000 ransom was paid by Dr. John F. Condon.

Boyd's statement today came as a surprise to investigators.

Condon Must Rest

After exonerating Curtis of implication in the Lindbergh kidnaping and collection of the ransom, Schwartzkopf said Dr. Condon had been "most co-operative with the state" and had offered to come to Hopewell or go to Norfolk to help the investigators.

A message received from his daughter this morning," Schwartzkopf said, "indicates that Dr. Condon's physician has ordered that he rest for several days before his activities are resumed. As soon as Dr. Condon is rested we will continue taking him around."

Schwartzkopf's statement also made comment on the telegram sent by Rev. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian rector, in which the Norfolk associate in the Curtis activities declined to come to Hopewell, but said he would give all information to police going to Norfolk.

Request for Deposit

"Under these circumstances," said Schwartzkopf, "it will not be possible to confront Mr. Curtis with Mr. Peacock, which at this time we are very anxious to do. There is no further necessity for the Norfolk police. The baby's body was found a few days ago by state police and telephone lines to the Lindbergh garage.

Newark, N.J., May 19—The Newark Evening News said today that the Rev. Dobson-Peacock, kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby, Chief of Police William Walter of Trenton, received an anonymous letter which identified the writer as "one of the men" would be forced to pay.

Another Wire Line

The body of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby was found a few days today close to the main road from Hopewell to Princeton. Along that road ran special wires laid by police conducting the investigation from the Lindbergh garage.

Chief Walter would not discuss the contents of the letter, the paper said, and forwarded it to the police at Hopewell. He never received any report as to the investigation of the Curtis letter.

The news said Chief Walter favored the theory that the kidnappers have been written by one of four men who kidnapped the baby.

The text of the letter, as published in the news, follows.

"Mr. Chief:

"I am writing this letter from New York. I am going home to Canada, when I get to Buffalo I will mail it to you, then will give me more time to safely escape. I read Mrs. Fred Roberts' letter. It's not cold fee' and the fellows knew it. I promised not to squeal and they gave me money and I'm going home.

"Maybe I won't be caught. We all thought we could make some easy money. We are sorry for the baby, both, N.J., and one of the fellows cried. We were only visiting first in this place and listens to everything interest in the case.

Must be Smart

"He must be smart because every time the police chief spoke he picks up the receiver and never talks. Then he hangs up. Another time he says always 'I never knew I was so smart.'

"The Lindbergh baby is taken while O'Brien was visiting first when I left these fellows, only it cries too much and the fellows will get it somehow will have to. Nobody will hurt it because they all love it. I'm sorry I'm a fugitive and a small black dog. The fellows like it, too, and named it Rusty.

Feared for Child

"They are all sorry and afraid. There are three more left now. We already stayed in one place for a week. I miss soon after the train. I love the Lindbergh kid, and I don't want to see it hurt.

"I don't know where is the name of the street or the road, but not New Orleans. Maybe it is. When we took the crib we read 53 minits and not very fast because somebody would see us.

"I quit the fellers because they don't agree. Follow the Lindbergh telephone wire and you will find the baby and the fellers there. The fellers were pretty nervous.

Romance of Road Ends in Wedding

TORONTO, May 19.—Wedding bells clattered and the romantic knot of Charles Gerald Capon and Miss Ethel Young, who were picked up last week on the highway somewhat while camping in an empty barn near the Don River, was tied yesterday lovers were married yesterday by Rev. Canon H. Harvey Pye of Scarborough Junction they were sent towards the way from Nova Scotia. Later Capon admitted he had come from Nova Scotia. Following investigation by Juvenile Court Judge J. C. Jarrett and Chief Constable O. D. Kelley, in which the girl denied the charges against Capon, who declared he was married previously, the couple was given away by Chief Jarrett. Mrs. Capon's parents were present as well as best man for the groom.

Newark, N.J., May 19—The Newark Evening News said today that 19 days after the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, Chief of Police William Walter of Trenton, received an anonymous letter which identified the writer as "one of the men" would be forced to pay.

Another Wire Line

The body of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby was found a few days today close to the main road from Hopewell to Princeton. Along that road ran special wires laid by police conducting the investigation from the Lindbergh garage.

Chief Walter would not discuss the contents of the letter, the paper said, and forwarded it to the police at Hopewell. He never received any report as to the investigation of the Curtis letter.

The news said Chief Walter favored the theory that the kidnappers have been written by one of four men who kidnapped the baby.

As no line had the Aird payment been considered a gratuity, he said, but was simply payment for services rendered to Hydro by Aird.

He did not know, he said, who had collected or handed Colsworthy the party funds during the year 1930.

McGuire denied having seen Sir John Aird, J. H. Black, C. C. Cowan, Fred Roberts or others mentioned in the investigation to discuss the Madawaska.

Hebert Smith, insurance agent, had planned the project with him and he had sold Smith to tell Aird and Mulkins that he was sent from Hydro chairman, or F. A. Oaky, chief engineer of Hydro.

At all times, he said, he had opposed the Hydro dealing with interests in which Hydro men wanted the Hydro to buy power from and develop the power themselves, rather than allow someone else to develop the power and sell it to Hydro

Letters from Aird to Peter White, K.C., counsel, had been written by Mr. promoters letters intended to outline O'Brien's views, and that the letters had mentioned "Madawaska was a good business proposition," and that he would use his influence to get Hydro to buy.

All he knew of Aird's dealings with the Hydro was what he had heard in evidence, he said in conclusion, from C. A. MacGrath who was chairman at that time, he said.

Maguire Denies He Used Influence to Assist Aird and His Partner Millard

Hon. J. Robert Cooke Outlines Payment to Aird

WARRANT GIVEN

Payment to Aird Not Considered as to Gratuity

Toronto, May 19—(By the Canadian Press)—Denial that he had used influence as a Hydro Commissioner to assist John Aird Jr., and R. W. Millard, Aird's partner, was given by C. A. MacGrath before the Royal Commission on Hydro today. The Commission adjourned early when A. G. Slaght, K.C. and W. N. Miller, K.C. left to attend a meeting but will continue this afternoon.

During the morning Hydro Chairman Cooke, presided. Hydro Chairman had outlined the payment of $50,000 to Aird after Sir Adam Beck's contract had "okayed" the warrant for the entire amount. Mr. Cooke's period of statement attached, and as was the usual custom the Minister responsible had merely presented it for his colleagues' information. It was then the practice of the Cabinet he said to question responsible Ministers on such payments if they retained to obtain further information.

Nothing Unusual

The payment of $1,000,000 for the Madawaska Power rights had been passed by the Cabinet, but a few months later, near the end of the fiscal year, the Hydro had balanced the accounts with the Ontario Government and then obtained the authorization of $50,000 expenditures for preliminary surveys and investigations of the Madawaska. There was nothing unusual whatever in the transaction, he said.

At no time had the Aird payment been considered a gratuity, he said, but was simply payment for services rendered to Hydro by Aird.

He did not know, he said, who had collected or handed Colsworthy the party funds during the year 1930.

McGuire denied having seen Sir John Aird, J. H. Black, C. C. Cowan, Fred Roberts or others mentioned in the investigation to discuss the Madawaska.

Two Thousand Witness Collegiate Cadet Review

Brigadier Anderson Takes General Salute—Credit Given to Cadet Instructor James Howard and Officer Commanding Don Dalrymple.

This morning under a cloudless sky with warm sunshine pouring down, the ceremony of presentation of colours to the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School Cadet Corps, their consecration and the corps annual inspection was carried out on the school campus.

An interested concourse of Belleville citizens from all walks of life numbering well over 2,000, were present to see the corps of their children parade; if not the finest, between Toronto and Ottawa, then through a difficult ceremony, creditably, and watch, the cadets in their medical examination for inspection.

Favourable comment was heard on every hand, and the bearing of the unit and their instructor, Lieut. A. W. Howard, as well as all others in any way connected with the cadets deserved everything good said of them.

Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.B., M.C., D.S.O., G.O.C., M.D. No. 2, accompanied by Major R. G. Whitney, D.S.O., were here from headquarters at Kingston for the occasion. The general carried out the formal inspection and took the general salute, and also the salute in the march past; and Col. M. Tabester, M.C., district cadet officer made the battalion inspection. Impressive Sight

Cadets The Armouries shortly before 10 a.m., the corps marched directly to the campus, where they were drawn up in formation facing Church street. General Anderson shortly afterwards arrived and after greeting many of his local friends, took the salute about 10.15 o'clock. The cadets presented a fine sight, the line extending the entire length of the campus, with their splendid school back of them. The march past in company column was carried out in fine order, the lines and steps was excellent, the cadet band, trained only a year by Mr. Rod Hunter, was a revelation to many and, they showed a proficiency, few thought they possessed. New Colours

Following the return to battalion the new colours were presented and formed by the unit, and after the chaplain had been marched to the centre of it and draped the cased colours, were placed on them. Following then the consecration of them, by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Hagarty, the presentation by Miss Evereon of the school staff, Cadet Lieut. Ted Doyle received the King's Colours and Cadet Lieut. Godfrey Reid those of the battalion. The colours were then marched to their place in the centre of the battalion and the corps marched passed the reviewing stand in column of fours.

Complimentary speeches were made by a number present which will necessarily have to be reported tomorrow.

After inspection the corps marched via Church, Front, and Bridge streets to the Armouries for dismissal.

BOULEVARDS ON N. FRONT SEEDED

Tons of soft loam, which have been spread several inches deep all along the length of the boulevard on North Front street today, gave the avenue a very clean and inviting appearance. This is the intention of the department of public works to see that all is in readiness before the loan to further enhance the beauty of the street. This will harm the seed, which has been planted and the department has asked that the children be warned of the penalty.

ALL SUCCESSFUL IN PHARMACY EXAMS

Four young men of the city can enjoy their summer vacation without the worry of examinations as each of them successfully passed the examinations held in this city, that the Great War has been brought to a conclusion. Being in the trade workers of Canada ready for the transition to the higher plane of Communism which was inestimably and swiftly approaching. He traved the present political parties, denied churches and claimed the press of the country dictated to the public choice of candidates at the polls.

Outlines Ideas.

To a gathering of a little over one hundred who were present most of whom had heard the speaker by no one other previous occasion he outlined his ideas of evolution, theory of construction and defined this country as one in which the working man had been too well fed and in consequence had deteriorated mentally and physically. With a pinch of want which was already beginning to be felt the world's clock had begun to move as if stung by the pangs and ready ready for action. A keener interest in things which were going on around.

Sees Design in World.

"Animals declared Mr Sullivan, were created for specific purposes. The mole had eyes which were useless for seeing but they were animal; the hedgehog, when it rolled into a ball was almost indestructible. The horse was designed to and pendulum adapted for the life's work, and the same condition was apparent with the elephant. But the most striking of all animals was the camel. It could travel for days without water or food, living on reserves of fat and water which was stored inside the animal. It also had pads on its knees to enable it to get down and discharge its contribution of burden. But man had no pads on his knees. If man was supposed to get down on his knees he would have been supplied with pads for them. However he wasn't supposed to get down on them. There were other things to do in life besides spending his time on his knees!"

Wits Sharpened.

Launching into a lengthy discussion and dissertation on infinity of space, electrons, molecular matter, intelligence and the control and many other phases of religion and creation, Mr. Sullivan gave some illuminating sidelights on the less understood theories which are now prevalent. An interested audience followed the story of the transition of each age of mankind, from the earliest ancestors to the present age of soft living. It was at the conclusion of this address that the speaker cited the effect of previous good years on the character of the residents of the country. Now with the pinch of hunger and want, wits are being sharpened again to take advantage of everything which may benefit the race," declared the speaker. Capitalism was about to pass, succeeded by a new system which is now sweeping the world."

Challenge to Clergy.

Before closing his remarks to the audience Mr. Sullivan entered the platform to listen to him, Mr. Sullivan sent forth a challenge to any of the political parties, or representatives, to meet him in open debate at any specified place. This, he declared, they would not do as none of the parties could advance one speaker intellectual enough to keep their end up.

Mr. Sullivan was introduced to the audience by Mr. Chas. Hanna who was responsible for bringing him here.

FALSE RUMORS STIR ACTION

Tracing of Rumors in Lindbergh Case Difficult

New York, May 19—An effort is being made in the New York area to discover the station or stations over which the erroneous reports concerning the Lindbergh case have been broadcast. Operators of the Federal Radio Supervisor here are listening in by the hundreds in an effort if the fictitious bulletins are being sent out on short wave telegraph or by stations in the so-called broadcast bands. During the last few days numerous reports from persons who say they heard the bulletins have come to the attention of the Federal authorities. Local stations have been swamped with inquiries.

Among the rumors were false reports concerning Betty Gow. None of these have also actually heard the bulletins could be found. Those who repeated them said they had heard the bulletins on short wave bands.

New York broadcasters said Tuesday that they had, in the last two days received hundreds of telephone calls from people who asked for information about the fictitious reports. None of the local stations has sent out bulletins regarding the kidnapping of the baby since the finding of the baby's body last Thursday. With this exception no bulletin late yesterday afternoon.

A RCAF representative said the NBC switchboards have logged nearly 1,000 calls. Several hundred have come in at WABC headquarters. WOR also reported dozens of calls.

Washington, May 19—W. D. Terrell, chief of the radio division of the Commerce Department, ordered radio inspectors in New York and Baltimore today to attempt to locate a "mooling" radio station which broadcast erroneous reports that Betty Gow, a nurse in the home of Charles A. Lindbergh had "committed suicide."

Radio equipped monitor automobiles will be placed on the trail of the station, Mr. Terrell said. During the last several months the radio division has detected twelve so-called "mooling" stations in all sections of the country.

B. C. I. Students Win Awards For Successful Work

VALEDICTORY

List of Prizes Presented to Scholars of Collegiate

Marking the most important occasion in the scholastic year the students of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School gathered in the auditorium yesterday afternoon for the annual commencement exercises of the institution. Graduation diplomas, prizes, trophies and scholarships were presented to their various winners and the commencement address was delivered by Rev. Dr. J. A. Vancouver, pastor of St. Andrew's church.

Mr. P. O. MacLaurin principal of the school acted as chairman for the afternoon and the programme was opened by devotional exercises conducted by Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, pastor of Tabernacle church.

During the afternoon selections by the school band under the direction of Mr. Ross Hunter were interesting items on the program.

Talented Students.

The Memorial scholarship, the most coveted award in the list of prizes was won this year by Douglas Bandler, who had the highest aggregate on twelve papers in the Junior Matriculation examinations. The scholarship is one hundred dollars in cash and as it will be remembered, is the interest on the sum collected years ago by faculty and students to found a memorial to the young men and women of the school who had served in the Great War. In the awarding of this scholarship it is interesting to note that the winners of the First Year Matriculation prize, Ethel Fenton, and the winners of the second year Matriculation prize Eileen Easton, are brother and sister. Miss Edith Elliot to whom the Governor General's Proficiency third year commercial prize was awarded won a prize each year of her course and Miss Elliot has also been presented with the Catholic Women's League prize for proficiency with the I.O.D.E. award.

Diplomas to the first graduating class of the Boys' Technical and to the Girls' Technical diplomas were presented at Commencement yesterday.

Commencement Address.

Dr. J. A. Seymour delivered the address and it was replete with the words of inspiration and advice to the graduates were received with keen appreciation by the student body. He paid tribute to the teaching profession especially to the members of the Collegiate and Vocational School Staff.

"There is no profession," he said, "including even the ministry that carries more responsibility, more nerve-wracking and exhausting moments; and soul fatigue than that of teaching. As a result interested in the moral, intellectual and cultural well-being of the community, I appreciate what you and your staff are doing in the city of Belleville."

"It is with a note of sadness, personal on my part, that I contemplate the great treasure that is yours, combined the speaker, addressing the students, "in the possession of the talented Law of Leaders in War."

Facing the youth of today, said Dr. Seymour, was the tremendous task of re-constructing the social order to such a way that brotherhood would be a practical reality. The speaker paid tribute to the Great War was partly responsible for the terrible depression of the world today and in speaking of leaders, Dr. Seymour cited the life and work of some of all statesmen, Moses.

As a soldier, teacher, poet, religious leader, law giver and one possessing a splendid spirit of humanity, Moses counselled his followers not to cross the corners of their field at harvest time but to leave them for the stranger reaping. Dr. Seymour pointed out that it was every person's duty in life so that he and have unlooked for others some happiness that may be beholden to him.

"Too much demanding of one's rights was the bane of many of the troubles of today, the jealous hoarding of what really belongs to one but which might give happiness to others. The world today is not crying so much for new things to make the wheels of industry, society, home and life run smoothly as for the little common things of Christ-like service.

"When you go out into the world" concluded Dr. Seymour, "may your influence be measured not by dollars and cents but by the largeness of the investment of life's harvest you have left."

What a figure . . . but what a skin!!

By Jolia Foster*

So much beauty wasted by failure to heed a few words of expert advice! Tragic!

WHY "tragic"? Because there are so many cases just like hers. Because no one needs to have an unsightly skin. You see, Foster's complexion can be kept lovely, youthful.

Beauty experts tell how: Simply, twice a day, apply to face and throat a generous lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water. Work well into the pores with your fingertips. Rinse thoroughly with warm water, and finish with a cold rinse. Hot water should never touch face. After this, in the morning, your make-up. At night, if your skin is dry, follow with oil or cream cream.

Hydro Should Own and Develop Power Sites Says Chairman on Stand

Hon. J. R. Cooke Called on Probe to Tell of Deal

SAW AIRD ONCE

Did Not Consider Chat About Madawaska Improper

Toronto, May 18—Integrity, the most important factor in the maintenance of confidence in a public institution, governed his actions in the negotiations for the purchase of the Madawaska power sites and for the payment of $50,000 to John Aird Jr., the Conservative chairman told the Hydro was told yesterday by C. A. Magrath, former chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission.

Mr. Cooke followed the Premier to the stand. He explained that he had become a Hydro commissioner in 1922, and had assisted in the leadership when Mr. Magrath retired. He had been elected in 1911 to the Provincial Legislature, entering the Cabinet also in 1923.

Aird Given Appreciative

The first he had known of Aird was about July, 1929, when the Commission was discussing the Madawaska deal and Mr. Aird had entered the transaction as O'Brien's official representative. Mr. Cooke never spoken to J. H. Black, E. L. Cousins or John Aird, to sell, not not knowing the latter even by sight. Nor had he ever discussed Madawaska with Premier Ferguson.

"That is a sweeping question", he said when asked if he had been influenced it from beginning to end of the transaction by any person to whom to aid Aird in his project. "But I certainly never heard anyone who might have been trying to aid him.

From the first Aird had been given to understand that a contract for power to be delivered to Hydro, that Hydro signed the plan for Hydro to purchase the sites. Mr. Cooke testified this ended the connection in the proposed deal with his associates and they had been fully released. He stated that he had not had discussed with the chairman Commission, Mr. O'Brien, however, at his fee if he stood aside and allowed direct negotiations for the purchase of the sites. The minutes and records of the commission's meeting fully disclosed the progress of events, he stated.

"I had never heard once in my life as far as I know outside this chamber," he stated. "That I think was during the session of the Legislature in 1928. Someone introduced him to me in the chamber and our meeting was quite casual. I presume he was there in the general way of Madawaska. I do not recall our conversation.

"And you did not consider such a discussion improper?"

Mr. Cooke looked surprised. "No, not at all," he replied.

He had never met Aird's partner, Mr. Aird's partner, as far as he knew, never communicated with Aird, as he knew, were carried on by the chairman with the advice of the full commission. Mr. O'Brien, however, had appeared before the commission at times, he had stated, to discuss details and settlement of the transaction.

"It was the general opinion of the commission that it should own and develop its power sites rather than purchase power," he stated. "I know of no one in the Hydro organization who held any other opinion." He had never considered or been told that Fred Gaby, chief engineer, sought to obstruct the transaction to buy power. There had been absolutely nothing out of the ordinary in the entire negotiation. Counsel then referred to Aird's name having appeared in Ottawa and Mr. Cooke giving a statement to the papers that Aird had received the $50,000 for his "option'.

Statement to Press

"Perhaps," said Mr. Cooke, "I should outline that matter. The first enquiry in which Aird's name came before me was during the Commons enquiry into Beauharnois. I was just leaving the city when someone from the Globe called and asked if John Aird had had anything to do with Beauharnois for Hydro. I said he had nothing what ever to do with it, as we never discussed that matter with anyone outside the commission.

"When I reached home at a late hour the Globe phoned and asked if the interview had been right and if there was anything I wished to add to it. I asked him what there was to add and it ended at that. The report appeared next morning substantially correct. It was a telephone interview, however, not a statement.

"Later The Mail and Empire called and asked if Aird had ever received $50,000 from us. I said yes. I think, after some explanation, he repeated over the phone, 'Aird was paid for relinquishing his options and facilitating the purchase of the properties?' and I said yes. After asking who Aird was and the purchase price of the property, he left the phone, saying also if $50,000 was regarded as a modest fee for a two-million deal. I answered that I thought it was. Let me say that it appeared in reporter's style next morning and the young man had exercised every precaution to get his facts right."

This, Mr. Cooke continued, has been the first reference to "options". The next morning the Daily Star and Telegram reporters appeared for statements but he had instructed the staff to prepare them. These statements were handed out containing the same information. They had not appeared, however, Mr. Cooke replied to himself by putting his answers under a rock near the cemetery where the ransom was paid, as directed to do in the notes.

He said three later notes did not bear the cryptic symbol which appeared on the original ransom demand, and also was in the notes received before he paid the $50,000. He was not sure, he explained, whether these last five to seven notes were "genuine," but added: "I wasn't taking any chances, so I answered them."

They were not shown to Colonel Lindbergh, he said, but Col. Henry Breckenridge, the flier's attorney, knew of them.

"I was determined not to pay any more," Dr. Cardon said in discussing the notes.

"You don't see any chin down, do you?" she asked enthusiastic said as he rode downtown to deliver a lecture. "I don't ask my favors of anyone. I know they're pointing their fingers at me, but all I wanted to do was restore that baby to his mother."

He bought a newspaper and became interested in the name. His eye spotted a headline:

"Jafsie ask retired now."

"That's not that fine," he said, reading the headline aloud.

New York Dr. John Condon declared last night he received between five and seven notes, supposedly from the kidnappers, after he had paid the ransom. All demanded more money. He replied to them by putting his answers under a rock near the cemetery where the ransom was paid, as directed to do in the notes.

Anxious Regarding Public Feeling Towards Himself

New York, May 18 (AP). — In the Bronx Dr. John Condon received last night he received between five and seven notes, supposedly from the kidnappers, after he had paid the ransom. New York Dr. John Condon declared

He was anxious to know if there was any change of public feeling toward him.

All yesterday night and day to restore that, baby," he said with a sigh, "and all I got is thankless criticism."

Commenting on his scheduled appearance before the Bronx grand jury, he said:

"I've told my story. They have my statement. If I make a contradiction they must remember I've been pretty busy and this isn't all I have had on my mind."

"Do you think I took a penny of that $50,000?" he asked. "Why I even saved Col. Lindbergh $20,000."

SPIRITUAL FIRST

The people's leaders are striving to find a way out of the present and condition of affairs which recalls much the period of the prophets who sought to point out spiritual values and to bring people back to sober thinking on the essentials of life.

It is remarkable the unanimity of thought that the way out of the present situation depends upon the proper attitude towards life. Those who speak of a new era which will have abolished many of the anomalies of present day civilization which make such disasters as the present depression bear so heavily upon the worker and ultimately scoop in both rich and poor are unanimously clear that sweeping thinking as carried out in the lives of the people is at the base of much of the trouble. His Holiness Pope Pius Eleventh likewise points out that greed, selfish stressing of nationalism, and atheism are sapping the life blood of the world today and calls his people to pray that the entire world might hearken to his message and learn therein what the attitude of the Christian Church is towards problems by which are being Sermons in all churches today bear marks of the present age and it is right that the ministers discuss social questions which have to do with the surroundings in which men and women and children have to spend their lives.

THE OLD LAWN MOWER

The lawnmower is one hundred years old. What number of backaches has this removed, though it has made more grass to cut!

The machine is a hundred years old. Some men feel that old after working through the warm night of a summer cutting swath after swath of grass. But how much older they would feel if the mower had never been invented, perhaps they would feel a hundred years old.

But the truth must be told of the mower, it has added to the beauty of cities and towns, it has lightened labor and it has given men exercise when they need it most.

The lawn mower has been motorized for larger areas as for use on golf courses, and large areas but not for the small lawn where push is still required.

GANDHI'S SEWING MACHINE

Gandhi is now running a sewing machine. What of the spinning wheel, over which the world has heard so much!

Slowly the west has been conversing the east with its dress and its mechanics, but India is one of the slowest to meet this reform, because of the conservatism of the people and their religious attention to the past.

That the West will conquer in large measure the East in the outer expression of life seems likely but the West cannot conquer the intangible something of the East, the spirit of the people, particularly its religions. Naturally India like other countries has developed many ideals, which would enrich the life of the west if they could be worked into close association with western manners and ideals.

As a matter of fact the outer dress does not make so much difference. The Japanese have adopted modern customs and yet have not given up all of their Orientalism, neither have all western nations put themselves into one common mold because the people wear western dress. And even in the West the style of dress is not quite uniform as witness Russian and Balkan peoples.

Gandhi of course in adopting the sewing machine is not doing so to prove his belief in modern methods, but is using it to make more homespun clothes so as to prevent sale of machine made British products in India but [illegible] adoption of the western [illegible] to help him out will defeat his [illegible].

SPANKING FOR JUDISTS

Spanking for nude Doukhobors is the suggestion of the Chesley Enterprise, which protests to the sending of them to jail at great expense.

Spanking is generally effective. In another form by the method of physical punishment—that is, the lash, the theft of motorcars was almost stopped some years ago.

The lash and the spanking are unforgettable. The latter is one of the primitive traditions which have proven their worth in the twentieth century.

Spanking does not unfit a man for a job as a term in jail might do with its tendency to brooding and regarding oneself as a very ill-used person. There is enough ignominy about the shingle's application and ample pain to prevent recurrence of a mental outbreak.

Imprisonment may band men together for revolutionary purposes but who could think of any army of spanked men organizing against the government to overthrow the rule of those who wear clothes! They could not get a corsyet and the rest of the people would split their sides with laughter at the sight if a majestic motivation did break out.

SIDELIGHTS

Supervised by The Lamplighter

"DON'T DESPAIR, but Cheer Up! To the man who looks up the sky's the limit, but don't mistake your wish-bone for your back-bone." Thus spoke an optimist who believes that life is just a series of cycles, good times cycles, times not so good, and better times, each one succeeding the other, and speaking the necessary balance of this wonderful thing called life which man has so encumbered with lumbering machinery that it must perforce stop at times when the speed becomes too great and get patched up for a fresh start. Life is grand and glorious and as perfect as the Master Architect can make it, only man in his haste to lead the procession gets the parade out of step at times. One such cycle as the world has just passed through, only much worse, occurred more than seventy-four years ago, and is thus described by Harper's Weekly, October 10, 1857: (Many pessimists and crepe-hangers please read and profit)

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—and the lifetimes of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so inscrutable as at this time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic and thousands of our poorest and industrious are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without the prospect of it.

"In France, the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs as usual like a cloud, dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian outbreak.

"Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom, the wisdom of honesty of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the cause of the widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity."

MAYOR JIMMIE WALKER, of New York City, is so popular that he receives many gifts from friends. A recent gift of $26,000 however, is being investigated, as being rather more a token of personal friendship without hope of return than the average human mind can comfortably conceive. Seems if some people in Gotham have more money than they know what to do with while a whole lot of "da peep" below Fourteenth Street don't know where their next meal is coming from, if any.

CALF'S LIVER, a year ago, was rated among the luxuries, and took no back seat even from caviar, that aristocratic titbit of such plebian origin, the honey and desiccated nectar. Quotations for calf's liver which formerly was given away with half a pound of beefsteak, rose to the unheard of price of twenty cents, because it was discovered by some medical man that it was a specific for anaemia, or somethin. Calf's liver was supposed to put pep in people and make anaemic husbands want to dig the garden before and after breakfast. Today calf's liver has sunk to nearly normal and can be bought locally for thirty-five cents per pound. Asked for an explanation of this spectacular rise and fall of liver a Belleville meat dealer said that since the get-rich-quick era ended so abruptly and disastrously down Wall street way with reverberations all over the world folks have no use for calf's liver as a self-starter for a heavy day's work. Another thing which resulted in a knock-out punch to the liver for medicinal purposes was the fact that a person had to eat a pound or two a day to get any strangehold on anaemia—so that's that. Some municipalities will find it necessary to economize, they can no longer afford to reduce other items of expenditure rather than impair the present high standard of secondary education.—Mail and Empire.

WHO BENEFITS?

Some enlightening figures regarding the distribution of money taken from the sale of sweepstakes tickets have just been divulged. They are the figures in connection with the now famous hospital sweepstakes, and they show that, by the time all other expenditures are made, only a small portion of the money remains for the institution on whose behalf the tickets are being sold.

Sir Herbert Samuel, speaking in the House of Commons, pointed out that the British show this condition to exist. He states that, in the five sweepstakes conducted on behalf of Irish hospitals so far, the public have subscribed the sum of £13,000,000. Of this sum only £2,-500,000 reached the Irish hospitals. Subscribers have received back in prizes over £7,700,000. Expenses and commissions in connection with the sweepstakes and the sale of tickets amounted to £2,800,000, as ascertaining for the whole sum.—Oshawa Times.

GROWTH OF MANUFACTURING

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces the publication of a special report which embodies the results of a census taken to show the increase in the volume of manufactured products between the years 1921-26. The present publication brings up to date the figures to measure of the trend of the physical volume of manufacturing production in Canada since 1926. While the value of manufacturing production has been greatly affected through the annual census of manufactures during the past five years from 1917 to 1929, the great fluctuations in prices during this period have obscured what is from many points of view, the most important aspect of industrial growth, and that is the quantity of manufacturing production. It is with this latter that quantity tends to increase from year to year, but the value of the quantity rather than the value of production that satisfies human needs. Again, it is of the greatest importance that the quantity of agricultural production which is the rapid rate than the increase of the population. If the increase of population is to be better off in the future than in the present.

The tables of this report show considerable progress. During the period under review the physical volume of production increased 50.2 per cent. While the increase of the population of Canada increased only 19.4 per cent from 9,003,000 in 1923 to 10,752,000 in 1929, an increase of 50.2 per cent. in the volume of manufacturing production is indeed remarkable. Part of this increase was due to a rise in the standard of living, and part to the increased demand shown for the more highly manufactured products.

An increase of 54.5 per cent. in the "drink and tobacco" group, 54.3 per cent. in the "vehicles and vessels" group and 53.6 per cent. in the increase of only 21.4 per cent. in the "food" group. These are the outstanding features revealed by the report. The relatively small increase in the volume of production of the food industries was not, however, due to a decrease in the country's consumption, but rather to a decrease in the exportation of Canadian sugar, butter, cheese, bacon and ham. Another striking feature is the increase of 121.4 per cent. in the output of fruit and vegetable products in Canada.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

SECONDARY SCHOOL SALARIES

"The secondary school boards of Ontario should be congratulated on the action of the Federation of Secondary School Teachers in arranging for the present year their scale of minimum salaries. That scale was established about ten years through the co-operation of the school boards, and it has been instructing into the teaching profession an adequate supply of well trained university graduates. The result has been the maintenance of high teaching standards which it is most desirable to maintain. The present action is the result of a meeting of a joint board both to boards of trustees and to the present public school teachers' agreement to co-operate in the solution of financial troubles. It is well known that some municipalities are now finding the greatest difficulty in making both ends meet. By this those municipalities the teachers are willing to forego the increases in salary schedule this year. But we hope that no municipality will take unnecessary advantage of the public spirit shown by the teachers and that there will be no general reduction in their salaries. The salaries of the secondary school teachers are rarely commensurate with their services to the community. Some municipalities will find it necessary to economize, but they can better afford to reduce other items of expenditure rather than impair the present high standard of secondary education.—Mail and Empire.

TONSILS ARE PLACE WHERE DANGER LURKS

Menace Hides in These Oval Flattened Bodies

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Everybody has tonsils, they are a source of danger and menace to health when they are diseased.

The tonsils are little oval flattened bodies, one on each side at the back of the throat. They are situated like that of the "lymph bodies" which often, especially during childhood, get enlarged at the neck. These Lymph nodes are distributed everywhere in the body, but the tonsils and are like nodes bound together by a kind of capsule, are found only in the throat.

The tonsils, like all lymph tissue in the body, have a very distinct and valuable purpose. They help to protect our system against the invasion of germs. However, since they are situated in a very vulnerable place for the germs own good is concerned, the mouth being always full of germs, it is not surprising that the tonsils themselves may be overwhelmed by infection, become badly diseased, and so become the breeding place of more germs.

Under an acute attack of tonsilitis, or inflamed tonsils, there may be a complete temporary shut off or both tonsils may remain permanently enlarged. If the first condition is followed by enlargement it is almost certain that the tonsils will become the seat of repeated acute attacks. When the tonsil tissue becomes so diseased as to be unable to filter or compose, forming pockets of pus, the spread of the bacillar inflammation as "quinsey sore throat" or "quinsey" is easily explained.

Tonsilitis is specially prevalent during the spring months. Exposure to cold winds, sudden changing weather, or generally unhygienic living may cause the tonsils to become swollen, they also always get inflamed and enlarged as an accompaniment to an ordinary cold. Measles, scarlet fever or erysipelas may likewise produce tonsilitis.

The tissues of the tonsils may become places of infection and actually produce disease germs of that there are no symptoms. Doctors call such sources "foci" of infection, and they are especially frequent cause of rheumatoid conditions in general Experiments have shown that when the tonsils are stripped from five per cent to thirty per cent in children after diseased tonsils had been removed. And of the close connection that exists between the rheumatic fever and heart disorders there can likewise remain no doubt whatever. Tonsilectomy means complete removal of the tonsils, and anything short of complete and thorough removal, gown to the very roots of the tonsils, is worse than none at all. In fact to leave a little stump or piece of tonsil may be a greater source of danger than to remove a larger tonsil whose capsule is not badly damaged.

If a child or adult has diseased tonsils they should be removed. It is merely enlarge, but with tissues capable of bad and subject to inflammation, they need not be removed.

Tonsilectomy makes a person less susceptible to head colds and sore throat, protects against infection of the lungs and bronchi and stops poisoning of the system in general. Often it helps make a child's mind strong and healthy, and usually the nervous system is improved.

Tonsils to-day are removed upon, however, when acutely inflamed, as the operation means complete removal of the tonsils, and anything short of complete and thorough removal, gown to the very roots of the tonsils, is worse than none at all. In fact to leave a little stump or piece of tonsil may be a greater source of danger than to remove a larger tonsil whose capsule is not badly damaged.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

CITY LIFE—

The Intersection of Front St. and Bridge the other morning just as the International Limited lights turned to red. Traffic came to a halt. Then there appeared on nearby barn in the rear of some big apple, a long lower about the chased a fitting bit of paper under the line of cars, the latter of a bright orange color. The alert mother cat which just then appeared on the scene, tried to put a stop to the offspring back, unsuccessfully. The lights turned green, but a few of the spectators turned while, and started to watch the kittens which had commenced to move. But just as grass commenced to cut the kittens' greatest interest, cat darted under a lurching car, grabbed the kitten by the scruff of the neck and repeated her way safely through the traffic to the walk, where a maternal lick and a pep talk was given the now silent kitten. Nine lives saved.

FRONT PAGE—

There is something so human and likable about the daily antics of the cats and dogs and pets which newspaper readers appreciate to a little human weakness, and in their attempts to fill up space in the daily the choice news events of the day, the editors are always glad to find space to any little, out of the ordinary incident, pertaining to animal life. Editor M. Tebby, the family cat, should happen to take the notion to round up a flock of baby chickens, and then proceed to mother them, that event would be chronicled in papers all over the province. She will have her picture taken, and become famous overnight. Now it appears we have such a happening here in the city, although there is some reluctance available to take the picture.

A day or so ago a spat or the cat, belonging to Mr. Carl Kessler, of 44 Frank Street, gave birth to a fine litter of kittens only a week or so ago, and went for a walk with the other members of the feline district. On her return home she brought forth to her family to meet them, but the kittens which had strayed, and which the mother cat was looking for, were missing. She proceeded to search for them, and finally found them in the rear of some premises on Bridge Street. Not satisfied with finding the kittens, she started to move them to her own home, but was prevented from doing so by the owner of the premises, who objected to the cats being moved. Mrs. Kessler, however, was determined to have her family with her, and finally succeeded in moving them to her own home. Now that the kittens are safely home, the mother cat is quite satisfied, and is looking after them in the best possible manner.

FOUR CLUBS ARE LOCKED IN REAL RACE

Bears and Orioles Look to Be Class of League

LEAFS NO SET UP

Receives Excellent Pitching. But Lose Both Games

(By the Associated Press)

With the end of the first international series in the International League, the palmy days appear to be just ahead for the league leading Newark Bears and the Baltimore Orioles, one of the four clubs locked in a tight battle for the cellanders' honors.

Since the start of the season five weeks ago, the southern clubs of the circuit have been arrayed against their northern rivals with the north coming out victorious ahead in the victory count by consistently walloping Reading and Jersey City.

Beginning today they play for a while in their home section, giving Newark and Baltimore a few shots at the league leaders, while the northerners, three of which are knotted up with Baltimore in a virtual tie for second place, must fight it out among themselves.

The fourth northern club, Toronto has shown that it is no "set-up" for anybody's ball club. The Maple Leafs got good enough pitching in yesterday's doubleheader with Baltimore to satisfy the most exacting fan but they failed to hit the ball with enough authority to win both games by 7 to 2 and 3 to 0 and joined the tangle of a half dozen clubs a half behind Newark. The Orioles are in an absolute tie for second with a few points behind Rochester and a few points ahead of Toronto. The difference in the average are due to an unequal number of games played.

Glenn Lebhardt held the Orioles to four hits in yesterday's first game, while Ken Holloway granted nine. But one of the four was a triple by Bill Regan after walks had put two men on base and it was about enough to win. Baltimore hit Frank Barnes only six times in the second contest yet it was an easy victory when Bruce Connelly hit his mates and Harry Smythe blanked the Leafs with two safeties.

The clubs scored but one run apiece all turned in single victories. Montreal doing the best job by turning back Newark 6 to 2 to make the race all the tighter. Johnny Brown held the league leaders to five hits for his fifth victory while the Royals rapped Harry Holclaw with vigor.

Buffalo's Bisons turned in a freak victory over Jersey City by an 8 to 6 victory. Jersey got six hits off off Art Jones and none off Leroy Irvin but they received 11 free trips to first and Ryan smacked a homer with the bases full.

The Rochester Red Wings had to go 15 innings to retain their tenuous grip on second place with a 9 to 8 victory over Reading. Eckert and Willis were the mound stars for the southpaw duel and Eckert scored the winning run on Jimmy Sherlin's single.

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription HEM-ROID, to relieve the burning, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in the stubborn cases. HEM-ROID soothes and heals the tissues, reduces the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this. That's why salves and cutting fail. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says HEM-ROID relieves and end your Pile misery or money back.

QUEENSWAY WILL BE FIRST CHOICE

Expect Largest Field in Years to Go to The Post

Toronto, May 19 (CP). — Some two score of Ontario's best thoroughbreds today will have their last opportunity to prove themselves worthy of starting in the 73rd running of the King's Plate, Dominion classic, when the field of 46 will be cut to less than half that number before the last must be completed then.

The first of the trials this morning was crowded with nominees for the Plate, Canada's premier event, exercising and breezing over the Woodbine track and Fairbank speedway. Only in one instance has any notable speed been shown over the route of the oldest consecutive classic in North America. W. H. Wright's entry of Gold Crest and Fragrant Gift, both three-year-old maidens have given the best performances coming within a fraction of Trentola's plate record of 2.03 1-5 which has stood since 1927.

Other probable favorites for Dominion Day consisting per-formances at the trials, are Queenswayer, expected to be first choice; Wright's Gold Crest, program stable; Thorncliffe's Bronze, which finished a close second last year ago; Harry Hatch's Easter Hatter, and R. E. McLaughlin's Sky Gazer, all have given creditable trials.

Yesterday's Stars

Tom Zachary, Braves—Set the Cardinals down with five hits.

Bill Clark, Dodgers—Didn't allow a batter to reach first for six innings in beating the Pirates 4 to 2.

Babe Ruth, Yankees—His seventh home run of the year in the 10th inning licked Cleveland 3 to 2.

Lefty Grove, Athletics—Turned in his fifth straight victory as the A's downed Detroit.

Ernest Orsatti, Red Sox— His double and four singles against Chicago helped the Sox win their first victory in Home Park.

SENATORS SLUMP

Bill Clarke of Dodgers Wins in Best Hurling of Day

By Gayle Talbot A.P. Sports Writer

Returns from the year's first intersectional strife were at hand today, and the only outstanding beneficiaries of this movement appeared to be the Chicago Cubs in the National League, the New York Yankees in the American and the railroads in general.

By sweeping all nine engagements with the invaders from the west, the Yankees had passed Washington and taken a fairly firm grip on first place. The Cubs, winning eight of 13 contests from the National League's eastern delegates, had overhauled the Boston Braves and Hack-wise had entrenched themselves at the top.

Cincinnati's larruping Reds, with but seventh home run opposing to their lusty total, and the Philadelphia Athletics, with seven victories against four defeats, were the only other teams to show a substantial profit.

Senators Slump.

Possibly the most startling development of the last two weeks was Washington's failure to fatten its standing at the expense of the visiting western clubs. Losing their last five straight to St. Louis, the Senators wound up with no better than a .500 break in 13 games and found themselves a game and a half out of first place as they faced the Yanks in a somewhat unfriendly mood at the stadium today.

The Yankees maintained their remarkable streak against the visiting clubs at the expense of the Nats, 11 to 2, on the strength of Babe Ruth's home run with the bases full in the 10th inning. In so doing, they became the first team in American League history to capture a 15-game winning streak at home, the record book discloses. The previous mark was 14, set by Boston, 11 to 7, in a slugfest that produced 18 extra base hits by the two batting pitchers.

Lefty Grove's capable pitching and home runs by Foxx, Dykes and Simmons featured the Athletics' parting victory in the series as they won 8 to 2. Sensad Jolly's hitting, "fire for fire", featured the Red Sox's fast break a six-game losing streak at Chicago's expense, 13 to 10.

National League.

Bill Clark, Brooklyn southpaw, checked in with the best pitching performance in the National League circuit, shading Carl Hubbell of the Giants 4 to 3, on four hits. Lefty O'Doul singled in the first inning and a single for Max Carey's crew.

Dizzy Dean's inning in which they scored seven runs in the fourth featured the Cubs' 6 to 4 victory over Cincinnati. Billy Terry topped the N.Y.C.L.A. attack by connecting with his ninth home run of the season.

Boston's contest continued his batting rampage as he drove in three runs to help the Phillies, 6 to 4. Three singles gave the veteran first baseman's record to nine hits in the last five games. Two runs in the game the Phils threw of their runs off Ray Benge, who was given one out of eight with two on base.

Lefty Gomez, Yankee southpaw, was credited with his fifth victory of the season as he limited the Boston Braves defeated St. Louis 5 to 3. Babe Ruth and Tom Zachary held the champions to five hits.

TOMMY POINTER GETS ASSIGNMENT

With "Peeny" Mills Will Form Battery For Opening Game

Although nothing authentic has been handed out by the management of the Belleville Nationals as to the personell of the team for the opening day, when they take on the Kingston Frontenacs at Kingston, Belleville it is almost a certainty that Tommy Pointer and "Peeny" Mills will be the starting battery with Pointer, the long range right hander from Sulphide, being groomed for the second choice.

The Nationals have been out to practise every night this week and the indications are that the team will progress plenty of batting practise before the season opens. It is also probable to pound out a victory over the Kingston Ponies. The "Nats" have never had so many young aspiring ball players out to their spring training practise as they have enjoyed this season and if numbers count for anything the Belleville locals are assured of a team capable of representing Belleville as in years past.

May 24th, weather permitting, will see the twelfth consecutive opening day in the history of baseball in Belleville, marking the regime of the Central Ontario Baseball Association League. "Yankie" Jamieson will no doubt get the call for mound duty by the Ponies, when they open the current year. Either Jimmy Ariel or Peter will be on the receiving end and the Kingstonians will be strengthened by the acquisition of Mickey Compeau at short-stop. Manager Frank Smith has not announced the full line-up of his team as yet but will before the end of this week, it is expected.

CRICKET GENIUS TOURING WITH AUSSIES

June, July and August will be red letter months for Canadian cricket followers for the Australians will be in our midst, playing test matches in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Montreal, with an itinerary blanketing the Dominion from Victoria to Montreal. Not since 1913 have the Aussies been here. Chief interest centres in Don Bradman, who is to cricket what Babe Ruth is to baseball. This 24-year old super batsman with several world's records to his credit—all world's records in cricket are much more international affairs than they are in baseball. He was the first Australian to make 100 runs in one innings and consistently, one might suppose, his season averages have been what a batting average of 200 is to Babe Ruth. Bradman, born in the little village of Bowral, near Sydney, was the son of a poor carpenter who could not afford to buy him even a cricket ball and bat. He somehow the lad managed to acquire discarded equipment and using the stump of a eucalyptus tree for a stump, practised night after night. In four years, at 16, he was making local cricket history. From then on it was just one long effort to prepare for the Antipodean and in the 1930 test matches in England he revealed the sporting world to a remarkable batsman of the highest class. A pitch of enthusiasm by his captain, Canadians will see in Bradman a young man of modest mien and boyish grin, quiet mannered by the adulation that has come his way. And on the playing fields they will see a veritable cricket genius in action, who to date is a greater run-maker than the late W. G. Grace was to the last.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

May 24th promises to be a gala day for the sport fans in this district. Bright and early on that morn there is to be the annual Public School sports day race for the Hallowell Trophy up at the Fair grounds, following this event there will be the S.C.A.L.A. meet in order for the Stroud Cup. Plans are also in the making for a one mile walk to be staged in the two festeres in the morning. Then in the afternoon the 1932 C.O.B.A. season gets in its inauguration when the Kingston Ponies come to town to do battle with the rejuvenated Belleville Nationals. The baseball bouts scheduled for that evening have been called off indefinitely, however.

Manager Chris Holmes, of the Capitol Theatre, who had the booklet form of the Fair Guide printed and gave it to the fans last night did a big job. No more run off the pre y yesterday. The booklet is in reality a grand total of 2,500 schedules which Mr. Holmes has provided for the baseball fans of this community. Each schedule is numbered and a series of five weekly drawn number at each game will be made and the prizes for the Nationals next home game.

The American Hardware Company applied for a berth in the newly proposed Belleville Men's Senior Softball League yesterday. This club makes the eighth team to officially enter the loop and the team delegates are invited to attend a meeting for the purpose of organizing properly the six groups of play on. The team to already signify their intentions of operating in this loop are Bata Shoes, Hostions, Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville Business College Ball, Rovers and Bankers. All team representatives are asked to be at the Y.M.C.A. not later than next Tuesday night ready to do business and draw up a schedule.

The Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League applied to the Parks Board for permission to use the ground adjacent to Victoria Park on which to play their league games. Should this be granted it they fall in their efforts to procure the Armouries lawn. For the second season in fact, the fact that the fans are used to that site and perhaps would not patronize a foreign field to see softball. Which all goes to remind us that the girls' loop opens exactly two weeks from yesterday when the National Girls play host to the Capitol Theatre team. Somebody had better get busy on the subject of a playing field pretty soon.

There were no more laughs than any to date both teams appearing to be trying for the box for the C.P.R. went the full seven innings while Burns tried several in an attempt to stop the railroaders seem trying it himself but after finding the wire was not high enough to keep his low ones from going over gave over to Lewis who finished the game. While White's team has been more or less of a joke, they may surprise some of the teams yet if they are able to strengthen their pitching staff, as they did some nice fielding and have some real hitters. Picton Softball Started on Way By Mayor Welch

Picton, May 19.—(Special)—The Picton and District Softball League was officially opened Tuesday night by Mayor Welch and H. E. Collins, who threw out the first pitcher and the latter at bat. The opening game was between Picton Moose and Cities service, two town teams. Mayor Welch and Sir Moose players piled up twenty runs in six innings. The Moose team made two home runs and nine runs in the first inning, seven more innings. Errors were frequent but the game was fast and interesting. There are some hard sluggers in the League this year and considerable pitching should be around-class catcher.

Albert Burns was umpire in chief and handled the game satisfactorily.

The League this year is composed of Cities Service, Picton Moose, Collegiate, Bankers and Model, Service Station, Presidents and Arthur Heffer the Chevrolet dealer.

In order to train the younger boys a junior softball league in the league is being organized. On Thursday night a meeting for this purpose is being held in the Public School when the groundsmen will be given to boys fifteen years and under.

Football Game

Cherry Valley and Picton Football teams provided a large crowd of fans at the Picton Fair grounds on Tuesday evening when they staged a game of Rugby football. The Picton team, which is entered in the Quinte District Rugby Football League, will get under way at 7.30 p.m. sharp. There are to be three classes for boys and girls and boys; junior girls 14 years and under, intermediates 15 years and under and boys 16 years over. The boys classes are; junior 13 and under, intermediate 14 to 16 and 17 and senior 18 years and over. There are to be awards in each class for girls and ten cents in each class for boys. Medals will be awarded in each case to the winner of the high-point number.

The Belleville Nationals were hard at it last night and Manager Gerow was busy putting the grooming his infield material. His aspirants were given plenty of batting practise with both left and left hand pitchers throwing to all batters.

Tonight the board of strategy will look over the playing material and as there are but three more practise nights before the opening game on Monday, the players will be driven long and hard from now on.

The Belleville Victorias, of the Bay of Quinte Intermediate baseball league, met at the "Y" last night for the purpose of trying to reorganize for the current season. Only four players showed up and the project of intermediate baseball in Belleville does not look too hot at present. The team represents Bata and is practising for next Wednesday evening at the Fair Grounds when the fate of intermediate ball hangs in the balance here if there are not enough interested players at this practise the Victorias will disband for the season.

Both the Belleville Golf Club and the Bay of Quinte Golf Club will officially open the season on May 24th. Matches have been arranged for both clubs and a gala day is anticipated by all the local lovers of the game.

According to rumors the Kingston Ponies will be minus the services of Mickey Compeau for the first part of the season due to arm ailments. Bob Elliott will be moved to short stop while Hewitt Smith will cover the third base territory when the Ponies open the season in Belleville on May 24th.

The Picton team, which is entered in the Quinte District Rugby Football League, will get under way at 7.30 p.m. sharp. There are to be three classes for boys and girls and boys; junior girls 14 years and under, intermediates 15 years and under and boys 16 years over. The boys classes are; junior 13 and under, intermediate 14 to 16 and 17 and senior 18 years and over. There are to be awards in each class for girls and ten cents in each class for boys. Medals will be awarded in each case to the winner of the high-point number.

The Belleville Nationals were hard at it last night and Manager Gerow was busy putting the grooming his infield material. His aspirants were given plenty of batting practise with both left and left hand pitchers throwing to all batters.

Tonight the board of strategy will look over the playing material and as there are but three more practise nights before the opening game on Monday, the players will be driven long and hard from now on.

The Belleville Victorias, of the Bay of Quinte Intermediate baseball league, met at the "Y" last night for the purpose of trying to reorganize for the current season. Only four players showed up and the project of intermediate baseball in Belleville does not look too hot at present. The team represents Bata and is practising for next Wednesday evening at the Fair Grounds when the fate of intermediate ball hangs in the balance here if there are not enough interested players at this practise the Victorias will disband for the season.

Both the Belleville Golf Club and the Bay of Quinte Golf Club will officially open the season on May 24th. Matches have been arranged for both clubs and a gala day is anticipated by all the local lovers of the game.

According to rumors the Kingston Ponies will be minus the services of Mickey Compeau for the first part of the season due to arm ailments. Bob Elliott will be moved to short stop while Hewitt Smith will cover the third base territory when the Ponies open the season in Belleville on May 24th.

Wheat Must be Sold but Not on Quota Basis is Decision of Manitobans

Formulates Petition to Dominion For Submission

WANT PREFERENCE

Marketing Board is Approved at Large Meeting

Winnipeg, May 19.—Establishment of a wheat quota at the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference would not be in the best interests of wheat producers, although sale of western wheat is of the utmost importance. This was the chief of six points agreed upon yesterday at a conference of Manitoba agricultural interests called by Premier John Bracken to formulate Manitoba's views for submission to the Dominion government prior to the conference.

Other points agreed upon were: Stabilization of exchange is important.

Wider markets are necessary for all varieties of Canadian farm produce.

Empire intelligence marketing board is desirable.

Wider facilities should be provided for the distribution of British films throughout Canada.

Canadian delegates at the Imperial Conference should be asked to give preference to British goods most needed by Canadian consumers, such as woollens, boots, hold articles, textiles, boots and shoes, seeds and fruits.

A special committee was appointed by the conference and instructed to sit in with a conference of representatives of Boards of Trade and industries other than agricultural at Ottawa next week. Representatives of both Manitoba conferences will first be heard by a conference of the Four Western Provinces at Regina, June 2, prior to submission embodying the views of Western Canada generally will be prepared.

Nursing Motivated by Charity Says Dr. J. A. Faulkner Speaking to Thirteen of Graduating Class

Diplomas Presented and Prizes Awarded For Training

MANY ATTEND

Thirteen nurses of the training school of Belleville General Hospital received their diplomas last evening at the annual graduation exercises of the hospital held in the Collegiate Institute auditorium. Those graduating were: —Gladys May White, Belleville; Iva May McDonald, Deseronto; Wilma May Ritchie, Bolsheviki; Jessie Richardson, Belleville; Frieda Fawn Jenkins, Picton; Marjorie Doris Grassi, Colborne; Margaret Ann McCullough, Lonsdale; Pearl Hamilton, Belleville, R.R. No. 7; Mildred Gertrude Lade, Trenton, R.R. No. 5; Laura Winifred Frost, Marmora; Mary Ann Belleville, R.R. No. 5; Mary Frances Judge, Belleville; Iva Pearl Dick, Belleville.

Over eight hundred attended the auspicious event, showing the great interest that is taken by the citizens of the city in the activities of the hospital.

The stage of the auditorium presented a charming scene, as the nurses took their places on the platform. Banked by lovely flowers behind the stage, and forming a semi-circle the thirteen graduates in their crisp white uniforms, their huge bouquets of roses making a splash of colour against the white was a picture that will long be remembered. Grouped behind the graduates were junior members of the training school.

Mayor As Chairman

His Worship, Mayor George O. Tice acted as chairman for the evening, performing his duties capably and with despatch. In his address, Mayor Tice spoke of the deep pleasure it gave him to be present on this occasion. The hospital was an institution of which all citizens felt proud. Among the most of the cleverest doctors, not only in Ontario but in the Dominion, who are aided by an excellent nursing staff, the hospital was in a very prosperous and healthy condition. On behalf of the council, the citizens and himself, Mayor Tice congratulated the graduates, who possessed, he said, integrity, character and ability. The call of Florence Nightingale they had answered nobly, and the solemn pledge they had taken they would be true to.

All Text Pledge

The programme was one of unusual interest and was opened by prayer offered by Rev. Dr. R. H. Bell, pastor of Bridge Street United Church. Rev. A. Beaudoin Payne, vicar of St. Thomas Church took the "Florence Nightingale Pledge" with the graduates, after which he solemnly repeated the noble ideals to which they are to be guided in the pursuit of their profession.

Mrs. W. C. Mikel, representing the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital of the city, had the honour of presenting the nurses with their diplomas and pins.

Gold Medallist

Miss Iva Richardson won the highest award of the graduating class, the gold medal for highest standing, presented by Mrs. J. B. Collins, B.C.O., while Miss Marjorie Doris Grassi was presented by Mr. Connor with the silver medal for the second highest standing.

To Miss Laura Frost was awarded the medal, given by the Medical staff of the hospital, for the best practical work in three years. This presentation was made by Dr. W. W. Boyce, Miss Gladys White received the medal, qualifying her for the best practical work in the Dietary Department, presented by the Dietitian, Miss Burke.

Miss Iva Kilough, the talented pianiste carried off many of the prizes of the evening. Dr. Stobie presented her with a prize for the highest marks in surgery; Dr. Connor with the prize for the highest marks in obstetrics; Dr. Cloutis's prize for the highest marks in hygiene and physiology; Dr. Bell and W. C. Mikel and Dr. Farnsworth's prize for the highest marks in Materia Medica was presented by Mayor Tice.

The Therapeutics Jury, for highest marks in massage, was presented with the prize by Miss Molndoo.

Dr. J. A. Faulkner in presenting Miss Doris Gregg with the prize for the highest marks in surgery, explained that the reason there were two prizes for this subject was that the classes were now taken by two surgeons. Miss Laura Frost received the prize for neatness, presented by Miss Marguerite Ann Fry. Patrick Miss Mollndoo, the Dr. Fry Patrick was awarded the prize by Dr. R. S. Gibson, for highest marks in children's diseases.

Dr. Conner Presents Gift

Dr. Connor presented the graduating class received a gift from Dr. Connor, and a happy event of the evening was the presentation of a lovely bouquet of roses by the nurses to Dr. Connor, who is their physician during their years of training.

Delightful musical selections and a reading by Miss Tutte were interesting parts of the programme. Miss Loma Riggs, Mrs. Morris Lavole and Mr. A. L. Sullivan contributed vocal solos and Mr. Alex Gordon a piano selection.

Address Nurses

The address to the nurses was delivered by Dr. J. A. Faulkner, president of the Medical staff. Complimenting the nurses on their tidy appearance and pleasant countenances, two necessary assets to the successful nurse, Dr. Faulkner introduced the graduates to the audience as the people to whom the class now entrusted their welfare. As future guardians of these nurses, Dr. Faulkner urged the citizens to treat kindly as their hospital guardians have in the past the young ladies, who are now placed in the wards of the institution to pursue their careers in the world.

The nurses in first motivated by charity in her choice of a profession, continued Dr. Faulkner, was for the more lasting one of the satisfaction of doing a noble thing. The simple granting of a diploma does not make a nurse. Only if she has entered training with pure motives, ideals, and studied seriously, is she now ready and properly equipped to begin her profession, a profession in which she will find that her best and her reward is the realization of duty done.

"Now as you hitting anchor on the sea of life,? said Dr. Faulkner, "there will be storms and strong winds, that will prove dangerous, but during the storm, keep your eye on that Haven of Hope and its great subject, Charity."

The programme was closed by Benediction pronounced by Rev. Dr. Bell.

ABOUT BIRTHDAY CARDS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I think I'm 36 all right if I, a girl of 15, should send a birthday card to a boy of 16 who lives in my neighbor and schoolmate for a long time. He now lives in another city. Thank you.

J. D.

Yes, it would be quite all right to send the card. Be interesting and to your old friend. Pick out an amusing one, and write a little note on it if you wish.

ALL DEPENDS ON THE MAN

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16 and in love with me. I'm 20 and also care for him very much. He is very nice to me. The difference in age will mar our future happiness? Do you advise me to let me your best advice, as everything depends upon it. I will be watchful and act cautiously.

L. C.

Please let me say that it depends entirely on the man. Are your tastes congenial? Can you enjoy the same things? Is the man a "young-old man" or an "old young man"? If he is of good deal about his own time and clothes, his health, his amusements, you may be safe to go along with.

LIKES HIM IN SPITE OF HIS FAULTS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 16 and like a boy who is a prig and very independent. For some reason he seems he don't speak to each other. Should I tell him I like him or not? I'm afraid I'm thought of writing to him, but I do not want to be thought forward. I'm not sure of being run after. I would appreciate it very much if you would help me with my problem?

Billie

No, don't tell him about the faults, because he might not forgive you, and also he might be a little glad of them. It is foolish of you not to speak, for no reason at all, and to write him and tell him how you see this boy, you speak as if nothing had happened.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl of seventeen. We live in different cities. I am 21. We spoke two or three times a year, and have become well acquainted with her mother. I am master of fact, I have reached the stage where I call her "Mother" and she likes me very much. Although I am not engaged to her daughter, because I am only 18, I wonder if it would be all right if I should send her mother a present for a growing plant on Mothers' Day?

Interested

I see that you have theories about getting along with your girl's mother, and very good ones, too. Yes, send the flowers by all means. It is a compliment she will appreciate and which will please the daughter, too.

ABOUT YOUR GLADIOLI

A timely don't to those planting gladioli bulbs this season has been offered by Mr. Alf. Symons of the Belleville Horticultural Society. Last season the gladioli in many places in Ontario were ruined completely and nearly all suffered from the thrip blight. Mr. Symons advises that the dipping of the bulbs just previous to planting in a solution made of one level teaspoonful of Paris green, no more or no less, with ten quarts of water, labelled the Paris green first to a paste and gradually add the water. If this amount of the solution is not needed the formula can be reduced to meet each planter's requirements.

NO VENDORS ON MARKET THURSDAY

Not a single vender was noticed on the local market square on Thursday morning, likely the Belleville mid-week markets of Tuesday and Thursday are being ignored by the vendors and merchants alike. The Saturday Belleville market is fast growing into one of the largest Saturday markets in Ontario.

Women's Interest In The Home

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Swollen Tissues Under Eyes

In rare cases, pouches under the eyes are an inheritance, passed along from one generation to another, the same as that annoying kind of hair that has a way of whitening prematurely. In ordinary cases the trouble can be traced pretty definitely to faulty action of the various avenues of elimination,—the skin, the intestinal tract or the kidneys, and to the destructive work done by fatigue bugs.

Puffiness under the soul lamps show up on "off" days, when a woman isn't up to standard. It's up to her to determine the cause and, if she has a searching mind, chances are she will discover it.

Fatigue isn't necessarily the penalty paid because of lack of sleep or too much physical labor. It can be a mental product, which reacts upon the physical system. A first class worrier, the woman who when she worries, worries well and thoroughly, can demolish her forces of energy, throw herself into a state of physical and mental exhaustion. What she needs is information concerning mental hygiene. When she chases out the germs of restfulness, tiredness around her eyes will smooth down, her face will cast off that tight drawn look of distress, the dull pallor will shine out again like sunlight in May.

There is a close bond between our mental and physical mechanisms. Throw a monkey wrench into your thoughts and it will kick up a rumpus in the body.

Getting down to concrete measures concerning eye-puffs, it must be said that diet is important. Eat only to the point of satisfaction. Fatigue arises the body when the stomach must wrestle with an overload of food, most especially when we are swollen. Beware of heavy foods, gravies, rich pastries. Two vegetables a day always, one green salad, plenty of fruits and fruit juices, and invariably, without fail, six glasses of water a day.

Also the eliminating work of the skin by rubbing the entire body surface with moistened salt, rinsing with a warm spray then with cold. Brisk bath can be taken in the morning, with the soap cleansing taken the night before. The human body can be a lot of scouring, and is the better for it.

Local treatment freshens one temporarily. If the old pouches look pretty bad, then there is a heavy evening date ahead, he down for half an hour with cold compresses on the eyes. Small wads of cotton will not suffice. They heat up too quickly, don't cover enough of the skin surface. Wring a large washcloth out of ice cold water and apply. Soon the cloth will be warm from the heat of the flesh. It is the reaction that eases out the swelling.

When hazel is a mild astringent, and can be used before make up is applied. Slap it on with pieces of cotton and let dry. If a foundation cream is used, it can go on atop the hazel coat.

But remember the rules; no worry, balanced diet, plenty of water, eight hours of sleep, no continuous exercise in the fresh air.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Girls and women who travel along the beauty trail, eager to display complexions free of tan, tones and healthy color, should be rainy-dailies, get out when the air is moist, when briskly to kick up a lively circulation of the blood streams. The moisture laden air, as it clings to your locks oil, Woman who lye in foggy climates have better complexions than those who live where the air is dry. So don't be a fair-weather bathing. Save the umbrella at hand and skip out when the downpour starts.

The fashionable gown maker builds from the skin out. Go to her for a fitting and she will insist upon finding out what kind of a foundation garment you wear. Perhaps, before taking measurements, she will take an anatomical survey and suggest a corselere to devise a specially made corsalet that will be flattering to the figure, holding in where flesh should be held in, molding the outline to the proper contour.

Blue-grey eye shadows are elegant on some of the blue-grey eyed darlings, being especially seductive on the Irish type of beauty with blue eyes, fair skin and dark hair. Adroitly applied, eye shadows can bestow the modern, sophisticated touch, but painted on with a heavy hand they are a total loss. Best too when reserved for the festive evening; sunlight shows 'em up.

Nothing like a jumping rope to silver down fatty tissue. Even a day make the old rope fly, at each jump raise the knee as high as ever you can. Running up stairs is a good exercise for thighs and hip reduction. Too bad the bicycle lost out to the motor car, since cycling was an effective way of dissolving fat cells that had settled on slim limbs.

Hair ornaments made of feathers are among the new offerings in beauty shops. Very chic. Not the fluttering plumes of grandma's youth, ostrich-and-paradise days, but smart clips with flat feathers set in metal frames and covered with some gun-like substance that will stand considerable heat. With hair a bit longer, as it is now, the hair ornament again becomes a decorative possibility.

STOCK MARKET QUITE INERT

Utilities and Tobaccos Weak in Early Morning Trading

NEW YORK, May 19. — Inertia continued to rule the stock market today with prices maintaining a fairly good level.

Tobaccos and Utilities, along with a few miscellaneous issues, had a period of heaviness in the morning but the list recovered substantially after midday. The market was at times sluggish, however, that price movements were rug regarded as of much significance.

In the Tobacco's American Tobacco "B", Liggett and Myers "B", and Lorillard lost a point or two, but all regained this ground apparently in the utilities, North American, Consolidated Gas, Pacific Gas and Electric sot down a point or so, then recovered partially. American Water Works was the principal seller, rallied to show a gain of like extent, and closed with a net loss. Other notable firmness, setting up more than a point, U. S. Steel, Radio Pa ent and Pennies were almost completely in the doldrums.

Sag in the Tobacco's presumably reflected recent advance estimates which had been given the guarantee figures will show a substantial decline from last year. Sellers of the Utilities also probably reflected apprehension over the May 15 Consumption figures, which were off about 13 per cent., from last year. However, sentiment considered the favorable influence of better control of production and hopes of success in the International Conference looking to prevention of dumping.

CLUB TOLD OF TOURIST HOME

Beauties of Ferguson Highway Told School and Home Club

A regular meeting of the King George Home School Club was held on Monday evening with the president, Mrs. Smith, in the chair. After the regular business, Mr. Graffer of the Ontario staff, was introduced and gave an illustrated lecture on the Ferguson Highway, and the places where tourists are met by a forest ranger and warned about fires. The way wound around picturesque lakes, teeming with fish and through primeval forests clustered with wild flowers. Twenty-four miles is a camp site, some merely with picnic tables and fireplaces, others with a more pretentious kitchen and dining room. There is no need of building fires in the woods as every mile of good wood is provided at these camp sites. Here one is welcomed to camp overnight for all seasons. Here are summer resorts that are becoming more and more popular with bathing and fishing societies on numerous lots and rivers.

The highway takes us through the new northern towns of Tumbling, Cochrane, Healey Bay, New Liskeard, and Temiskim Falls. Instead of the crude buildings one would look for are modern hospitals, schools, churches, and well laid out residential areas and business sections. Some portions of this country are adapted to agriculture, and ideal for hay and oats. Blueberries and raspberries grow in abundance, some tourists combining pleasure with work and come home with their winter supply of fruit. The settlers' homes show the progress of a few years late from crude cabins to substantial farm buildings. The government farm, in this district experiments with crops and advises the farmer. In all this region is a tourists' paradise and is becoming one of the most popular holiday regions in Ontario.

A musical selection given by some former pupils of the school was enjoyed by those present. Miss Weddern's room won the picture contest. A vote of appreciation to Mr. Graffon and musical friends was moved by Mr. Brown and seconded by Mr. J. Looker. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

PAINTER SUFFERS SERIOUS SPRAIN

Edward Goddard of 207 1-2 Front Street, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital last night as a result of an accident which occurred to him while painting a house from a ladder while working at the home of Mr. R. Lisence, Albert St.

Mr. Goddard has been engaged to do some painting at Mr. Licence's home and while stepping from the inland roof to a ladder he missed his footing and fell some six or eight feet to the ground. Mr. Goddard managed to fall on his feet and at the time of the fall only felt a slight pain in his ankle. Later he returned to his home and last night the pain in his ankle was so great that his wife was forced to call a physician who at once ordered the unfortunate man removed to the hospital where an x-ray was taken of his ankle. Mr. Goddard was removed to the hospital in the city ambulance under the supervision of Constables Ernest and Isaard.

Upon x-raying the injured ankle, however, it was found that Mr. Goddard was suffering from a badly sprained ankle but no bones had been broken. The seriousness of the sprain will keep Mr. Goddard off his feet for a few days, it is expected.

COBOURG—Declaring that street relief had been stopped they were faced with starvation, a deputation of unemployed representing about 50 or 60 who are out of work, asked the town council at its meeting on Monday night for some measure of relief.

"Council has not control of much relief work," replied Councillor W. J. Maher, chairman of the finance committee. "We have spent all the relief money and the taxes are higher because of that. The only solution I can think of is unemployment insurance. The big fellows should be asked to support those who were out of work."

That much was done. Now she must consider the newspapers and the invitations. The latter must go by hand, there was no time for Tiffany; and the list must be cut down.

In the morning she would interview the housekeeper, Olive Lee Martin, with the caterer and florist.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Stowaways, two huddled together upon a couch. The color had come back to Elizabeth's face. She could smile a little now, and she startled herself by laughing at something Lennox said. The drama had "dissolved" as Lennox termed it, burden had been taken from their young shoulders. They could even forgive— or ignore — the things Louise had put into words, the other, more bitter things she had not uttered. She was old, she couldn't understand, they were the rash in the sight of her middle-age. But they were young, and to them everything would come right.

"Tell me everything," said Henrietta in the gloomy dining room. Henrietta was chivalrously exhilarated at the prospect of the blessing ceremonies. Louise stayed in her room, writing telephoned, sending back her tray untouched. Late that night, long after she had heard them come upstairs, she rose from her desk, stiffly, and sat on old cushion. She had heard Lennox hesitate at her door. How she had listened then, waiting for his knock his touch on the knob, but he had passed on to his own room. She heard far down the corridor another door close. Henrietta's.

Now she rose and took off her clothes, putting them neatly to right in a clothes tree over a chair, turning her stockings wrong side out as she always did, folding modest shoes to her boots. She drew the cool, white linen of her night-dress over her head, brushed and drew her abundant hair, washed, opened her window. Then disregarding the cool rush of air blowing the curtains, she knelt beside her bed.

After a long time she rose again. She had not prayed.

She lay down on the big bed and drew the light cover about her. It was not cold, for March, but she shivered continuously. She sat up, threw aside and sear dreadful unspeakable outrage. She would not be beaten! For she had never seen it; she was unfamiliar with his veiled and alluring face.

She wept, painfully. She thought she was weeping for the children and her son. Hale dried her tears, and she thought of his kiss. Hale had kicked at her heart, it was a vehement flame.

After a time she crept from her bed and went to the door which communicated with Lennox's room. She crouched down beside it and pressed her face to the polished panels. Was he in that room, sleeping, or waking? Or was the room empty or him? Had he left it, stealing like a thief down the quiet, carpeted hall?

It seemed to her that against such an outrage the old home should find a voice of protest, must cry out.

Louise drowned there, half shivering and half listening, listening to his audible breathing. Once he stirred and spoke a name. She knew the murmur for a name she knew whose name. She pressed closer to the panel, dreading an answer. None came.

She stayed as she was, her braids of grayish hair falling over her retaxed bosom. Her tall angularity was as if bleached in the stiff whiteness of her decent nightgown. She bare feet protruded, bony with cold, helpless and ugly.

Crucified there, against the barrier which separated them, not daring to go in to him with this live flame eating at her heart, she crouched by his door, painfully, doggedly, until daylight.

The advanced date of the Sheldon-Hand wedding caused very little comment. People revised their engagement books and allotted an hour to the purchasing of gifts. One or two women who knew Louise Sheldon fairly well—one could call herself an intimate—said, not caring: "Going abroad? How like Louise!" Which, interpreted, implied that Mrs. Sheldon's custom of suiting her own convenience was recognized.

In the house on Washington Square the preparations went on, quietly. Louise's wire to Ella had been of so urgent a nature that Ella arrived tearful and flurried, on the first possible day and was asked to share her daughter's room.

"You won't mind? I thought, you might like it. They will have all the guest rooms, next door, and the Lennox connection will occupy the others."

Normally, Elizabeth would have been glad of her mother's company and companionship during the remaining days and night. But not now. For Hilda's sake she would look for soft reproaches concerning the contemplated "elopement," her flummered Victorian, decently vague warnings, and she would look for a shade of refined torment in the girl. She marveled unceasingly and gratefully, that her mother was so insensitive to the atmosphere of the house for Louise's solitude forced herself, Elizabeth. Yet there was nothing laughter, nothing you could put your finger on and, to the uninitiated, the small, as always, suffused.

The sisters arrived, having procured substitutes for their school positions. The Lennox connection, women stiff in black silks, liberal of jet and bugles, men heavily frock-coated after an older fashion, came rustling and tramping into the house, entirely self-possessed, full of a rather scandalized interest, bearing expensive gifts. The plain brought in with talk. No chatter with tea cups, and Henrietta was red rimmed about the eyes, but was refreshed from the last fittings, despite the two assistants who had been with her.

Much of Elizabeth's trousseau had come from the shops, an intimidable departure from old custom. The wedding gown was secured almost ready made. Worth importation, sent over as a model. The sewing room might have been busy, but trail every chair heaped with fine linen and laces, the ribbons unwinding coiled heights of satin; with fashion plates and fabrics, slippers and shoes and stockings.

Yet, don't seem a bit excited, Betty. If I were in your place I'd be out of my mind." Alice remarked viewing the pretty chaos.

Louise made her own careful plans, arranged her sailing, s for a few days after the wedding, communicated with the acquaintance who was departing at the same time.

Directly after the ceremony Lennox was to take Elizabeth to Florhurst; the rooms had been engaged.

Mrs. Howland said, demply, to her hostess, "We can't thank you enough, Louise. All you are doing for my little girl! How happy she will be! Lennox is the dearest boy and Betty will be a good wife. I have brought her up with that in mind—a woman's highest duty. She is domestic, devoted, simple in her tastes. But you have had her with you for two years now, so you know."

"Yes, I know," Louise answered, with no effort at irony. Indeed she spoke absently, amiably enough while her mind stood aghast at how little she had known.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Lennox and Elizabeth suffered dully, were subdued by the shameful knowledge of this ceremonious expediency, but they were very young. They loved, they looked forward to the long years together, they were not permanently cast down nor dismayed. But Louise Sheldon was in agony.

For the first time in her life she was compelled to bow her proud head to circumstance, to accept, to be conventional. No, not for the first time. There had been George and his Parisian sojourn to shelter her; but this was different. George had not mattered very much and after all such harborage has become, of itself, convention. This situation smattered intensely.

Her impulse on that day upon which Elizabeth had returned from Boston, had been to strike the little, shaking mouth, to blind the terrified eyes, to thrust the small, weak presence into the street. Instead, Louise assured herself, the girl belonged. And then she must spend the next few days in forgiving her son his, she insisted, sense; share in his crime against virtue and herself. She could have screamed aloud when she realized how her hands were tied. For, in that moment when she had faced them, when, between speak, when Lennox had been delivered over to her she might have made him pay every day of his life until one or the other of them died. Pay for his sin she told herself. Nor added—his sin against me.

But she was bound upon the wheel of respectability. The Name must be protected. The child must bear the Name. This was her duty.

She realized, dimly, that once he were married to Elizabeth the loss of her son would be rendered irreparable. The knowledge which three of them shared would bind two of them more closely together, would build a defensive wall against the gallikan thing. She was cognizant that once she were married to Lennox the girl could not be hurt, nor reached. They would be safe, those two, in the prison of personality which had been builded about them by their mutual love. Her hands could not destroy it, her hostile voice would not pierce its walls. She thought, grimly, that it would not long endure. It could not, that anything so without foundation must fall. Leaving them free—and desolate. Until it fell she would be compelled to stand by and wait.

When the hour came, when the walls were dun, then she would be avenged.

Two nights before the wedding a memory of winter fled through the city in petulant gusts of winds, biting rain and a flurry of driven snow. Hail followed, like the beating of brittle drums. Louise, Sheldon, rising from her desk, all her final arrangements in order, put her hand to her heart and called, weakly, for help. It was late, she was overtired, her accustomed vigor missing in on her, killing her behind her, service and unnerving had her flinging her into a worse attack than any she had known. She was ganically sound was this heart of hers, yet the pain was real enough for all that. (The doctors might call it nerves, they might diagnose it as false angina, but Louise knew better. The name she had for it was a beloved name.

Lennox was next door, ready for bed. He ran to her and helped her to bed, looked about for the drops. The vial was empty.

"Oh, but he's very ill," she cried. "Look—each pulse—get help! Please, Cousin Louise, leave the doctor in charge. I—nurses—can't put off the wedding."

Lennox spoke very decisively. "What is one thing—we won't do. The wedding will take place, and then you can nurse me, Elizabeth. How will that be?"

He smiled at her and her heart shattered in her breast. She ran from the room, her hands caught by Lennox, who followed her, she who tearing upwards from her throat. Louise looked after her, disapprovingly.

Lennox sighed, changed his position, changed back again. God, how he ached!

"Don't let her be upset," he said to his mother. "I've had bad colds before this—I'll be all right."

Of course," Louise answered, firmly. "It is very unfortunate, had now. But we will have the doctor in again, and I'll look after you tonight."

The doctor came, looked grave, shook his head once or twice and left Louise, spent the night before her son's wedding watching his feverish half-sleep, shaking up pillows, giving him his medicine, putting ice to his lips, cold cloths to his forehead. She was very nearly happy. She sat beside the bed, her back straight, her eyes upon him. A shade light burned softly. She might watch with him all night long, every feature, every flush and pallor of his face, every stirring of his long, fine body.

Practically an egg a day is eaten by every man, woman and child in Canada, the average per capita yearly consumption of eggs in the Dominion in 1931, the highest of any country, according to an estimate compiled.

Canada's gold production in 1931 reached the new high total of 3,452,176 fine ounces, valued at $47,900. This is 27.8 per cent above the 1930 production and 4.7 per cent of the total the province of Ontario accounted for 1,073,139 ounces, valued at $14,889,230.

New Brunswick can now claim the rare distinction of producing a white squirrel. It was recently caught by Jack Poland of Fredericton who first trapped it near the village of Lincoln. It has been bought by the provincial game board and is mounted and placed on exhibition.

Hon. Cairine Wilson, Canada's only woman Senator, arrived recently at Quebec on board the Empress of Australia from England through Liverpool. While in London she visited the House of Lords, but could not be admitted because of the Senate since the House was not in session.

Western pulse have been given a boost by the rains of the last days of April and harvest of the prairie provinces are cheered by the favorable conditions and good prospects of crop success, according to information summarized by the Canadian Pacific agricultural department crop report.

Following the announcement of increased ocean rates on Canadian Pacific ships on the Atlantic, one of the largest parties ever to leave Toronto at this time of year for the Old Country sailed recently aboard the Duchess of York. There were 318 in the party drawn from points of eastern Ontario, but mostly from Toronto.

The first cases of cows contracting Bang's disease on the Grand Pre Fark, Nova Scotia, farm[ed] there recently. They are from Chisholm's stock, France, the gift of the mayor of that town. Chislehurst is one of the places in France where the exiled Canadian lived after the Grand Pre expulsion.

Four stretches of New Brunswick forest reserves have been sold at the Department of Lands and Mines recently, for prices totalling $2,850, the purchases for a term of 10 years are on the Restigouche, Kedgwick, Middle Pond and Big Sevogle Rivers and prices paid are the annual ground charges.

Daylight saving time, commencing in Quebec and Ontario province May 1, occasioned little confusion on Canadian Pacific travel. Travelers have nowadays learned that the railways remain on standard time and govern themselves accordingly. The railway announced a month ago that time alterations prior to the introduction of daylight saving.

From little Norfolk Island in the South Pacific, one of the smallest units in the British Empire, an excellent sample of beans for exhibition at the Empire Products Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina July 1933, has just arrived. Norfolk Island is the scene of the punishment of the mutineers of the Bounty (1789), but it has long ago changed from a penal to a prosperous settlement. (841)

W. G. Chester, dean of Canadian railroad veterans, has just retired, in Winnipeg, after 55 years in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway and another 25 with the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors.

Excursions run by the Canadian Pacific Railway between various points in Eastern Canada have met with unqualified success. To date, some 17,000 persons have been carried on visits and holidays, over different week-ends, by this means.

The 1931 census shows 758,244 occupied farms in Canada, or 17,184 more than were shown when the count was taken in 1921. Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia are responsible for the increase, while the last-named is the lead.

Navigation opened in Montreal on April 18, with the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverburn the first trans-Atlantic ship in port. Her master, Captain Morland, receiving the gold-headed cane, presented annually by the Harbor Commissioners, for this exploit.

Passenger honors in the trans-Atlantic service also fell to the Canadian Pacific, when the liner Montclare docked on the afternoon of Tuesday, April 19, as the first passenger ship to arrive in Montreal. Thus the C. P. R. claims double honors for the 1932 season.

Liverpool witnessed an unique event on April 9, when a British boys' and girls disembarked from the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, after a special cruise in the Mediterranean. A great London daily newspaper has offered prizes for the best essays written on the trip.

Some weird stories have been told of the Canadian Pacific, but the one record would appear to be held by a Skinner cat, which survived a swim in the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, when she left England to go to New York to begin her world cruise last winter. Fussy finally deigned to show herself when the ship was half-way through the long trip. The Empress got a rousing welcome in New York when her trip was over, and the newspapermen cat was delivered in his owner, in the Southern States. (837)

"SALADA" TEA

"Fresh from the Gardens"

"A Death Lottery"

By Leon V. Almirall

"It's no use, Jim, 'twould just be suicide." As Old Pop Colby spoke, he looked at the worthy faces and dark searing eyes under the sombrero of the huge, mounted Mexicans who held their guns on him and his partner. The old prospector spoke in just in time, for Jim Prince, his young partner, made a move towards the six-gun that hung from the full cartridge belt about his waist.

When Pop's mouth opened, his leathery, fanned face seemed to crack in places from contact with Arizona's burning sun and Mojave dust. He had seen many men like the bandits who surrounded him in the parlour, but never had he seen them first. This time, being in a part of the country which had been unusually free from roving bands of Mexican thieves, Pop and Jim were now to pay the price for their carelessness.

"That's no good yawping about our hard luck, young fellar," Pop continued, "They got us, and as for these white-toothed, coffee-colored hombres would just as soon kill us as not."

Except for this youth, the young-er man to whom Pop spoke was in appearance his exact counterpart. Old corduroy trousers sank into the tops of high laced boots, a worn gray flannel shirt opened at the tanned throat of the wearer, an old wide-brimmed Stetson, shoved carelessly at least had Jim Prince and Pop Colby met life with the same desire.

The leader of the four Mexicans slid from his saddle and lifted up an old gunny sack full of nuggets. He hefted it in his brown hands, his face lit with an evil smile. Here, he thought, were a couple of Gringos who had found pay dirt, and almost got away with it. Almost but not quite.

It was lucky chance that had sent him and his followers dog-trotting their horses through this country. Luck, too, that his keen eyes, always scanned for the slightest suspicious noise, had caught the ring of pick against rock. Then, in true fashion, he had snaked his way through the mesquite and grease-wood towards the sound, located Pop and his partner, and the rest had been simple.

Pop and Jim stood hard-eyed under the guns of the three other bandits, while their leader with a grunt threw the sack of nuggets over his saddle and gave his orders.

At once, one of his followers slipped from his high-backed saddle to the ground, approaching Pop and Jim. He jerked their guns from their holsters, ran his hands over them for other weapons, and returned to the others with the captives' guns in his hands.

Then, with a curt command and fair enough English, the leader motioned Pop and Jim to come forward, leaped into the empty saddle of the man who had taken their guns, and, with the other two mounted men escorting them, the fourth man walked behind, leading his chief's horse, with the sack of nuggets on the saddle.

"What do you reckon their game is, Pop?" whispered Jim as they walked slowly along before the horses of the Mexicans. "Stick 'em up, car detected at his young partner's voice a slight tremor. "Not that, boy, not that. The boy was young, and life was sweet, or had been, until this bunch of Greasers had captured them. Out there wailing was a wife and a small son. In them the Grim Reaper's scythe curved close....

While for Pop Colby of Yuma—well, real life was behind....roaring guns, cursing men, beautiful dames and pouring pottes of gold dust—he'd seen and heard it all. If this was the final chapter in his book of life, he'd thumb the last page.

Just as Jim was about to put his question to Pop again, the leader ordered a halt. The group stopped before an abandoned prospect hole in front of which still stood a charred old black iron pot.

Pop seemed to come to with a start, as the three Mexicans leaped from their saddles.

"Jim, Pop said softly," these kind o' bombres generally just kill th' fellers they grab and keep it with the loot. Fast work's their middle name, but now I thinks different."

"How different?" asked Jim nervously.

"See that old pot, Jim, and that Greaser goin' over to it," replied Pop. "Well, watch him."

It was the leader who walked to the black iron pot. He now laid down stick his hand into his pant's pocket, and, when it came out, it was closed. I hovered over the pot for a moment, and then Jim heard what sounded like small pebbles falling into the metal bowl.

"Pop," Jim whispered "them's beans that Mex's droppin' into that pot." Yep, black and white beans, that's it's and old bandit custom, they sometimes use for their idea of justice and relievin' their conscience. Provided, of course, you believe such hombres has that."

Then the old prospector went on: "An I was a-figurin' on them beans is white and some is black. You walks in an' you pot sticks in your hand and draws. If you gets a white bean, you goes free. If you gets a black one—well, you goes, but not free."

The grinning Java-colored faces of the Mexicans watched their victims move. They had seen this done before when he wanted to make a play. And they knew just how it would end.

"Go up to the pot, you Gringos," said the leader. Pop and Jim did so while three bandits crowded them close. Jim's lips were white under the tan of his face. His blue eyes blazed a bit, and he watched Pop closely, and kind of a chance was still a chance to the hardy souls of desert men, young or old.

"Now," said the bandit leader, "you first. I had a chance for your lives, just to show you that we weren't to be fair. You harbors chi-chi gray hair, you draw first. If you get a white bean, you go free. Same for you, muchacho.

Pop Colby stooped over the pot, and his hard-knuckled old hand dove down and came up with the pot on it. Whaat! He socked it down on the head of the leader. Jim, who had his hand straight into the body of the Mexican next to him, and felt the bullet from the man's drawn gun graze by his head. Pop was already on top of the third bandit behind the fallen leader, shoving the brown hand that held the six-gun up into the air. Again a bullet whined into the desert. Pop's fist caught the robber's chin right and the Mex went over backward like a felled ox.

Jim in the meantime, was all over the fourth bandit who was paralyzed with the events that he hardly put up a fight. Pop stuck a gun he "borrowed" from his last victim into the Mexican's back, and that was that.

"Quick, Jim, grab the lariats often their saddles, an' I'll hold 'em covered." The walnut butts of the six-guns that had been Jim's and Pop's seemed to belong there. At least, the Mexicans must have thought so as they slowly came to, and got the lay of things. Jim picked loose the lariats and was back on the jump.

"Truss these birds up!" Pop yelled. "If one of 'em peeps, I'll crown him with walnut, which same is th' only kind of crown he oughter get."

The job done, Pop unloaded all but two guns, stripped off the full cartridge belts from the Mexicans, placed them on the horn of one saddle and flung the empty guns into the mesquite.

Then he and Jim climbed two of the best horses. To the accompaniment of Mexi curses, they rode on their way.

"Say, Pop, how come you took such a chance as you did?" asked Jim.

"Well, you see, son," replied Pop, "the beans in that pot was all—black!"

Japs and Chinese Meet in Battle

Harbin, Manchuria, May 18—An armed skirmish between Japanese and Chinese insurgents in which both sides lost heavily, raged today along the north bank of the Sumrari River, just north of here.

The battle began yesterday evening.

The insurgent force, with 10 field guns, attacked the Japanese position at Nenjiang, opposite Harbin, and the fighting continued into the late morning.

The Japanese had lost, 18 dead by that time, most of them killed by the fire from the Chinese field guns.

MOTORCYCLIST'S FACE LACERATED

Mr. Vic Wardle, of 52 Moira St., West, purchased a motorcycle last evening, or intended to purchase one after he had tried it out, and then things began to happen. When he mounted the machine and started off, he had a little trouble with the throttle, but managed to get it under control. Then he came to a corner and decided to turn around. He did so, but in doing so he ran into a tree. The tree stopped the machine, but the man continued on across the road. This morning Dr G. S. Cronk reported nothing more serious than several lacerations on the face which required four stitches to close.

A new gas-fired machine that dries wet cotton direct from the fields, is expected to prove useful to growers in rainy and foggy sections.

ACROSS CANADA 49% OF MOTORISTS PREFER GOODYEARS

IN BELLEVILLE 60% Prefer Them

Two Independent organizations took a "vote" of tire preference in Canada. The question motorists were asked was: "If you were buying a new tire today what make would you buy?" Motorists of all classes, in cities, towns and on farms voted.

Goodyear Tires headed the poll with two and a half times as many votes as were received by the tire which took second place, and twenty times the average vote for all other makes. Of the total number of votes cast in all Canada, Goodyear Tires received 49.29%.

But in the City of Belleville Goodyear Tires made an even better showing than in Canada as a whole. 60% of the voters in Belleville expressed a preference for Goodyears.

In Belleville it is more true than ever that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

MAY 26TH IS DATE SET FOR PROROGATION

Parties in General Have Agreed on Date

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18—Preparation of parliament towards the end of next week is the expectation of the government, according to reports current in well informed circles here Thursday. May 26 or the following day at the latest, is mentioned as the date on which the session will end. It is understood that this question was discussed at the Conservative caucus today, and hopes were pinned for prorogation on one of these two dates. Agreement with the official Opposition is believed to have been reached on that point, but the attitude of the Progressive and of some individuals of the Quebec Liberals is uncertain.

WORDS DANGEROUS, EVEN IN PIGSTYE

Strong With Dumbells and Also Words

HAMILTON, Ont., May 18—Some months ago, Art Bone, charged with assaulting Mrs. Annie Hall, told magistrate Vance what a strong man he was and how many heavy dumbells he could lift. His worship then advised him to keep the dumbells and have the belles alone.

He did not heed that advice, and today he faced charges of using insulting language to Mrs. Hall and stealing some photographs of her.

Mr. Bone lives near the Brantford Highway and Mrs. Hall resides nearby. One day Mr. Bone strode into his pig pen, drew himself to his full height and launched a stream of invectives at Mrs. Hall.

"And I can say what I like in my pigsty," he told the Magistrate.

"You can, so long as you address your remarks solely to the pigs," retorted His Lordship.

One year's suspended sentence was the punishment inflicted.

LIGHTNING PREDICTED.

Canadian weather experts predict for 1932 an unusually high number of lightning storms under such dry conditions as invite forest fires. This means that forest fire rangers, greatly reduced in number during 1932, will have to depend more than ever upon the public for active aid in reporting and subduing outbreaks.

CAR BUYER GIVES 87 DAYS OF WORK

No Other Purchase Sets So Many Wheels Turning

Ottawa, Ont., May 19.—Canada will enjoy normal conditions only when the automobile industry is brought back to normalcy, H. A. Brown, vice-president and general manager of General Motors of Canada, Limited, declared in an interview here recently.

Citing the ramification of the industry into every part of Canada's economic structure, Mr. Brown said that there is nothing else which can buy which directly supplies work and wages for so many people in so many places and so many different industries and professions as the automobile.

The effect of a new car purchase on the labor market was illustrated by Mr. Brown in the statement that a new car represents an average of 87 days of gainful employment to workmen and manufacturers. That means the equivalent of three and a half months of steady time for a man on the basis of a six-day week. The figures are from a report made to the Dominion Tariff Board by A. Cook, Professor of Economics, McGill University.

"It has been estimated that one-third of the people now employed are in a position to buy a new automobile right now," Mr. Brown said. "What does that putting it on sale mean to them? The fact remains they can afford to but haven't. Yet if only one out of ten of those who buy would buy, the automobile industry would immediately be restored to a healthy state of activity — producing 125,000 cars a year and employing more than twenty thousand men outside of the hundreds of others employed by retail sales organizations."

Mr. Brown commended the various movements designed to put idle money and idle men to work. She then went on to discuss the direct relation of the automobile industry to the economic welfare of the country.

The business of building and selling automobiles was in 1929 Canada's fourth biggest industry," he pointed out. "It is so big that few people even dream of the extent to which it affects almost every other basic industry in Canada.

"There are 200 Canadian companies supplying parts to the automobile industry. The industry consumes, in average times, ten million dollars worth of iron and steel; 2,- 500,000 square feet of plate glass— over eighteen million board feet of lumber—over three million dollars worth of upholstering cloths and other materials—a large proportion of all the nickel and lead produced—and almost 50 per cent. of all the rubber —to say nothing of paying the railroads millions of dollars a year for carrying thousands of carloads of freight.

"Thus, when you buy an automobile, you are not only giving employment to men in automobile plants and garages, but putting men to work in every province in the Dominion. You are sending the miner down deep ground to dig copper, or iron, or nickel, or lead and he begins to work because of you.

"You are keeping lumbermen busy in the forests of British Columbia and in the mills where the timber is sawn. You are calling the steel worker back to his job—and doing the same for the men who work in glass factories and tanneries, foundries and chemical works.

"You are making the wheels of the railroads turn and—well, it's just like the house that Jack built. You would mention hundreds of other kinds of workers whose hands would be busy again, but it can be all summed up in a single sentence: There's work for those who buy and which directly supplies work and wages for other people in so many places as an automobile."

KIDNAPPING BILL IS ACCEPTED BY HOUSE

Washington, May 18.—The Cochran Bill providing for the death penalty or life imprisonment for the kidnappers was approved favorably by a United States House of Representatives Judiciary Sub-Committee.

The Bill would forbid the transportation of any kidnapped person in interstate or foreign commerce.

It would leave to the discretion of the jurors whether the death penalty or imprisonment from one year to life would be imposed on defendants convicted of kidnapping persons who are held for ransom for either money or other consideration.

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT"

Applying Psychology

By Madeline Livesay

Patsy Gale absently turned the page of a textbook on psychology and a little wrinkle frown creased brow. College would open on the 15th of October, but she didn't see how she could get away, the way things were. Why did people have to be so unkind anyway! Her gaze rested upon her Uncle Herbert, a well groomed man in the early forties, who was reading a highly accented letter and wearing sorrow in his contents.

From some silly flapper! Patsy thought scornfully, while a very beautiful woman like Margaret was left to eat out her heart in loneliness. Why couldn't Hubert see how splendid Margaret was? For that matter why couldn't Margaret show him?

Patsy watched a slender figure in white disappear down by the willows and at that moment Hubert went to the hall phone and put in a long distance call.

"Something tells me I'd better forget my scruples and listen in," Patsy decided, and took up a point of vantage when the call was put through. She heard Hubert's voice with a bewildered note:

"But sugar 'pie...Heavens, sugar 'pie'! That's going to be awful! You know your promises...Well what if he did? He's just a dancing fool with heels instead of a brain... Hurt his feelings! It's a laugh. Why that flapper wouldn't give him the time of day if he didn't have a car...Oh! I'm sorry, honey, I didn't mean it. Forget it. Yes, I'll be there. Oh! Darling, I'm so glad you're coming. Yes, and I'm going back to school." She hurried in before he could finish her quip. "Yes, I know Margaret is our secret, and we love her dearly, but she is also a fairly young and most attractive woman, and it would place her in an awkward position if you came home for week-ends with just the two of you in the house." She had his attention now.

"But what would I do?" Hubert demanded. "Traveling isn't so hot from Monday until Friday...but with my golf clubs to rest up...."

"That," Patsy smiled, "is one of the penalties of being a bachelor. Just because you're always with Margaret to make a fuss over you—oh yes, she does—is no reason why she could go on forever."

Hubert considered the matter and then brightened. "Margaret could have some other woman here to live—company you know—and every thing would be all right."

"Quite right for you," Patsy's tone was faintly derisive, "but you must remember that Margaret has been tied down for ten years and she may want to lead a life of her own. We can't allow our selfishness to stand in her way. She has been offered a position at the Seminary, and of course, she may marry."

"Marry!" Hubert's tone was surprise, "Why she has never given me a thought," the very suggestion seemed to be annoying.

"Don't be too sure, Mr. Hendly—the new Minister—is here all the time and anyone can see what he thinks of Margaret. He relies upon her for everything, and he has three very little girls, you know, Margaret would be the perfect wife for him...such a splendid housekeeper and manager...."

Hubert scowled. "Preachers' wives have a mighty hard time and I don't like the idea of Margaret being sacrificed."

"I wouldn't call it that," Patsy continued, "it would be a very full and interesting life...but of course she made decide in favor of the chaperone-hostess position at the Seminary. The only trouble there is that the work is so confining we'd never get a chance to see her until we mustn't consider ourselves."

"No, of course not," Hubert agreed almost too emphatically. "All the same neither course sounds very desirable to me. To turn Margaret over to a bunch of boyhens."

Patsy rose and dropped a curtsey. "Thank you darling; such a charming way to describe the modern school girl!" Then she sobered. "Seriously, Hoxy, you really mustn't ask Margaret to stay on here. The very fact that you two have always been so companionable is the more reason you can't stand in the way of a happy marriage...or successful career, perhaps. You have your work and outside interests. Margaret would have nothing."

Hubert sighed "You may be right but somehow I can't imagine Margaret wanting more than this...." His gesture embraced the room.

Patsy said gently: "It's because she gives herself so generously."

After a while Hubert rose. "Think I'll drop in and see Fred Abbott."

An elfin smile puckered Patsy's mouth. "Be prepared for the worst, if you do. That flapper wife of his is leading him a merry chase. This afternoon in front of the bank she called him a fat, old fool, all because he didn't see the necessity for a new car."

Hubert looked genuinely concerned. "As bad as that?"

Mercy yes. But then any man of forty five who marries a girl of nineteen deserves what he gets.' Patsy smiled a yawn. "Isn't it amusing how a man thinks he can wait until he is middle aged and then settle down with some sweet sixteen! He can usually get one...so many girls hate to work...but he'll have to say it with money the balance of his days. Poor Fred is just finding it out."

Hubert stopped a perspiring brow. "I...I think I'll take a walk," he said weakly.

"If you happen on Margaret," carelessly, "you might mention that Dr. Hendley is calling at five. I believe she went down by the river."

Hubert nodded and behind his retreating figure Patsy danced a gay little jig.

But two hours later when a masterly Hubert and a shyly radiant Margaret stood before her, pulling, she was all astonishment.

"You—you don't mean..."

They nodded and Patsy gave both her embraces. "You rascal," she chidded her uncle, "putting it over on us this way!"

"I couldn't do it without her," Hubert declared. "From now on I'm getting the road and taking over the home office. We are going to have a real home."

"And I'm going back to college," Margaret said.

But she said it to herself.

NATURE'S OWN HUMIDIFIER

A live tree is about one-half water by weight. An acre of maple trees evaporates about 2700 gallons of water a day. Pine and spruces evaporate about a tenth as much. Such a constant discharge of water influences rainfall over the forest and area adjacent thereto. The soil beneath a forest like trees is never entirely a thing as fast as soil in open country. Thus it comes that deforested land is a bad feeder of streams, giving off its water content rapidly and dangerously, whereas the streams fed by adjacent forests maintain their level and purity the whole summer through.

A penny saved is an example to the other ninety-nine cents.

PEACOCK IS BLAMED FOR HELP GIVEN

Fake Negotiator Accuses Dean of "Continually Urging Him"

DESIRED TO DROP

Curtis Says Dean Was in Case For Publicity to Be Obtained

Hopewell, N.J., May 18—The uprooting of a python by a stiff current released from John Hughes Christ has indicated that the police were convinced the time and place of the murder of the Lindbergh baby was in Hopewell, N.J., between 8 and 10 p.m. on the night of March 1, instead of midnight as stated by Curtis.

Curtis' statement said he "had expressed a desire to take part in negotiations on March 15 "because of my feelings that the whole thing was untrue," but "carried on because I had been continuously urged and encouraged by Dean Peacock, who was enjoying the publicity that he was receiving from the newspaper stories."

At another point Curtis said: "Many of the stories, manufactured by Peacock, were given to me without knowledge of their untruthfulness at the time he released them for publication."

Dean H. Dobson-Peacock and Lieut.-Colonel Guy H. Burgess, of Norfolk, Va., were Curtis' associates in the handling.

Holds Dean Was Responsible

Curtis' statement made no engagement by which public announcements of the negotiations exactly were then limited to the naval Burrage, the Dean and himself, responsible for stories that were unfounded and untrue."

Curtis termed "another bid for publicity" by the Dean the latter's story of how he had been engaged in a New York Hotel on a visit to meet the Lindbergh baby.

"Either I said, or the Dean said, that if this case ever came to trial or other action we can always say we were working on a clue," Curtis declared. "And the Dean said, 'That's right; we can never be criticized on anything we did.'

"I know from my experience with the Dean that the only thing he has said throughout the entire matter was for the purpose of creating publicity, and the more of that he got the better he liked it."

Dean Speaks

Norfolk, Va., May 18—Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, returning here last night a charge made by John Hughes Curtis that he had urged his associate to carry on the faked Lindbergh negotiations made against the will of the principal negotiator.

"It is absolutely untrue," the former Canadian minister said. "I don't know Mr. Curtis that well. Where is that coming from anyway?"

When told further that it was a new statement made by Mr. Curtis, Dean Dobson-Peacock repeated: "Well, I don't believe he said it."

Dean Dobson-Peacock said the negotiations were not under way on March 15 as Curtis said in his new statement, said he expressed a desire to drop his activities, but had carried on because I had been continuously urged and encouraged by Dean Peacock."

"That is untrue," he said. "We shot even start the negotiations until after March 15, when we visited Colonel Lindbergh."

The minister refused to comment on further portions of the new statement.

VERIGIN CAN BE DEPORTED

Attorney-General of B.C. Says Leaders Not as Followers

Victoria, May 18—(CP)—Whether our persons are writing to the newspapers to demanding the deportation of tax-breaking Doukhobors, but officials of the Attorney-General's department explain it is impossible. They said the Doukhobors had been brought into Canada by the Dominion Government under an agreement which prevents their deportation. The undertaking can not be broken and covers all the colonists who entered the country at that time.

Their children having been born in Canada, cannot be deported either. Peter Verigin, the Doukhobor leader, now in jail, is subject to deportation since he came to Canada years after the original migration and is not protected by the original agreement. The Canadian Government deport Doukhobors, the British Columbia authorities would have recommended this course long ago, it is said.

Appeal to Hague

Vancouver, May 18—(CP)—Doukhobors facing imprisonment for nude parading have written to the Hague and various public organizations, including the "anti-Militaristic Bureau of The Hague," protesting against their treatment.

In addition to the "anti-Militaristic Bureau of The Hague", reads: "two Doukhobors, Council of Freedom of Canada—appeal to you," runs the message, "Please raise your voice in the name of the trampled truth. Seven hundred in Jail. More than half already sentenced to three years imprisonment, the same conviction awaits the rest—just for appearing nude in protest against brutality. Our children forcibly taken away from their elders. Please take this matter seriously or you will be guilty before God and idealists. Remember our struggle is truth. If you are brothers of Christ you can not be silent.

What a Successful Merchant Thinks About Advertising

"Advertising is the life blood of an institution if properly handled," believes Richard P. Chapman, successful mid-western department store retailer who has doubled his business during the past few years in spite of chain-store competition.

Advertising should be the last expenditure cut and the first to be increased, is the action that he gives in an article in The Rotarian magazine to merchants trying to meet present day conditions.

"This does not mean that all advertising is good," he declares. "Neither does it mean that any form of advertising will continue to produce in the future simply because it has produced in the past.

"In the careful consideration of all factors which affect the future of good business, the merchant can well afford to devote considerable time to the study of advertising. In many cases it has been used as a shovel to heap out merchandise goods instead of as a spoon to feed the customer desired merchandise.

"All types of advertising must be studied constantly in an effort to ascertain that which serves to the advantage in acquainting the store and its merchandise with the prospective customer in its trade territory.

"The amount to be spent," he continues, "should be determined as part of a future budget. Good authorities vary as to the proper amount, but it generally runs from two to five per cent. of sales. Once this amount is determined, it should not be arbitrarily spread over the entire year but kept liquid to take advantage of either increase or decrease in volume as the year progresses.

"Money available for advertising should be carefully filled to the mediums best suited both to the business and to the amount allotted. A program should then be laid out far enough in advance to permit the purchasing of merchandise and the correlating of it with advertising. The display window and the interior displays. If followed carefully, this plan gives pre-testing a real message and it will produce. Profits are the result of advertising, but not all advertising is profitable.

Ship's Carpenter Other Helpers Preparing for Boating Season

Launches and Yachts Are Being Overhauled at Harbor

Although yachting and boating are not as popular as they used to be since the shore of the Bay of Quinte there is still considerable activity in those lines down in the Belleville harbor today. Under the spell of a bright warm May sun the various boats, launches and rowboats are quite busy just now and the ship's carpenter has been called upon to unleash all his skill and craftiness around Belleville waterfront of late.

A slight, which only the old timers might enjoy can be observed most any day now as the season for launching the different crafts draws nigh. Some yachts and launches have already been launched and are anchored proudly in the shelter of the Belleville harbour while others are still on the dry-dock being groomed for the ever approaching season.

Starting at the C.P.R. railroad crossing plenty of activities in the marine business can be observed when as soon as the visitor reaches Jack Robin's boat house until he has walked to the Carlisle boat ramp of the government dock nothing but busy seamen and ship's carpenters can be seen working. Motor boats are being overhauled, outboard motors can be seen being tuned up, yachts, launches, skiffs and canoes are undergoing their annual spring cleaning, when they are being scraped, varnished and painted so that they will present a picture which no artist can paint when they are moored majestically in the harbour.

Own Particular Line

Each individual boatman seems to have his own particular line of work from the small owner to the boat builder, who is finishing his craft for the coming season. Even the Oriole IV., owned by Mr. Geo. H. Corderoth of Toronto, and the flagship of the Gun Club of that city, is being groomed for the yachting season. Two derelicts can be seen in the Belleville harbour, however, and they are so far immerged that one cannot distinguish the names of them. They are both fine looking craft and have seen the day when they were the pride of some wealthy yachtsman. DRACULA COMES BACK IN FILMDOM'S GREAT THRILLER

A half-demented doctor intent on quenching the blood of a gigantic ape with that of a living girl, animates the revivifying story of "Murders in the Rue Morgue," Universal's strange drama coming to the Belle Today for two days on the two feature program with Sidney Fox and Bela Lugosi in the leading roles. It is the famous Edgar Allen Poe story rejuvenated for the screen. Director Robertson says "It is a Dracula" and "Frankenstein" rolled into one and then some together in an ice cream freezer."

The story is laid in Paris in the year 1840, and the cast, including Dr. Mirakle, impersonated by Lugosi, causing the death of a number of victims in his mad experiments, until the dumb affection of the gorilla is attracted by Miss Fox, in the character of Camille L'Espanaye. Mirakle, feeling that Camille will form an ideal subject for further experiments, kidnaps the girl with the assistance of the ape, and the exciting events, it is said, make of "Murders in the Rue Morgue" the most gruesome motion picture in the history of the talking screen. The climax of story takes place on the roof-tops of Paris, in scenes which are said to be filled with suspense and flesh-creeping.

According to advance reports, Lugosi makes the character a more menacing figure than "Dracula," the role in which he created a sensation last season, and Miss Fox brings to the screen the high ability and girlish beauty which have already marked her as one of the coming stars of the talking picture. "Murders in the Rue Morgue" was directed by Robert Florey, and other prominent roles in the picture are played by Leon Waycoff, Brandon Hurst, Bert Roach, Betty Ross Clarke, Noble Johnson and D'Arcy Corrigan.

Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts, vaudeville favorites, are co-starred in Universal's "Reckless Living" which is the second feature offering on the program. Slim plays a slightly under-the-weather speakeasy patron and Marie portrays a smart-talking manicure girl. They support Ricardo Cortez, Mae Clarke and Norman Foster in the film of betting and race tracks. Cyril Gardner directed the picture from the stage play, "On Up and Up."

The popular Belle News Reel and a clever Talkartoon will be exhibited as the program. Regular prices will prevail.

At The Capitol

THE BIG TIMER" AND "LET US BE GAY"

From small town chump to big town champ and back to where he started, another hit story and the usually primed to start, the climb to success all over again—that's the story told with much heart interest, sympathy, thrilling punch and boisterous comedy in "The Big Timer," featuring Ben Lyon, Constance Cummings and Thelma Todd at the Capitol Theatre, Friday and Saturday.

Eddie Buzzell, during his first feature length film, proves that being a Broadway star comedian has its advantages when it comes to making a picture move with speed, snap and laughs. "The Big Timer" is given with a warm human quality.

Robert Riskin, who wrote the story, dialogued and dialogues has taken a young chap who wants to get into fighting and to own a whole string of lunch wagons. At first fighting is merely a means to an end. Then Monty Baldwin, a determined young lad who has her heart set on marrying Cooky and makes him a fighter, takes him in hand.

Ringy knows as much about the fight game as her Pop, a fight manager, and when he frees an accidental death Honey runs his affairs and Cooky fights. But the gang won't let a girl manage them and they ride Ringy out. The nobody left but Cooky, a mere sparring partner, so that when a bout comes along Honey gives Cooky his first chance. She gives him good advice and severe training and he wins. That was the last time Cooky mentioned lunch wagons! From then on his wagon was hitched to a big time star.

With the faith of youth and experience in the future, Cooky marries Honey and they ride on royally to local success that they think the world is their oyster. They go to New York and reach the starvation stage before Cooky gets a big manicure girl. They support Ricardo Cortez, Mae Clarke and Norman Foster in the film of betting and race tracks. Cyril Gardner directed the picture from the stage play, "On Up and Up."

The popular Belle News Reel and a clever Talkartoon will be exhibited as the program. Regular prices will prevail.

Scene from the super-shocker, "Murders in the Rue Morgue," featuring Bella Lugosi (Dracula), and Sidney Fox as the Belle today and Friday, with Ricardo Cortez and Mae Clarke in "Reckless Living" (Double Bill).

Cooky had always been a glutton for punishment. "Aw, what's a face?" he says late in the film to comely Kay Mitchell, a gorgeous beauty from glamorous Park Avenue and gets ideas that are befitting his name. He insists on not guarding his face that he may take a fighter.

How Cooky gets the licking and the money, the stirring thing "The Big Timer" is an exciting, happy thrilling film play, the boy with fun and understanding. Constance Cummings combines sweetness and strength in an unusual role and Thelma Todd is a buxom charmer.

"The Big Timer" is a picture that anyone seeking to be amusingly entertained should take time out to see.

Norma Shearer

Norma Shearer and Marie Dressler appear in "Let Us Be Gay" on the same programme, making the performance one of gigantic proportion.

Tonight, Loretta Young appears in "Play Girl" for the last time.

LEAGUE VOTES AGAINST SHOW

Refuse to Allow Their Diamond to Be Cut Up

Trenton, May 19 —(Special)— Should the Belle Theatre Shows be allowed to operate in Trenton for a week starting May 30th? This was the argument in question yesterday afternoon at the town hall, the meeting called at 2.30 p.m. and lasted until 5 without anything being decided. The Mayor and a number of the councillors were in attendance, but there is being brought here by the Canadian League and they are given a guarantee of $250.00 for their diamond for weeks proceed. The local Softball League has put a great deal of trouble and expense to get a diamond and stands in shape where they can have a real ball park. Now the League are asking that they give way to the Slim's carnival for a week. The boys are loath to do it and at first did not hesitate to say so, suggesting other sites where the show could be held, but on the whole split the League and Slim's as well as the Softball League have been given a written letter from the council saying that they might allow the show here but the letter did not state any particulars, but referred to the consideration of the League that having put the park in first class shape that they have a prior right.

The money derived from the show by the League would of course go to the worthy cause, but then they only get a certain percentage of the money, the rest goes to Slim's shows.

Softball has taken a real hold here this year and the boys have shown by their playing that they have put some hard work into the game, to have the location changed now would disrupt the league for the remainder of the season. Councillor Alyra pointed out that a large city like Belleville refused to allow any such shows to play in the city limits in any of the parks and he was heartily in favor of them leaving the Softball diamond as it is. Councillor McClung said he would rather the town gave them a grant of $200.00 down to them in town. Bob. Heath and E. E. Wiggins acted as spokes for the League and their cause hotly.

Finally the Mayor and Council left the meeting, so then it was up to the Softball League to come to terms with the Legion or refuse entirely. Father Buckley, the president of the League decided to call a meeting of the executive and team representatives to vote on whether they would give up the play grounds for a week or not. A vote was taken and it was decided by an overwhelming vote to not allow the circus to use the ground.

He threatened to file suit, but Rathlos was so certain that no tracks were in his beans that he called police. They got Gerald in jail where tacks in beans are as scarce as pork.

Tennis Net Used for Fishing is Surprise Stunt in North

COBALT, May 19.—With a number of large stoves attached to it, the net at the Seagrim Lake camp of the Cobalt Tennis Club has been restored to "a owners." After having been "owned" by persons at present unknown for use in the adjourning sheet of water, where a limited amount of fishing is carried on from the shore. A gulky conscience is believed to have been the reason for its return after a few days' absence.

The net was found on a piece of rough ground lying between the sidewalk and the courts, and it is thought that the presence in the scrap neighborhood of Provincial Constable Gilbert Kearney had something to do with the reappearance of the club's property. The officer, however, had been making investigation into another matter, and never nothing of the net's disappearance, for although it had been intended to report the theft to him the matter had been overlooked. The net disappeared some days ago, and it was subjected to night hawk been taken by fishermen interesting in the lake. It is worth about $15.; had not been used, and when found was minus the cord

Capital Expenditures Restricted to Barest Necessities by Report

Supervision of Expense Accounts is Recommended in Report of Committee Adopted Today By House of Commons

AUDITING SYSTEM NOT COMPLETED

Report Expresses View That Ample Prudence Not Shown By Directors of Canadian National Railways

Ottawa, Ont., May 20 (Can. Press)—"In view of the results of the past two or three years, your committee strongly recommends that until there is a marked improvement in the earnings of the system, capital expenditures should be limited strictly to the barest necessities, always consistent with efficiency."

This is the first of a series of recommendations of the House of Commons Committee on Railways and Shipping, tabled by R. J. Hanson, (Cons.-York Sudbury) in House of Commons today, respecting Canadian National Railways.

Urging that in view of the rapid decline of operating revenues "The most stringent economy be exercised by the management in all the controllable operating expenditures." The committee expressed itself with respect to executive officers and other salaried officials of the railway, a thorough revision of salaries downward be made."

With regard to the $5,000 a year salary paid to Sir Henry Thornton, president of the C.N.R., the committee's report says:

$5,000 Fee

"It has come to the attention of your committee that the President is still in receipt of additional fees of $5,000 each from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the special annual allowance for expenses not to be specifically accounted for approved by the Board of Directors on Dec. 16, 1929, amounting to $15,000, and your committee recommends that the matter of the receipt of said fee $5,000 shall be again considered by the Board of Directors with a view to its possible cancellation.

"A review of the $15,000 expense allowance of the President by the Board also recommended is inconsistent with the terms of Sir Henry's engagement.

Supervision of Expenses

"A much stricter supervision of all expense accounts of Canadian National officials by a properly constituted committee of directors is further recommended. "A system of control similar to that in vogue in the best regulated industrial houses, finance and other institutions is also required, and your committee earnestly recommend that the Board of Directors forthwith put into effect such effective control as is necessary in the interests of the property says.

Auditing System

"The committee criticises the present method of auditing employed by the system, declaring it to be "not sufficient, and should go much further" and that the auditors be empowered to go into every phase of the system's business. The report says, with power to call attention to any matter calling for comment. In their judgment similar in principle to the powers vested in the Auditor General of Canada.

"The whole transaction connected with leasing of the Bermuda residence of Sir Henry Thornton by the directors of the C.N.R. should be reviewed and investigated by the directors, with a view to ascertaining the legality and if possible declaiming its recitation the report recommends adding.

President's Position

"Having regard to all the evidence adduced and having special regard to the President's contract of engagement dated Sept 23, 1929, and for the full and entire services to be rendered by him from time to time for the fixed annual salary of $75,000, without any extra fees or remuneration of any description, and in accordance with the by-laws, rules and regulations applicable, all expenses paid out of net expenses incurred in connection with the discharge of his office or duties, your committee are of opinion that leasing of the residence proposed to be acquired pursuant to the contract of engagement and even if legal, was unwise and should not have been authorized.

Expense Allowance

"The whole transaction in the opinion of your committee is an unreasonable attempt by board of directors to do indirectly what could not be done directly by expenditure on capital account, namely, to procure a residence for the President free of rent, taxes and repairs, and your committee considers that action of the board of directors in leasing the property may not have exceeded their legal powers, they did not exercise that degree of prudence and judgment requisite in the premises."

SECRETARY OF LIBERALS TAKES COPY

Papers Later Disappeared From Office of D. R. O'Gorman

O'GORMAN UNPAID

Accountant Tells of Financial Dealings of J. Aird Jr.

TORONTO, May 20—(By the Canadian Press)—The missing file of John Aird Jr., which has been in the possession of Harry Johnson, secretary of the Ontario Liberal Association, the Royal Commission on Hydro was told today. And even after Mr. Johnson returned the papers to D. R. O'Gorman, who had turned them over to him, the Liberal official had retained a photostatic copy.

The fyle first became famous during the last session of the Ontario Legislature, when it became known they had been offered to members of the Government for purchase or to newspapers. Later it was obtained by the commission after it was turned over to Sir John Aird.

Found and Presented

Today, however, the disappearing docket was finally placed on. D. R. O'Gorman of Toronto, declared he had found it while searching through some files of his father, the late R. W. Millard, former partner of John Aird and had retained it because he thought it was in the public interest.

He had loaned it over to Mr. Johnson 'in the presence of W. R. Percy Parker, counsel for the Aird, and later had a photostatic copy made and turned that over to Mr. Johnson. Meanwhile, Millard had been giving the docket to Aird's counsel, eventually they disappeared from O'Gorman's Office. He did not know how they left the office, however. Mr. Johnson, had learned of them and offered them for sale to persons he thought would be interested ca n 10 per cent. commission basis.

Received Not One Cent

O'Gorman insisted throughout that he had never received "one cent" for the fyle, and had paid for the photostatic copy himself. The reason he had not turned it over to the Hydro Commission, he said, was because "enough might have been a nigger in the fence there", and he was "suspicious of the Hydro."

A. B. Shepard, Toronto accountant who audited Aird's books, was on the stand for a good share of the morning, outlining the financial transactions in which Aird participated it was true. He admitted, that some of the Aird Mortgage litigation into Beauharnois $60,000 of the $120,000 the Government of Honda which Aird had received from the power Corporation had been kept aside.

How Bonds Used

One million block had been used for hypothecation and for loans, but the other one-half remained for the interest coupons apparently signing government bonds. Before the Ontario enquiry, the coupons from the remaining $60,000 had been cut off the bonds themselves, and his investi-ation had shown that Aird used the bonds for personal purposes.

In all, Aird had collected $10,600 in interest from the bonds at presenting the entire amount of the coupons, government and others for which he had exchanged, the Beauharnois bonds. Only $600 of the entire amount he should have considered had been untraced by the accountant.

Bills Not Traced

He had been unable to trace any of the $50 bills which Aird had received for certain coupons of $1,500 each, he declared and there was nothing in the books to show in possession of the second block of $60,000 until after the Ottawa Investigation.

"If he were holding the block so pregated it would be different as he is holding it for somebody else" said C. J. McNeer, K.C.

"Well, anything is possible," interjected Mr. Justice J. F. Orde, Royal Commissioner.

Aird received $120,000 from the Beauharnois Power Government Bonds, ostensibly for the Conservative Party of Ontario, in 1930, and expended $60,000 of this amount ultimately found its way into the party coffers.

STIRLING FIRE LOSS IS $250

Woodshed of Albert Hammond Burned—House Saved

Stirling, May 20 (Special)—What might have been a disastrous fire occurred at the home of Albert Hammond, Charlotte Street, last night shortly after nine o'clock. In some manner the woodshed of the house caught fire and had not the neighbors been on the alert for the evening visiting a neighbor, gone to the well for a pail of water, the spacious home would have been destroyed. The loss would have been heavy, but as an ordinary house, for Mr. Hammond, who contracts a wholesale fruit, confectionery business, had a quantity of goods in the house at the time. The loss is estimated at $250 and fully covered by insurance. Mr. Hammond had retired when Mrs. Hammond arrived home and on her way to the well she heard a crackling noise and saw flames shooting from pouches. She immediately gave the alarm but due to the strong wind the flames did not arrive promptly and the bucket brigade formed did not make headway for a time. The fire however the pumps were working and the fire brought under control.

DUMP WORKER ALMOST HIT BY BULLET

Boys Shooting Within Limits to Be Prosecuted

Some young boy or boys with a 22 rifle, possibly imbued with the idea that the city workers who have been levelling the city dump are not suddenly turned wild Indian, and are taking pot shots at them, narrowly missing their immediate removal via the bullet, have been reported, it is believed, pot shots at the men in a dispute. Who they are the police would like to find out as an example would be made of them. It is strictly against the law for any one to fire a gun or rifle within the city limits and warnings have been broadcast to the boys of today that they will be taken of taking pot shots around the dump. Prosecutions, however, might be taken by the police when the culprits hunters are apprehended. Yesterday no shots were reported being hit by a flying bullet or by a fraction of an inch.

Crime in United States Not Brought by Prohibition But by Lack of Enforcement

Message Given to Convention By Mrs. D. L. Calvin

PRIZE AWARDS

"It is not Prohibition, that has brought crime to the United States but the lack of enforcement of the prohibition laws" declared Mrs. D. L. Calvin, President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of New York State at the W.C.T.U. county convention in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last evening. Mrs. Calvin, a woman of forceful and magnetic personality delivered a striking address on the conditions now existing in the United States under the prohibition laws. Mrs. John Warriner of Napanee, vice president of the organization was in the chair.

Mrs. Calvin defining intemperance as having to do with the relation of man and demand being concerned with the teaching of total abstinence, the effects of alcohol and with the reclaiming of drunkards, said that the term was not synonymous with prohibition. The latter deals directly not with the habits but with the liquor traffic and is a government project. As members of the Christian church the women of the W.C.T.U. in the United States are interested chiefly in moral reform dealing with the liquor habit, while as members and citizens of a great republic feel their duty toward the body politic in outlawing the liquor traffic and commerce.

Prohibition Triumphs

Statisticians of the "wet" party have announced, that prohibition has lessened drinking in the United States thirty-five per cent. Government control in Canada has decreased drinking and if prohibition is properly enforced it has also decreased the use of alcohol to that extent, it was a matter of triumph, declared Mrs. Calvin. Mrs. Calvin discussed the straw vote of the Literary Digest, which she said proved nothing as the majority of the ballots were not returned. "The wets can win any straw ballot they please" laughed Mrs. Calvin as long as the drys continue to win real election and real ballots".

Lack of proper enforcement of prohibition, Mrs. Calvin said, is one of public officials who take toll from the organized crime who responsible for the crime in the United States," said Mrs. Colvin who stated, that it was the low exceedingly wealthy men who own breweries and with the people them and profit by the traffic, who are crying beer to save taxes."

"The Women's Christian Temperance Union is the greatest temperance organization in America. We are not going to compromise against the return of the liquor traffic but we don't believe it will ever come back."

Miss Gardiner expressed the appreciation of the audience. The meeting last evening had been opened by devotional exercises by Rev. R. Kennedy, Dr. R. H. Bell, Rev. J. S. McMullen and a sing song led by Miss Pearsall. Enjoyable entertainment throughout the evening included a vocal solo by Mrs. G. H. Stobie, and splendid readings by contest participants, Verna Walmsley, Annie Collins, Vera Mason, Senior contestants, and Rob Annis, Hazel Hartley, Ruth Simpson and Jean Thompson, junior contestants. SHELTER WARD MAKES ESCAPE

Was Being Detained to Be Taken to Alexandra School

A ward of the Children's Shelter for some two years, disappeared from the institution early this morning.

The ward had been locked in the detention room last night due to the fact, that she was to have been taken to the Industrial School for girls in Toronto today. When the matron in charge went to release the girl this morning the room was empty and the lock on the door had been broken. It is the opinion of the officials that the girl left early this morning and not last night. The method employed to break the lock on the door without being heard is still a mystery.

AUTO CRASHES DOWN SIX IN WILD CAREER

Father Struck But Hurls Children Out of Danger

DRIVER ARRESTED

Three Children, Three Adults in Hospital, Four Seriously Injured

Toronto, May 20—Six persons were injured, four seriously, when an automobile driver lost control of his machine at Manor Road and Boynton Avenue last night.

Bewildered by another auto speeding toward him and by the sight of a man stepping in his path, the driver, Robert J. Porter, 40, motorist of two months' experience, turned his car sharply across the curb on Manor Road east and completely lost control as his car careened on a terrifying ride over a wide across the intersection of Boynton Avenue, striking down six persons in its course, including a baby lying in its carriage.

Porter, who resides on Hillsdale Avenue east, was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence.

In private cars and police ambulances the injured were rushed to the emergency departments of the Toronto General and the Hospital for Sick Children.

Those injured are:

Marian Long, nine years old, of 16 Manor Road; fractured skull, lacerations to both legs, and abdomen.

George Sidney Campbell, 40, of 64 Hillsdale Avenue east, concussion; head lacerations, and compound fracture of right leg.

Mrs. Elvie Campbell, 35, same address, bruises and shock.

Screams of onlookers and victims rang along the street, while the uncontrolled auto travelling eastward, rods cruelly in a wide, pushed over a small bush, swerved out to strike a young tree, crossed the intersection of Boynton Avenue and mounted the sidewalk again. It swept down two more, a woman and three children.

First witnesses say, it smashed into the little stroller baby carriage, shattering it. By a miracle, the child, Robert Campbell escaped with his life; and nothing more serious than a head laceration.

Next it struck Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and continued on its way to mow down the two nine-year-old girls, Marian Day and Dorothy McWilliam. Marian was directly in the newest auto's path but Dorothy was just hit a glancing blow.

Continuing on its way, the auto struck down William Johnson who barely managed to save his two children, walking with him, by shoving them out of the way.

Donald Perrincief, of 23 Boynton Avenue, a ten-year-old boy who was playing ball about 50 yards away said he "saw people flying through the air" as the auto pursued its relentless course.

Miss Bernice Doyle, of 403 Manor Road east, was just walking over the lawn of a house on Manor Road when she saw the auto bearing down on her.

"I took one look at it and ran. That's all I could do. It looked as though it was going wild," she said.

Charles Gilmartin, 53, of 657 Dovercourt Avenue, was a passenger in Porter's car. He described his reactions last night.

"The car was coming at us fast from the other direction. I said: 'Look out, Bob!' and then I screened myself; I pushed my foot against the floor board and pushed the side. I thought sure I was going to be killed. Then we turned over the sidewalk and everything went black. I don't know what happened after that."

Dorothy McWilliam, who was not badly hurt, said she and Marian Day were walking along the south side of Manor Road toward Mount Pleasant.

"I saw the car coming at us. It looked as though it was going in circles. I tried to dodge it but I couldn't."

Detectives William Coleman and W. Craddock arrived at the scene of the car, and Gilmartin, the passenger, over to North Toronto police station. Gilmartin stated that Porter had no driver's permit. He had a chauffeur's permit but there was no experienced or licensed driver with him. He was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence, and late last night was released on bail.

The detectives stated that Porter's story was that he was uncertain of when he saw the westbound auto coming toward him and the pedestrian stepping from the curb into his path. He screwed up over the wheel to avoid them, and then lost control.

RAZE FACTORY BY EXPLOSION A LARGE LOSS

Milk Plant Destroyed, One Employee Fatally Hurt

VILLAGE SAVED

Second Blast Blows Up Wall as Volunteers Toil

Courtland, May 20—An explosion which occurred in a powdered milk-house resulted in the destruction by fire of the plant here of Deinick Products, Limited, and injured a workman so seriously that he died later last night.

Damage that will exceed $100,000 was done before a volunteer brigade quelled the blaze.

Charles Lee was working in the powdered-milk box when the sudden blast occurred. Flames instantly enveloped the room in which the box was located. Logan struggled through the flames to the street and collapsed, his clothing completely burned from his body.

Thirteen other workmen in the building at the time escaped unscathed.

Logan was hurried to Tillsonburg Hospital, five miles distant. He was 36, married, and the father of three children.

Plant in Flames

Flames were seen sweeping the length of the plant, constructed three years ago and when the volunteer firemen realized it was doomed, they turned their attention to saving a row of nine houses on the opposite side of a narrow street. Water from the mains in the vicinity was passed in buckets, from hand to hand to douse the houses, and the efforts of the human chain were successful.

Shortly after the original blast, believed due to spontaneous combustion, a second and heavier explosion occurred and the east wall of the building crashed into the street like matchwood. Four other lesser explosions shook the village and sent the volunteer fire fighters scurrying to safety.

A number of Canadian National Railways box cars on the plant siding were run up in the flames.

The destroyed plant was a subsidiary of the City Dairy Company of Toronto, and was owned by the Borden Milk Company of New York.

TRAVELING MAN ENDORSES ALL-BRAN

Says It Brought Relief From Constipation

"I want to take this unsolicited means to tell you what ALL-BRAN has done for me.

"I am on the road all the time, and this has a tendency to constipate me, or any one who travels all the time. I used to suffer a great deal from constipation, until some one told me about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating this cereal I have almost cured my constipation. I heartily endorse it to any one suffering as I did."—Mr. B. F. Pollard. (Address on request.)

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines, Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN provides both. At the same time, it supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Being a natural corrective ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming.

How much better than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—serious cases, with every meal. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green packages. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

CHILD SAVED BY TEACHER

Clings to Coat of Claimant Until Principal Arrives

Kingston, May 20—Police last night arrested a man on a charge of assault had been laid against Dr. R. J. M. Montgomery, dental surgeon of Toronto, who it is claimed yesterday endeavoured to carry off seven year old Joyce Pitchett, who previously said to be his daughter or his niece, from a class room at Victoria School. But for the action of Miss Elizabeth Hutchinson, teacher in the primary class attended by the little girl, it is stated that the school doctor would have been successful. Dr. Montgomery, who lives on Bridgeman Road, Toronto, was accompanied by a woman.

According to the story told at the school, the man, who had a woman companion with him, entered the classroom door and asked for Joyce Pitchett. The teacher answered the door and called the child who went to the door, but the child said she did not know the man and did not want to go with them. She returned to her desk, and when the man asked Miss Smith, she says to allow him and his companion to have the child, stating that he was her uncle. The teacher refused his request, and, it is claimed, the man strode to the seat in which the child was sitting, picked her up in his arms and started for the door. The teacher clung to the coat of the stranger, and sought to get possession of the child.

She called to a boy to run to Principal J. O. Ettinger's room and summon him. Mr. Ettinger responded at once, stopped the man and took the child from him.

The child has been living with Mr. and Mrs. Pitchett, 300 University Avenue, since she was six months old, it is stated. They arrived at the school and took charge of the little one, no police action has been taken, as the man and woman left the school after the tailored attempt to take the child failed.

LOSES FINGERS IN SAW MILL

Cobourg, May 20—Dr. George M. Ferris, of Cobourg, lost the first and second fingers of his right hand in a saw at a planing mill yesterday in Port Hope, and although George Rorabeck, planing mill employee, sawing up some wood, which the doctor had brought in. When he attempted to pick up the pieces, Dr. Ferris accidently thrust his fingers into the saw, losing two at the middle joint.

PROGRAMME IS ARRANGED FOR THE CEREMONY

General Meeting is Well Attended and Plans Formulated

DATE MAY 24

Wives or Mothers of Those Who Fell Will Unveil Memorial

A meeting of those interested in making the coming unveiling of the Belleville War Memorial a success, was held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms last evening. Some twenty-five men and women, from various organizations were present to discuss semi-formulated plans, offer suggestions or approve of what had already been done.

Lt.-Col. Barragar acted as chairman for the evening and was later asked to be marshall of the parade Tuesday morning next. He and Major R. J. Gilmour, will have charge of the parade and making the necessary arrangements concerning it. Major R. D. Penton, M.C., will have charge of the arrangements at Memorial Park. Reign Calvert offered the necessary chairs for the seating of some attending the ceremony.

It is suggested that the wives or mothers of those whose names appear on the monument will perform the unveiling met with general approbation. A notice is being published in the paper extending a special invitation to all next of kin to attend. A space is to be reserved for them adjacent to the monument. Ushers and guides assigned to those who will perform the ceremony.

O.S.D. to Attend

Last evening during the meeting, word was received from the Ontario School for the Deaf that they would have a party of 150 in uniform present. From the other schools of the city will come word of the hearty co-operation of principals and teachers and from present indications some 2500 boys and girls from these sources will be on hand. The final details of the parade have not been made but the arrangement will be given publicity on Saturday or Monday next.

Programme Complete

A programme for the ceremony, as outlined in part below, met with the approval of those present and will doubtless remain unchanged.

To make the day, May 24th, 1932, a success needs only the hearty backing of all the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to assemble at Memorial Park on the morning of that day. Many have already seen the monument and are impressed with its beauty. Others recently from the city have visited other localities, when they have done honor and reverence to their dead, and can and it remains now for residents in Belleville to be present in force, as the National Emblem falls from the monument and reveals the names of the 136 Belleville men who fell for King, Country and Humanity in the Great War of 1914-1918.

Esskaye, Successor to Klan is Presented by Ex-Kleagle

Predicts Great Things For Mystic Brotherhood

Chicago, May 20. — Ex-Kleagle Clarke of the ex-Ku Klux Klan presented for America's edification last night his super successor in the Esskaye Mystic Brotherhood, a mysterious Esskaye, Inc.

This Ex-Kleagle in private life is Col. Edward Young Clarke, genial, somewhat little man, who, Atlanta, Ga., whose extraordinary organizing ability made the Klan one of the phenomena of its day. The Esskaye will be even a greater phenomenon, said the Colonel, "in its powerful force for good in American life."

As soon as he gets enough members at $10 for a charter member, the Ex-Kleagle continued, Esskaye will begin to function on "four great fronts."

It will raise the price of agricultural products, he said, cut government expense and taxes 50 per cent, each, see to it that the phrase, "In God We Trust," remains on all American coins, and turns atheists into church-goers if humanly possible.

Clarke presented the program of Esskaye at the Medinah Athletic Club, where all citizens who had enough money for a ticket, ate the chicken and asparagus while he expounded on "the great, powerful, free-flowing movement to put the great middle class back in the saddle where it belongs."

Esskaye is a lodge of fellowship, he explained, for white and black and brown, for Jew, Catholic and Christian. It is based on the number "7", with the Bible, seven stars, crossed swords and other paraphernalia taking, part in its seven degrees.

ON HUNGER STRIKE.

Victoria, B.C., May 20.—Led by a 10-year-old girl, the seven children of the Sons of Freedom quartered in the British Columbia Protestant Orphanage here went on a hunger strike. Attendants at the institution quickly suppressed the strike by removing the 10-year-old youngster from the room where the other six were refusing to eat. Once their leader was out of sight the others went to work with zest, and consumed everything placed before them.

GRANT TO OLYMPICS.

Ottawa, May 20.—The Canadian government will make a grant of $10,000 to help defray the expenses of the Canadian Olympic team, it was learned officially, last night. The fact that no item appeared in the supplementary estimates led to fears being expressed that the money would not be provided.

BARBERS CUT PRICES.

Galt, May 20.—Citizens who visited barber shops yesterday learned that the prices of hair-cutting and shaving had dropped. The standard price for haircutting in the city is now 25 cents, a 10-cent reduction, and shaves are 15 cents, a 5-cent decline.

PARKING

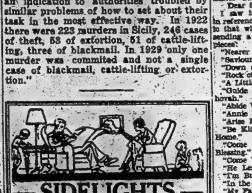
While the parking question is to the fore, the suggestion has been made to the Ontario Intelligencer that the present back rear of Front Street buildings could be well used for parking of small numbers of customers' cars, especially on Saturdays, a citizen noted that three or four cars use a small yard on Saturdays and the permission to park there is greatly appreciated by the customers who are largely visitors to the city.

The use of the yards will mean some cleaning up but the clearing of these yards is necessary any way under the health and fire bylaws and the removal of unwanted articles which clutter a back yard is desirable from the standpoint of appearance's sake. This would take but little time and require little expense and the merchants would there be able to accommodate appreciative customers who are much more in the purchasing mood than intending buyers who have finally found a haven to park after a hunt up and down the serried ranks of cars on the main streets.

While the special committee of the city council is at work on the parking question, the possibility of additional parking space may be canvassed no doubt with the problem of fitting up a large parking space in various places. Anything elaborate would cost some money but the merchants individually could help the committee by making their own backyards parking spaces, these citizens claim.

PRAIRIES' OUTLOOK

The prairie outlook is brightening according to reports from the west. Drought added to the burden of the depression for two or three years has made conditions unusually difficult for the farmers and city dwellers but the past winter being more normal as to moisture the work of the farmer looks likely to bear greater rewards. Land which was tilled will have been filled with water and the prospects for a crop of good proportions appear. While the outlook is for a somewhat higher price for wheat and other grain, even if the price does not advance, yet the west looks for a brightening with the movement of the consequent employment and consumption of railway crews which have been idle. This is a sign of the confidence and cheerfulness so much desired and long absent of the first evidences of the dawn of better days for not only the prairies but the whole of the country.



A diversity teaches lessons if men will only see them and follow them and the west doubtless will take advantage of the shortcomings which have been pointed out to it.

The Western Canadian has borne his ills with a cheer which is the proud possession of the Anglo-Saxon and which should be emulated by the resident of other parts of Canada.

SUPPRESSING MAFIA

"Criminal activities in the United States have concentrated universal attention on the ways of the underworld, secret societies, criminal bosses and lawlessness in general," says Hamilton Spectator. "Though it would be unjust to say that these illicit organizations — which make their living by preying on society, kidnapping, blackmailing, thieving, racketeering and even burdering—are composed entirely of the foreign element, it is undoubtedly the case that the majority of the members, and especially the ringleaders, are of alien extraction. One hears of vendettas, the Black Hand, etc., in connection with the methods of terrorism adopted are similar to the operations of the secret societies of the old countries. Without taking account of the origin, rise and—as is hoped—the decline of the Mafia has been practiced by Signor Cesare Mori, the famous Palermo, who has carried on a most courageous and successful fight against the Mafia in Sicily. He describes the movement as a 'special mode of feeling, thinking and acting which, through a psychic affinity, brings together certain persons who have certain evil dispositions tending them in society as in a cage.' Signor Mori refers to the 'very bad foreign governments before the unity of Italy,' which were unable to suppress brigandage and defend the citizens. Under these circumstances, the Sicilians took means of defending themselves against secret societies. Apart from the Mafia, which lived, like the American racketeers, on extortion, violence and murder. The people were so terrorized that they never dared to inform on the culprits, even when they were known.

"Signor Mori has done, perhaps, more than any other man to curb the activities of these terrorists. His success should be an indication to authorities troubled by similar problems of how to set about their task in the most effective way. In 1922 there were 223 murders in Sicily, 246 cases of theft, 85 of extortion, 53 of cattle-lifting, three of blackmail. In 1929 only one murder was committed and not a single case of blackmail, cattle-lifting or extortion."

RETICENCE

By Alice Michaelis

No other sound in all the world I hear,
No song of sea, no lilt of mating birds,
Can ever to my ear be half so dear
As is the music of your tender words;
For with your words you feed my hungry heart
And give me strength to face the world alone.
With drafts of cheer they only can impart,
Your precious words that are as brave as you!
But sweeter yet, your rapt and silent moods
When to your spirit, far withdrawn I steal;
For I can read in those still interludes
The tender thoughts your musing eyes reveal.
I prize your every message, grave or gay,
But hold most dear the words you never say!

JOURNALISM IN THE UNITED STATES has descended to the depths—from its high Fourth Estate days of Horace Greeley and Dana and Bennett, to Walter Winchell recorder of births before they happen, author of bedroom feminine stories, "rankling to the altar," and other idiotic vulgarities—and other so-called "columnists" who compare themselves to "Pepys, but instead of tea to Bea," practise "So to a Nightclub, a stew on synthetic alcohol," and an earful of dirt about dirty people. And all about this nation hailed Prohibition way where all is phony except the bright lights, and even these blush for the bologney which is served visitors with the champagne, bootlegger, caviar and champagne. Some racket! and they're still selling Brooklyn Bridge, not the messy new version but the original which is in Park Row to make it easy for morning newspaper workers to glide over the water to their homes in Brooklyn. CLEAN UP, PAINT UP, and working dollars for working men, means a brighter and better Belleville. A movement of sorts has already been made by public spirited citizens who have painted store fronts, verandahs and homes, besides laying out lawns and flower beds and the citizens who join in the movement to clean up, paint up, plant flowers and make this city one of the finest in Canada, are the best cities in Canada, justifying the slogan of "Beautiful Belleville" the more progressive and prosperous city will this be. Mayor Tice and Chairman Ellis of the Parks Board are right in favor of the movement and no doubt will clean up and paint up city property. The Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis Club have approved of the movement and no doubt will show the way by brightening up their own business places and homes with paint and flowers and lawns and lovely lawns. Let's get busy on house cleaning and general brightening up about the home and premises. Give work to the women and men, who cab be secured by phoning to Major Lorne Green, Dominion Employment Agent, phone 887. Spend a dollar spent upon your property adds two dollars to the value of your property, besides giving work to citizens who need it thus contributing to the prosperity and happiness of all.

Bishop Samuel Wilberforce once found his match when he rebuked a clergyman of his diocese for fox-hunting, urging that it indicated worldliness. The clergyman retorted that he did not think it a bit more worldly than attending a ball at the Blenheim Palace, as the Bishop had done. His lordship explained that, though he was staying in the house at the time, he was never within three rooms of the dancing. "Oh, if it comes to that," said the clergyman, "I am never within three fields of a hound."

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

I saw in your paper an article in reference to some of the old tunes that will never grow old and I am sending a list of some of the old pieces:

"Nearer My God to Thee."
"Saviour Pilot Me."
"Down at the Cross."
"Rock of Ages."
"A Little Talk With Jesus."
"Guide Me O Thou Great Jehovah."
"Abide With Me."
"Annie Laurie."
"Arise My Soul, Arise."
"He Kind to the Loved Ones at Home."
"Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing."
"Come Ye Disconsolate."
"He Leadeth Me."
"I'm But a Pilgrim Here."
"In the Street Bye and Bye."
"My Faith Looks up to Thee."
"My Old Kentucky Home."
"The Old Gospel Ship."
"Rest for the Weary."
"Oh Turn Ye Ye for Why Will Ye Die."
"Time is Winging Us Away."

In singing these old pieces that go to the heart it edifies the soul. Classical music is all right in its place, but it does not go to the heart like the old tunes.

Will you please put this in print and oblige

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay, Dee.)

AN OPEN LETTER—

"You write about everything—let me give you a little information. Mr. and Mrs. F. Burns of 7260 East Grand Blvd., Detroit, in a letter, to Bellevillians.

"For eight years I have been away from Belleville, and have been having a trip back there. I have a good time, but there is one item I omitted to my list which almost prohibits me from going back—the change happening of the city with the utility of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, which is sent me, with great regularity, and the personal items which appear, and particularly the little local out of the way things which your "Heard on the Street" column supplies. The changes that are happening I have particularly appealed to me, and I have been interested and will give some of your out of town readers a break and write some of the changes happening on Front Street? It is not necessary to wait for the annual visit to the old town any time, with a recording of the simple things, for the city is greatly appreciated by many of us and am sure I speak correctly for those great maple trees throughout the city started to leaf yet——but the men of various departments still dig up the paving in the main sections, looking for leaks in this and that.....How, does Victoria Park look—and the harbor....How many new stores are there in the business section.....And does the Wharf Dancing Pavilion Club still hold nightly sway in the clubhouse....?"

It's been a long time since you packed your club bag, Mr. Burns, and moved out of town, but the old town has changed considerably ahead with the rest of them. True there have been many changes, but the changes you will notice mostly when you eventually visit the city will be the changes among the people you used to know. They have grown up, got married, moved away, and do not state your age, but you write of the old haunts and corners you used to know will have disappeared. There will be new buildings and new gasoline stations in their place. A few of the well remembered old time boys will be found who can still spare the time to have a game of golf on an evening, but the rest of them are too busy making as much as a sidewalk glance. That will probably hurt, but after some years you will become used to the busy hurrying crowd who mill around the four corners of the intersection and you used to go to school with. How they have a ruddy cheeked little boys and girls in the third and fourth grade in newer and modern schools now built, you'll probably raise your hat to some old school mate, but he's always in a hurry and too hurry by. She hasn't recognized you as quickly as you her, and then you'll feel lonesome and alone. You'll be thinking where you do know somebody. You'll buy your cigars from some clerk in a new fangled store, he'll smile at you, but then he would to an American tourist, too. You'll wander out onto the sidewalk again. Strangers, all of them. Here's a man—probably you'll know somebody in here. Eight years isn't so much. Isn't it! Not a soul in there you knew—it you left the city. Even the cliffs' name on the window. Where have they all gone! Belleville has indeed changed.

Here come a someone you know.... You walk over with a smile of recognition for an old friend, as he attempts to hurry by after a city and Dunn in your direction. He takes your extended hand. He smiles dubiously. He mumbles something audibly about the weather, or something, and is off down the road wondering all the time what the handshaking in all about. He wonders if you have been out of town. Then he asks you if you have been. You haven't been anywhere.

Down along the worn sidewalks of Front you walk a while and there are the four corners that you have been reading about. The city and District news of the paper you've been getting. Most accidents getting around but been happening there, you remember. Here's a new policeman in your direction. He takes your extended hand. He rambles straight ahead. Says that new cement bridge there has been so much a help. Then he asks if someone you thought you knew—but it isn't. Anyhow you're afraid to take a chance and you pass on. Here's a gasoline station on that corner.... The Mayor of the city hurries by, but you didn't even recognize him. Even he is a new Mayor to you.... That building on the south east corner of Front and Bridge—that used to be bank when you left town.... It's the office of the Income Tax Department. The old man who smiles down at you to reassure you that you are really in Belleville. It hasn't changed yet, thank goodness! But, you can't see the river anymore and it's gone in the brickwork.... Soon,it too, will have to be made over and

BISONS NOT RELEGATED TO SECOND HOLE

Now Only a Half Game Removed From Top Rung

BEAT REDWINGS

Truett Sewell of Leafs Outpitches Sullivan to Win

(By the Associated Press)

Ray Schalk's Buffalo Bisons, picked for a second division team in pre-season International League prognostications, refuse absolutely to seek the level forecast for them by the dope-sheets.

They're already gone through the experience of one slump and yet today were only half a game removed from the league leading Newark Bears.

Behind excellent pitching by Joe Bloomer, the Bisons turned back the Rochester Red Wings yesterday 11 to 3 while Newark was having a little embarrassed by the loss of a 10-inning ball game to the lowly Reading Keys 8-6.

Bloomer scattered Rochester's 8 hits and spent an enjoyable afternoon after his team mates shelled Del Weiland and Jim Weaver for eight runs in the first two innings. Buck Crouse's homer with two on was the highlight of a first inning five run splurge. One of Bloomer's lofty balls was a pinch home run by Bill Wyrong in the eighth. Weiland's Pinchhit single in the 30th consecutive game.

Homer Won

Doc Leggett's homer with two on and two out in the 10th gave Reading its surprise victory over Newark. Barnhart's home run with one on in the eighth had previously given the Bears the slimmest margin on Reading's tie.

The result is the Keys although walloped for 13 hits.

Travis Stone outpitched Charlie Stallard as Toronto nosed out the Montreal Royals 4-3. After his team mates had given him a 4-0 lead in the eighth, however, Stewart weakened and had to be replaced by Guy Cantrell with three Maple Leaf runs already in stake and with the tying and winning runs on base and none out. Cantrell promptly retired the side without further damage.

Charley Perkins pitched and batted his way to a 6-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the first night game of the season.
